THANKSGIVING DAY thed anit that id Dick a Globe-orry the reto sell pair of this be-lans, was a toes to bangs cures di-inem! It making e's neck six feet ing of a a v a Sara-with as daughte gum. To fill at $1 a ast have addise to am in-ustrious Our first to have Instead ally he is the pro-he commended in the con-was 128 necy of see one of for our an who tall hat, With graterul hearts let all give thanks. All lands, all stations, and all ranks: And the cry comes up along the way, For what shall we give thanks to-day? For peace and plenty, busy mills, "The cattle on a thousand hills," For bursting barns, wherein is stored The golden grain, a precious hoards Give thanks!

For orchards bearing rosy fruit, For yielding pod and toothsome root, And all that God declared was good In hill or dale, or field or wood: Give thanks!

For water bright and sweest and clear, A million fountains far and near, For gracious streamlets, lakes, and rills That flow from everlasting hills: Give thanks!

For summer dews an i timely frost, The sun's bright beams, not one ray lost, For willing hands to sow the seed And reap the harvest, great indeed: Give thanks!

For hearth and home—love's altar fires-For loving children, thoughtful sires; For ten ler mothers, gentle wives, Who fill our hearts and bless our lives: Give thanks?

For heavers care, life's journey through,
For health and strength to dare, and do,
For ears to hear, for eyes to see
Earth's beauteous things on lan I and sea:

Give thanks!

—M. A. Kidder.

BESSIE'S THANKSGIVING.

browned of being a ear Boise, of men the law moe and e entered fell out as dashed drawned.

employ-nich are are 500 e at the es of the @ $ 79

2 25

1 50

79@ $3 55 72

YARDS.

50 to 4 75 50 to 3 00 1) to 5 25

kind face, though, pleasant, gentle. She was dressed in a worn dark gows. The net fichu, crossed over her slender shoulders, was elasped by an old-fashioned medallion.

"To-morrow will be Thanksgiving-eve," she said; "I wished to know if I might prepare for the day after."

An originally handsome apartment, this in which the old man sat, and it had been handsomely furnished. Now both the room and its belongings bore the mark of creeping poverty, or extreme penuriousness. The master of the house, seated by the center table, seemed to share the character of the room. He, too, had been handsome once. Now he was expressive only of age and indigence, from the threadbare collar of his limp dressing-gown to the tips of his thin and shabby slippers.

"Prepare what?" he growled.

"Why a turkey, sir; or a pie, or—or a bit of cranberry-sauce, sir—"
He looked so fierce, her words died in her throat.

He looked so fierce, her words died in her throat.

"Turkey! And where do you suppose! can get the money to spend on turkey? And pie! To make us all sick, and bring doctors and doctors' bills down on me! And," with a sniff of disgust, "cranberry sauce—the skinny stuff! No, Mrs. Dotty. A bit of bacon and some bread will be good enough for poor folks like us—good eaough."

His housekeeper, for that was the unenviable position Mrs. Dotty occupied in Godfrey Kirke's household, resolved to make one last appeal.

"OII, COME IN. COME IN!" HE CRIED.

"But I thought perhaps on account of the child," she began.
"The child—the child!" he repeated, frascibly, "I'm sick of hearing about her."

Indignation made Mrs. Dotty quite bold for once.

Indignation made Mrs. Dotty quite bold for once.

"She's your own granddaughter, sir."
That's what she is."

"Well, I didn't ask for her, did If I never wanted to adopt her. What right had her mother to make such a poor hand of herself by marrying Tom Barrett, and then come beack to die here, and leave me her girl? Eh? She's an expense, I tell you; tust's all. An expense!"

"The Lord help us, but he's getting worse than ever!" murmured the woman, as, with a bang that was downright disrespectful, she slammed the door behind her.

"You—you, Miss Bessie!"

She started, as she looked up, and saw Bessie Barrett standing so near her. She was a slim, brown-haired little thing, of shout seventeen. She was clad in an ill-made gown of coarse maroon cashmere. Her eyes were large, gray, just now very sorrowful. Her lashes and brows were quite black. The delicate features had a pinched look, and the pretty lips were paler than should be the lips of one so young.

"Yes; and I—heard."

"Oh, don't—don't mind, devr!" said Mrs. Dotty, soothingly, putting a hand that looked like winkled ivory on the girl's arm. "He is just a cross, soured, lonely old man."

"I do mind!" Bessia passionately cried. "Oh, I do! I sha'n't stay here! I sha'n't be an expense to him any longer. I will go away some where!"

She broke down in a fit of bitter weeping.

weeping.

"Now, Miss Bessie, dear, you musta't cry that way; you really musta't. I loved your mother before you, and I love cry that way; you really musta's. I loved your mother before you, and I love you."

But the poor, little, old comforter was almost crying herself.
Years before, the Kirkes were the people of wealth and position in that part of the country. But one trouble after another had come upon the house. First, the wife of the master died. Maud, the daughter, married a man whose only crime was poverty. He was a frail, scholarly man, quite unfitted for a fierce strungle against adverse fortune. He fell ill and died. A year later his wife followed him, leaving their calid to its grandfather, Godfrey Kirke. To the latter had come the final blow when his only son Robert, his hope and pride, had run away to sea. Then in the house, which since the death of the mistress had been a cheerless and dreary place, began a rigid reign of misorliness and consequent misery.

Bessie broke from her friend and ran upstairs and into her own little bare room. There was no fire in the grate, though the day was cold with the penetrating damp of a wind from off the ocean. She went to the window and stood there looking out across the flat brown marshes, to where the waters tossed, greenish and turbulent.

"A horrid day," she said, with a shiver, "but it can't be worse out than in."

shiver, "but it can't be worse out than in."

She put on a short old Astrahan jacket, a little felt hat and a pair of much-mended cloth gloves. Then she went quickly down and out.

The dusk, the dreary November dusk, was filling the room when the old man, plodding over his accounts, laid down his pencil and rang the bell. Mrs. Dotty responded. Mr. Kirke kept but one other servant (if Mrs. Dotty could correctly be termed a servant), and she absolutely refused to enter the protesting presence of her master.

"Tea!"

"Yes, sir."

The meek housekeeper withdrew.
Ten minutes later she brought in a tray on which were tea, bread, butter, two cups, two saucers and two plates. Mr. Kirke poured out his tea, shook a little of the sugar he was about to use back in the old silver bowl, added carefully a few drops of milk and cut a slice of bread.

"Butter has gone up three cents in the tew drops of milk and cut a slice of bread.

"Butter has gone up three cents in the last week," he said. "I can't afford to use butter."

So he munched his bread dry, with a sense of exaltation in his self-imposed penance. He would not open the poorhouse-door for himself by using butter. But, somehow, the rank tea tasted ranker then usual. Surely the bread was sour. And the gloom outside the small circle that the lamplight illumined seemed singularly dense. What was different? He paused, his hand falling by his side. The child—as he and Mrs. Dotty had always called her—the child was not here. She used to slip in so quietly, take her seat, and when her ineager supper was over, glide away just as softly. Yes, little as he noticed her, she was generally there. He rang the bell sharply.

"Where is she?" he asked Mrs. Dotty, when she wonered in her mild all bety.

"Did you see Miss Bessie?"
"Yes'm. Passin? westward a couple of hours ag>—yes'm."
"Oh!"

Mrs. Dotty breathed a relieved sigh.
Bessie had probably gone to Rose Dever's house. The Devers lived almost a mile away. As a storm was blowing up she would most likely stay there over night.
About ten o clock Mr. Kirke's bell

About ten o'clock Mr. Kirke's bell again tingled out. Again Mrs. Dotty appeared before him.

"Has the child come in?"

smoky, blinding fog, began to creep up from the Atlantic.

"If you don't mind," said Mrs. Dotty, making her appearance with a shawl over her head, "I'll just run over to Devers' and see what is keeping Miss Bessie."

"Pol" he answered.

She had spoken as if the distance were not worth considering, but it was quite a journey for her. When she returned she looked white and scared.

"She isn't there.—hasn't been."
"Hark!" said Godfrey Kirke, holding up one lean hand.
"That is only the carrier with the flour."

"That is only the carrier with the flour."

"Ask him if he has seen her?"
Mrs. Dotty went into the hall. Almost instantly she returned.

"He has not. He says there is the body of a young woman at the town morgue."

"What!"
Godfrey Kirke leaped from his chair.
"He says that the body of a young gril was found in the East Branch to-day."
Godfrey Kirke sank back in his seat. Mrs. Dotty smiled a hard little smile to herself as she closed the door and went away. Sue knew how many friends Bessie had. She shrewdly suspected if she were not found at one place she would be at another; and she was maliciously and pleasantly conscious that she had given the hard-hearted old man a genuine scare.

had given the hard-hearted old man a genuine scare.

Long the latter sat where she had left him. Thinking, For the first time in years he was thinking, sodly, seriously, solemnly. Than sgiving-evel In his wife's time the house used to be gay and cheerful on that night, so filled with comfort and height anticipations, so odorous with the homely fragrance of good things in the kitchen, so delightfully merry with the brisk bustle attendant on the morrow's festivity. Now it was desolate, dreary, darksome with depressing and unutterable gloom. Whose fault was iff Hisl decided Golfrey Kirke, as savagely relentless to himself in this moment as he would have been to another. Hisl

HE HAD THE WEAPON IN HIS HAND

when his devoted wife had drooped and died under his ever-increasing arrogance, dictation. His! when Maud married the first man who offered himself, to escape from her father's pretty rule. His! when Robert ran away to escape the narrow obligations and unjust restrictions laid upon him. His! when the child his dead daughter had left him could no longer endure his brutality, or accept from him the scant support he so gradgingly gave. His fault—all his! In those lonely hours the whole relentless truth dawned upon him, as such truths will dawn, in most bitter brilliance. He dropped his head on his hands with a groan.

He looked around the dim stables.

dropped his head on his hands with a stream bell sharply.

"Where is she?" he asked Mrs. Dotty, when she popped in her mild old head. There was no need to particularize. Mrs. Dotty cast a swift, searching look arourd.

"Isn't she here?"

Without waiting for a reply, she turned and ran up the stairs to Bessie's room. There she knocked. No answer. She opened the door, work in. The room was empty.

Hastily she descended the stairs.

"She is gat in, sir."

"Where is she?"

"Impatiently Godfrey Kirke pushed his chair back from the table.

"You ought to know; it's your business to know. But it doesn't matter in the least."

Down to Hanna in the kitchen went Mrs. Dotty.

"Did you see Miss Bessie?"

deformation his hands with a groan.

He looked around the dim, shabby room. He looked at the dying fire in the grate. He wondered of what use would be bit no his hand, shabby room. He looked at the dying fire in the grate. He wondered of what use should be to him now his twenty-thousand in bonds, his eight hundred acres of meadow land, the money he had out at interest. He rose in a dazed kind of way, a shadowy purpose taking definiteness in his mind. He wished he had been better to Besse; he wished—but what was the use of wishing now? There could be but one satisfactory auswer to all his self-condemnation. A shot from the revolver in the drawer yonder, that he had always kept in readiness for possible burglars. He rose. He moved toward the table. His figure cast a fantastic shadow on the wait. The tears were streaming down his cheeks. There might be thanksgiving for his death, though there could never have been any for his life.

Hak!

He had the yearon in his hand.

for his life.

Hark!

He had the weapon in his hand.

He started nervously. Was that Bessio's voice? He turned, dropping the revolver with a clatter. Yes, there she was, not three feet away, fresh, fair, damp, smiling.

Antiritation aspass.

"I suppose," said Mrs. Brown. "you would like me to wear a new dress at this Thanksgiving dinner you are going to give?"

"Can't afford it," growled old Brown.

"As long as you have the turkey well dressed you will pass muster."—Judge.

three feet away, fresh, fair, damp, smiling.

"It is the queerest thing," she said, coming toward him as she spoke. "If felt—badly—yesterday, and I went over to Mrs. Farnham's to see if she could get me work. I met Mrs. Nelson, and she asked me to go home with her. Dicky was ill, and she wanted me to stay over night. She seat you a note. At least she sent the boy with it, but he lost it, and only told her so this afternoon. As soon as I knew that I started home alone—although Dicky was no better."

"Yes?" said Godfrey Krike. He was listening with an unusual degree of interest.

"And to-night, when I was almost here, (Nelsons' is quite two miles away, you know), I got best in the fog."

Her grandiather regarded her in amazerent. What made he paie cheeks so bright? What excitement had blackened her gray eyes?

"And—a rentleman who was coming here found me, and—and brought me home. Please thank him, grandpa. Here he is!"

With an incredulous, gasping cry,

Here he is!"

With an incredulous, gasping cry,
Godfrey Kirke retreated, as a big brown, muscular fellow came dashing in from the hall.

"Robert!"

"Father!"

Then they were clasped in each other's arms.

father. And I chanced to find my little niece Bessie lost out there in the fog. A young lady, I vow! And I was thinking of her as a mere baby yet! Just think! She tells me Charlie Nelson wants her—"
"No? Well, Charlie is a fine fellow. He can have her—a year from to-day."
So now you know why the Kirke homestead is dazzling with lights and flowers, and why it resounds with laughter this Thanksgiving; why old Godfrey wears a brann-new suit, and a flower in his buttonhole; why Robert, in his rightful place, looked so proud and pleased; why dear, busy little Mrs. Dotty beams benignly; why Bussie, gowned in snowy, shining silk, thinks this is a lovely old world after all; why Charlie Nelson is so blessedly content, and why in each and every heart reigns supremo Thanksgiving.—The Ledger.

Thanksgiving Roast Pig.

Take a choice fat pig six weeks old, not younger, though it may be a little older. Have it carefully killed and dressed, and thoroughly washed. Trim out carefully with a sharp, narrow-bladed knife the inside of the mouth and ears, cut out the tongue and chop off the end of the snout. Rub the pig well with a mixture of salt, pepper and pounded sage, and sprinkle it rather liberally with red pepper, and a dash outside, too.

Make a rich stuffing is de rigeur for pig, though you can put half of one and half of the other inside of Mr. Piggy if somebody insists on load bread stuffing. If you use corn bread, have a thick, rich pone of bread baked, and crumble it as soon as it is cool enough to handle, season it highly with black and red pepper, sage, thyme, savory marjoram, minced onion—just enough to flavor it, and plenty of fresh butter; moisten it well with stock, cream, or even hot water. Stuff the pig well and sew it up closely. If you have a tin roaster and cpen fire, the pig will be roasted by that much better. If you have not, put the pig in a long pan and set it in the oven, and leave the stove door open until the pig begins to cook, gradually closing the poor, so that the cooking will not be done too fast. The pig must be well dredged with flour when put in the pan Mix some flour and butter together in a plate, and pour about a quart of hot water in the pan with the pig must be well dredged with flour when put in the pig frequently with the mixture while it is roasting.

If a roaster is used, set it about two feet from the fire at first, but continue to move it nearer and nearer as the pig cooks. Baste it frequently with the water in the pan between whiles of mopping with flour and butter.

To be sure the pig is done, thrust a skewer through the thickest part of him; if no pink or reddish juice oozes out it is done, and ought to be a rich brown all over. When the pig is done pour the gravy in a saucepan and cook it sufficiently. This will not be necessary if the pig was cooked in the stove oven. The pig's l

An Informal Repast.

The Thanksgiving Turkey. As Thanksgiving Day walks down this way
The strutting turkey is ill at ease;
"I'm poor as the turkey of Job," says he;
"Fough and unit to ear, you see;
I gobble no more of my pedigree,
Lest some poor fellow should gobble me;
And a turkey luzzard I think I'll be,
For the present, if you please."

—Binghamton Republican,

Cause for Thanksgiving. Sunday-school Teacher — "Willie, have you had anything during the week to be especially thankful for?" Willie—"Yes'm, Johnny Podgers sprained his wrist and I licked him for the first time yesterday."—Burlington Free Press.

A Thought For the Seasom He in whose store of blessings there may be Enough, and yet to spare, Estawing, with a gentle cuarity, Upon the poor a snare, By all the gladness that his gifts provide Will have his own thanks giving multiplied

Tommy's Bream on Thanksgiving Night

Everybedy Reads
The Pitteburg Dispatch. More news, more telegraphic and special services, tann any newspaper between Philadelphia and Chinego.

The net debt of Canada is reported to be $237,784,090.

FRATE OF UHIO, UTITY OF TOLEDO, 1881.

FRANK J. CHENEY MAKES OATH that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co. Joing business in the Uity of Toledo. County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will, pay the sum of 1800 for each and every case of catarrit that cannot be cured by the use of Hall's Charmer.

Sworn to before me and ausscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D., 2886.

SEAL |

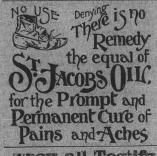

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonists, free.

More than 700 biographies of Columbus have been written in various languages.

A Complete Newspaper For One Cent.
The Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph is soil
Il News Agents and delivered by Carrieverywhere, for One Cent a copy or Siz Centwerk. It contains daily, the news of world, receiving as it does, the reports of bit he Associated Press and the United Frescother paper which sells. It sporting, Finance Teshion, and Household Departments are equaled. Order it from your News Agent. There are 512,500 telephones in use in the Inited States.

United States.

Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn., will mall a trial package of Schiffmann's Asthma Cure free to any sifferer. Dives in any relief in Name this paper and send address.

SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

Did you ever see a sickly baby with dimples? or a healthy one without them? A thin baby is always delicate. Nobody worries about a plump one. If you can get your baby plump, he is almost sure to be well. If you can get him well, he is almost sure to be plump.

The way to do both—there is but one way—is by CARE-FUL LIVING. Sometimes this depends on Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

We will send you a book on it; free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.

Pain in the Back,

Kidney Complaint, Urinary Troubles,

Disordered Liver,

Bloat or dark circles under the eyes, tongue coated, constipation, yellowish eyeballs. Gusrantee-Use contents of One Botte, if not bee sitted, bruggists will refund you the price paid. At Bruggists, 50c. Size., $1.00 Size., Tavalide Guide to Renth! free-Consultation free DR. Krimsen & CO. Bruggists, N. X.

-WANTED-

GOOD Paper Hangers to Sell and Hang commission, or as local agents. F. H. CADY, 305 High Street, Providence, R. I.

ONE ENIOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

PN U 47

'95

I want to Buy Mineral Spring

Containing Lithia. Send analysic. State price. Give name and distance of nearest railroad station.

james Gauni 365 Canal St N Y

Cures Consumption, Coughs, Croup, Sore Throat. Sold by all Druggists on a Guarantee

PENSION JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C. Successfully Prosecutes Claims. Late Frincipal Examiner U.S. Pension Bureau, 3yrs in last war, 15 adjudicating claims, atty since, PATENTS! PENSIONS!—Send for Invent or's Guide or How to Obtain a Patent, Send for Director PENSION and BOUNTY! LAWS. PATRICA OFARREL. WASHINGTON, D. C. PATENTS W. T. Fitzgerald, Washington, D. C. 40-page book free

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

PATENTS THOMAS P. SIMPSON. Washington, D. C. No atty's fee until Patent obtained. Write for Inventor's Guide.

MARRIAGE PAPER FREE. Nearly 500 ladies and GUNNELS' MONTHLY, Toledo, Ohio man, each city, to open an office and handle my goods exclusively. $000 first year. Stamp and references. A. T. MORRIS, Clacianati, &

IF YOU CHICKENS

YOU WANT DAY THEIR THEM TO PAY THEIR WAY
even it you merely keep them as a diversion. In concentrating about them. To meet this want we are talling a took giving the experience of a practical poultry raiser for Only 25c.
twenty-divers. I lows witten his want we are

