To Our Subscribers.

There are two newspapers in this county that do not publish resolutions of respect and lengthy obituary notices free of charge. These two papers are THE SOMERSET COUNTY STAR and the Somerset Herald. We do not know how it is with the Herald, but the principal reason that THE STAR has put a tariff on such matter is to keep it out of the paper. As we believe that the majority of our readers prefer to see our pages filled with live news and editorial matter in preference to dreary obituary notices and resolutions of respect. We notice that some of our exchanges that print such matter free of charge are so burdened with such matter as to make them present a very doleful appearance, something which we believe newspaper readers in general do not sanction. Of course we always make mention of deaths, etc., as a matter of news, but only so far as we believe the public in general cares for, and we have always reserved the exclusive right to say or leave unsaid whatever we deem best relating to deaths, or of the life and character of the deceased. We believe we have the right view of it, but we are willing to let it to our patrons and do that which the greatest number of them desire in the matter. Therefore, we have prepared the following blank, which will be kept in the paper up to Jan. 1st, and which we desire every one of our patrons to cut from most of the papers. The note will be published in our first issue after Jan. 1st. None but votes of subscribers will be counted.

EDITOR STAR:—

I would prefer to have you publish obituary notices, resolutions of respect, etc., as prepared by friends and relatives of the deceased, free of charge.

I would prefer to have you maintain your former attitude toward publishing obituary notices, resolutions of respect, etc., mentioning deaths only in a short and concise way, or as deemed best by you.

TOPICS AND COMMENT.

A POINT worth noting in the recent report of the Adjutant-General of the army is that out of the 9,847 accepted recruits for the last year, 6,662 were natives of this country, against 3,185 of foreign birth. A popular misapprehension may be removed by this observing that such a ratio of the men who enlisted are Americans by birth. The remainder, too, are taking a short cut to citizenship, since the laws give special privileges in naturalization to those who serve honorably in the army.—Ex.

The Somerset Vedette thinks it is all a mistake for political parties to have county chairmen who reside outside of the County-seat. The Vedette is off its base. It is a mistake for any party to allow the County-seat to gabble everything. We don't know much about the Democratic situation, but we do know that the Republican party in this county is run too much in the interest of Somerset politicians. But never mind, for some of these little Somerset bosses are coming to grief pretty fast, and the sooner the better.

This borough limits should by all means be extended so as to take in West Salisbury, then do away with our present numerous names and adopt a new name. The two towns are as one town, anyway, then why not be under one corporation? Both towns would then share the honor of being by far in the lead as the third town of the county, with sure prospects of taking second place when the census of 1900 is taken. To unite under a new name would be a great benefit to both towns and give us advantages that we would all rejoice over. Why stand in our own light any longer?

The campaign which came to an end last week seems to have been more than usually fruitful in absurd and grotesque wagers. The wheelbarrow bet, though old, still has its admirers, and Mr. Harrison's defeat has been the means of procuring rides in the uncomfortable vehicle for a large number of jubilant Democrats and of testing the muscular ability of their political opponents. In Chicago, with genuine Western originality, they varied the usual program, and on Friday Miss Alice Poole, "a society belle and president of the Columbia Bicycle Club, trudged down Drexel boulevard" with Mr. James S. Graham, weighing 180 pounds, in a wheelbarrow. Miss Poole will probably be a great deal more of a bulwark than ever, after this, as she has clearly demonstrated her ability to support a husband. But the young man who seeks her hand should remember that she has a strong one and that she will be quite as able to dump him out into the gutter of life as she is to wheel him along the boulevard.—Ex.

The "Complimentary" Nuisance.

THE STAR makes some vigorous and pertinent remarks about a small-souled newspaper man who kicked because he didn't get a free ticket of admission to a show. The point is well taken. The man who accepts a ticket without giving an equivalent for it is a knave or humbug. Usually when a ticket is proffered "free," it is in the nature of a bribe, and the taker is expected to "whack up" by liberally raffing the entertainment. The sensible, honest course is for newspaper men to be self-respecting enough to pay their way and to demand fair pay for their services. The men who give five dollars worth of printing for a ticket to a 25c show, discredit their calling and do incalculable harm to the trade. Publishers ought to put the "complimentary" nuisance under ban.—Meyersdale Register.

February Election Nominations.

It is not too early for the Republicans of the different townships and boroughs in the county to commence looking about for candidates to fill the various local offices, inasmuch as the law provides that certificates of nomination for candidates for township and borough officers and election officers and School Directors in the same, must be filed with the Auditors of the respective townships and boroughs at least ten days before the day of election, which in this case will be not later than February 11th.

Nomination papers must be filed with the Auditors at least seven days before the day of election, which will be February 14th.

Formal objections to certificates and papers for borough and township officers must be filed with said Auditors within three days after the last day for the filing of such certificates and papers, and shall be decided by a majority of them. Objections other than formal ones must be filed in court and be determined as above stated.

The Sheriff does not give notice of elections for township and borough offices.

In the election of officers for townships and boroughs, and of election officers and School Directors in the same, the ballots are to be printed and distributed by the Auditors, who certify the cost of such printing and distribution to the County Commissioners for payment.

The Auditors are requested to ascertain the offices to be filled, and are responsible for the accurate printing and safe-keeping of the ballots.

The Auditors must provide for each election district seventy-five ballots for every fifty and fraction of fifty votes on the Assessors list, and an equal number of specimen ballots; and must obtain from the County Commissioners the required cards of instruction, two copies of the Assessor's list of voters, and the other usual election supplies.—Somerset Herald.

Rev. Geo. H. Harris Not a Rejected Lover.

David Harris, father of the late Rev. G. H. Harris, called on THE STAR, last week, and gave us all the particulars pertaining to the suicide of his son. The young minister did not commit suicide on account of being rejected in a love affair, as the daily papers had it. Mr. Harris showed us a letter from the young man's sweetheart, which she had written to her lover after he had already suicided, but of which sad event she had not yet learned at the time she wrote him the last letter. It is plain to see by the tone of the said letter that no trouble of any kind existed between the couple, and that they were very strongly attached to each other by the bonds of love. The sad affair was more of a surprise to the young lady than to any one else.

Mr. Harris says all the sensational reports to the effect that his son was making love to a number of other girls is untrue. At any rate the people at Orange, Mass., where he lived, know of nothing of the kind. He further says that he can assign no cause for his son's rash act, but added that many of the people at Orange are of the opinion that his mind became deranged, owing to excessive study. The girl with whom George was in love informed his father that the last time her lover called on her he had a revolver with him and acted very strangely with it. He insisted on her shooting with him at a mark in the back yard, to which she consented. After coming back into the house he pointed the revolver at her and remarked that it would be nice to die together. He then got her to promise that she would go with him to the woods, next day, for the purpose of again trying the revolver, but as it snowed the next day they did not go, and George took his departure for Orange, at which place he took his life soon after returning. The girl further told Mr. Harris that the last evening George had been with her he complained of his head feeling badly, and that she persuaded him to retire early, hoping that he would feel better in the morning. He took her advice and retired, then had her come and read to him until he fell asleep.

As Mr. Harris could learn of nothing that his son would have been likely to worry over, it is very evident, it seems to THE STAR, that too much study deranged his mind and led him to commit the awful deed of self-destruction. He was much beloved by his congregation and he always seemed to be in the best of spirits. The people here, as well as those of his congregation, sorely regret the sad affair, for Geo. H. Harris always bore a good name and gave promise of becoming a very prominent and useful man.

The following letters, which were written to the father and brother of Rev. Harris, by the dead man's betrothed, will doubtless be of interest to our readers:

EAST CHARLESTON, W. V., Nov. 22nd, 1892.

DEAR MR. HARRIS and all members of the family:—We arrived home at one o'clock, Friday, feeling as well as could be expected after this sad event. The package George mailed me was here when I arrived. It consisted of twenty-six photographs, fountain pens, books of perfume, white shirt, his first sermon, calendar turned to the date of his death, no writing whatever.

The flowers I brought home with me I have waxed, so they will always keep fresh.

I have often thought of you since we parted at Orange. Hope you found your folks well at home.

George's death was a dreadful blow for us to bear. We loved him and had so much pride in him, for he was such a smart young man. But the poor boy overstudied and became insane, so he did not know what he was about. It is gone now, and we must make the best of it and live in hopes of meeting him in the next world. He was a young man that did a great deal of good in this world, and he had a great many friends.

It seems dreadful to me as I look back to the pleasant hours we have spent together. It was only a year ago, Thanksgiving day, that we ate dinner with friends of ours in Boston. We must make the most of our lives and remember how George loved us; and our lives are very short at the longest.

I shall be pleased to hear from you, as the winter is going to be lonely for me.

I remain your true friend,
 HATTIE F. GOODWIN.

EAST CHARLESTON, W. V., Nov. 22nd, 1892.

DEAR FRED:—I will write you a little note and send it in this letter.

Of course this is sad for us to lose the one we loved so dearly. It has cast a great darkness over our lives. It is all I can bear, and I know it is hard for you, for you and George have loved each other as brothers can. Do try, and do not feel bad, for if George could speak, he would say: "Make the best of it." All we can do now is to make our lives as good and pure as we can.

You must study and make yourself as well educated as possible, but remember poor George studied too much and made himself sick. I shall study, as it was one of his wishes, and make myself as refined as I can.

Be brave, and remember my faith teaches me that we shall all meet again with George. Write soon.
 HATTIE F. GOODWIN.

Fear Before the Fight.

Testimony differs as to the feeling of the soldier on going into a fight, and the many experiences related by Grand Army men to their always willing listeners show that in their war histories there was no uniformity of either fear or daring. The major of a New Hampshire regiment said: "I always felt timid when the shot began to reach us, but as soon as we got into action I was carried away by excitement. I am not usually a profane man, and I have no recollection of talking roughly to my troops, yet a good many of them have assured me, that all through a fight I would swear like—well, like a trooper."

Another man, a colonel, said: "It's all nonsense to say that a man doesn't feel afraid in the beginning of a fight and all through it. Of course he does. He has reason. Sherman said of General Sumner that he was the only man who grew bolder as he grew older, but the only man I ever saw who really seemed to want to fight, and to enjoy it after he was in it, was Custer."—New York Sun.

Chanancy Yutz, of Allegheny township, has a fish pond on his farm, covering the area of about an acre, which is well stocked with California, Rainbow and common mountain trout, of all sizes from a few inches to a foot in length. Chanancy does not have to trust to fisherman's luck when he wants to indulge in a fry of the Bunn tribe.—Berlin Record.
