TOPICS AND COMMENT.

The Would-be Re-elected Commissioners. The present County Commissioners are in a sorry plight, and well they may be. They want to be re-elected, but we are of the opinion that there are not enough fools in Somerset county to be deceived by their flimsy electioneering schemes to elect them. We have a right to criticize them as officers and we propose to do so. It is a duty we owe to the public, and although it is unpleasant to oppose them publicly, we can not quietly submit to the outrageous electioneering tactics they are resorting to.

We have been informed that these vain pretenders are circulating false reports against Adam Fogle, whom they fear as the strongest candidate for Commissioner in the field. Mr. Fogle needs no vindication, for his character and business standing are above reproach, as anyone can learn by writing to any prominent citizen of this town, where he has resided for more than 25 years. At the last Republican primary Mr. Fogle got every vote cast in Salisbury borough, except one. That is all the recommendation he needs. Where is there another candidate that can show a better record than that? A man must be a very honorable citizen to get a vote like that, as any sane man will see.

The present Commissioners are also sending out circulars praising their own actions and harping on the wonderful things they have done for the tax payers. But their circular is famous only for the things it does not state. It is principally made up of self-praise, and self-praise is half scandal. It is a cheap trick and can deceive none but the unwary. In some instances they give figures, while in others they do not. They give figures only where it will suit them, you know, while the rest is to be swallowed on blind faith alone. They tell how they have cut down salaries here and there, but they do not tell that they increased their own.

Neither do they say a word about putting a lock on a water closet at the Court house. Wonder if they didn't put in a day once in a while when they used the said closet? Any officer can fix up figures to suit his own case and to get votes by, and it is altogether probable that the voters have sense enough to know that and not be caught by such rotten bait.

In their circular they put considerable stress on the fact that they have not pampered any person or set of favorites. But they want the people to pamper them, keep them in office and make favorites of them. That they had no favorites—well, that will do to tell just now, but that statement should be kept in brine during this warm weather.

Another thing these festive and fastidious Commissioners did was this: They hear tax appeals at their office in Somerset only. They are too dignified and too utterly nice to sit in the different townships to hear tax appeals, as had been the custom heretofore. People must go to them, you know, at Somerset, lose a couple of days and spend about $5 in money for every dollar that they may be able to save in taxes. One plea they make on this score is that they do not like to sleep in so many different cold beds in the county. Well, there may be something in that, but these same fine gentlemen would sleep in barns, on the straw, without cover, weather 14 degrees below zero, if they could make a half-dozen votes by it when they are out electioneering.

And yet we are expected by these men to keep them in office. What for? All because of their valuable experience that they prate so much about. Valuable experience, rats! If the present Commissioners are the only men in the county fit to fill said office, then by all means let us give some other men some experience and fit them also. The present Commissioners, you know, may die, and we do not want to be left without an abundance of experienced office-holders. In fact we believe they will die immediately after the primary (politically) and politically remain so dead that Gabriel can't resurrect them with a steam fog horn.

The sensible people of this country have never had so much fun for so little money as the efforts of the fool-society folk to entertain the royal Spanish party have given them. It is evident that the Spaniards have also had their share of the fun.

It is an almighty hard task, brethren, to make the lender and the borrower take the same view of the money question.

SUPERSTITIOUS people see more than a mere coincidence in the fact that on the same day and at almost the same hour the funeral of Edwin Booth, brother of J. Wilkes, and the falling of the floors of the old theatre in which Lincoln was assassinated, occurred.

The present Mikado of Japan has abolished the custom of furnishing husbands to all women who reach a certain age unmarried. He must have made the acquaintance of an "old maid" from America and become jealous because his country had none of these delightful old girls.

MARTYRS to bread and butter, were the twenty-two unfortunate Government employes who lost their lives by the collapse of the floors of Ford's old theatre, at Washington. The building belongs to the Government and was used for office purposes, although long considered unsafe.

DURING the last political campaign the Democrats asserted that a protective tariff was robbing the masses of their substance, and the air was made vocal with howls and lamentations over the mortgaged farms and bankrupt condition of the tillers of the soil. Now it seems that the wealth of the people is so great that they should be subject to a tax on the incomes they are receiving.—Ex.

Here is a suggestion from a Chicago paper which is just as applicable here as in Illinois. The publication of the triennial assessments would enable property holders to ascertain at a glance whether any one of their neighbors were unduly favored in the matter of valuations. Under the present system the owner of such property has no means of knowing how the assessors perform their duty without going to considerable trouble. The paper referred to says:

"The publication of the assessors' figures would reveal at a glance to each property owner what persons owning property similar to his own was assessed. Thus he would determine the fairness of his own assessment. This would tend to make all persons who might be over-assessed, rigorous critics of assessors and aggressive in their demand for fair play. The ultimate effect would be the compelling of assessors to raise the unreasonably low assessments and reduce those that were excessively high. And the publication of assessments would do more. It would increase the difficulty found by assessors in attempting to use their offices for "sandbagging" taxpayers by the threat of excessive assessments. It is safe to say that if it were known that the assessments now making would be published, they would present widely different characteristics from those which they are likely to possess.

SOME of our citizens started for Chicago on Monday, despite the fact that the gates are to open on Sunday. The proclamation issued by some of the ecclesiastical dictators didn't scare worth a cent. The Christian Sabbath should be respected, but there is no use for any class of persons going to extremes. The opening of the gates on Sunday, admitting people to the grounds of the great exposition, does not tend to demoralization. It will not prevent persons from going to church, neither will it prevent the quiet enjoyment of the day. Those who do not intend going to church will likely go inside the gates where their behavior will be as good as it is on the streets or in the hotels and saloons. Church going people will suffer no inconvenience because of open gates on Sunday. Able ministers will have good congregations anyhow. Only a few years ago, right here in Pennsylvania, it was not an uncommon thing to hear ministers make political speeches to their congregations on Sunday. There is a class of ecclesiastical dictators who ask for too much license for themselves and not enough for others, equally as good as they are. Prohibition in Pennsylvania was defeated by this class of men. Under a false pretense of religious duty, they desecrated the Sabbath by discussing the merits of political candidates from the pulpit. The opening of the gates at the great Fair on Sunday does not disturb the peaceful and quiet enjoyment of the Sabbath any more than the taking of money at the gate of a camp-meeting. Viewing the matter from a financial standpoint, it is reasonable to presume that if the taking of money at a camp-meeting on Sunday is moral, that the taking of money at the exposition grounds is also moral. While I have the highest respect for the Christian Sabbath, I also have an inward contempt for those who attempt to prescribe the religious, social and moral duties of men, from such a narrow-minded standpoint. Priestcraft in America can't win. Slavery of the mind is incompatible with free institutions.—Confidence Correspondent to Meyersdale Register.
