It comprises the northern states of the Laos group, the chief of which is Luang Phrabama. The Shans and the Laos are one and the same people and both are closely akin to the Sia-mese. Of this race there are two main di-visions, "the "White Paunch" and the "Black Paunch," Laos, so called from the habit of tattooing a black pattern on "he stomach. They are a historical people, who were formerly in an ancient and powerful kingdom, whose capital, Vinh-Khianh, was taken and distroved by the Siamese about the year 1828. Since then they have been subject to Siam, and are governed by the mandarins appointed by the Siamese gov-ernment and by khiao, or hereditary "The Laos are a mixed race, the original

The Laos are a mixed race, the original moc having emigrated into the country and intermarried with its aborignes, the Khas. They have also mingled with the Bolovens, Thesh, Redehs and Sin, and the resulting people present every type of Mongolian. Those who have preserved the purity of the original blood in any degree are, however. easily distinguished from the mixed lower classes by their high cheek bones, small flat nose, oblique eyes, wide mouth. long, black hair, sparse beard. They are a semi-civilized people, settled in small towns and villages, and engaged chiefly in agriculture. Next to agriculture, the manufacture of cheap silk and cotton fabrics is their chief employment. They have long established tracing relations with China, Burmah and Cambodia, with which countries their rory. gold dust, tin, gums, etc., are bartered for optim, hardware and porcelain. Buddhim is their religion, or a form of it. More, perhaps, than to Buddha their worship is directed by various genii, such as the wood demons, who hold sway in the jungle, the fear demons, or guardian angels who give them protection from ill. To these last an altar is erected in every house, on which are offered wax tapers, ri e, sandalwood and copious libations of arrack. Within the last few years some very flourishing missions have been established in the territory by the American Presby-terian church.

flourishing missions have been established in the territory by the American Presby-terian church. Many travelers have expressed favorable opinions of the people of Laos, saying that they are peaceful, patient, sober and honest. In these respects they resemble closely the Siamese. They are said, too, to have an especial horror of stealing and one of their kings is said to have had thieves boiled in oil. Slavery is an institution to which they are devoted. Now rul then the mandarins organize regular expeditions against the wild tribes, just as the Arabs do in Africa and whole villages are taken into captivity. But of these captives, as of the slaves in Siam proper, it may at least be said that they are treated kindly. I he wages of the common laborer in Laos renge from $3 to $5 per month. It is dan-gerous to know too much in Laos. Skilled mechanical work is done by me drafted by the government or by prisoners. These drafted men get very little for their servic s and perhaps receive 10 rupees for a, year's tabor.
