As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Cataract is manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Cataract Cure be sure to get the genuine. It is taken internally, and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

THE JAVANESE VILLAGE.

A NOVEL AND INTERESTING EXHIBIT AT THE FAIR.

Scenes of Oriental Industry and Home Life—Dwellings of the Villagers—The Police Station and Its Implements—A Javanese Theatre and Orchestra.

After a careful inspection of the pleasures offered by the Midway Pleasure, perhaps the majority of visitors will decide, says a Chicago correspondent of the New York Evening Post, that the Javanese Village is at once the most unique, refined, and comprehensive in its scope of any at the Fair. There is no sign of coarseness or vulgarity in either amusement or customs, and Oriental life is presented in one of its most charming phases. The houses, bazaars, theatre, and kiosk are a delight to the eye; the men, though lacking the stature of the Saxon, have a sturdy physique, the little women have lustrous eyes, sweet faces and gentle ways; both are placid and soft spoken, industrious and artistic.

The village, which covers a very considerable area, is surrounded by a palisade of split bamboo and at its western side is a high arched entrance made of immense bamboos decorated with devices in smaller bamboos, palm leaves and bark. In the centre of the village and fronting the entrance is a large kiosk where the real Java coffee and tea are served. Apropos of real Java coffee and tea, it was largely with the idea of letting Americans know what the true articles are that this village has been set over. At present some paratively little, it is said, of our so-called Java coffee comes from the island of Java, but rather from South America. The Java coffee is very high in the essential oil and less is required in making the beverage than when the South American berry is used. For that reason and for its finer flavor the genuine berry commands a higher price. Most of the Java coffee goes to Amsterdam and Rotterdam, and is distributed from there, while the greater part of the tea crop is shipped to England.

Speaking of coffee and tea-drinking in the United States, Signor Carlo Terrari, the manager of the Javanese natives here and for the last twenty-eight years resident of Java, says we do not at all understand brewing either tea or coffee with any regard to preserving their delicacy of flavor. Coffee, he says, should be first ground to a fine flour, then tightly packed in a filter so that the quantity of liquor desired may be passed through it in about two hours; one tablespoonful of the powder should be used for each small cup, and in the filtration cold or warm water employed; after filtering the liquor should be heated, but never to the boiling point, and then served without dilution. In tea-making enough boiling water should be poured upon the leaves at one time to make the amount of tea required, and in a few moments poured into another hot pot so that the leaves may not give up the tannin and other undesirable properties. If tea is too strong it should be thrown away and more brewed, using a less quantity of leaves, as diluting with water destroys the flavor as much as it would to reduce a strong brew by the same means. This tea epicure smiles in derision at the dejection which forms the old ladies' ideal of a "good strong cup of tea."

But to return to the kiosk, this building, like all the others, is one-story in height and constructed chiefly of bamboo, though glass and stone are used in the veranda and in the roof over the house proper has a sharp pitch, but over the broad veranda which surrounds it on all sides the incline is very gentle. Palm leaves are used for thatching, with a layer of black palm bark at intervals of a foot or more, which gives a very decorative effect. The veranda is crowded these hot days by visitors who, after resting through the village sight-seeing, rest in the cool shade and sip delicious tea and coffee or a very seductive lead drink made of cocoa, enjoying the while the misery of peering humanity as it trudges up and down the Midway under a torrid sun.

All around the palisade on the inside are built the dwellings of the villagers. These delightful little artistic creations in bamboo and palm have the usual one-story thatched roof and broad thatched veranda which seems to be the work-room and drawing-room of the owner. Here may be seen carvers working in wood, men making queer Oriental musical instruments, women weaving or sitting cross-legged before a loom, and doing very clever bead-work, embroidery, etc. The sides and doors of these houses are made of finely split bamboo woven with conventional designs in different colors, principally the natural colors and black, and with the light and black-thatched roofs and general graceful shape, the whole is picturesque to the last degree. Swartly children tumbled about in silent gloom, men from time to time abandoned their tools for a chat and the odd skewer-shaped cigarette, the matrons gossip with mild animation, and the young Javanese belles gaze dreamily at the bold American until, suddenly conscious of his too scrutinizing glances, they turn with heightened color and unusual zeal to their needlework. Everything is restful, everywhere is industry, but quiet, tranquil industry.

In the east end of the village is the blacksmith shop. The atmosphere softly blows up the fire by pushing a piston back and forth in a long cylinder which looks very like a great syringe; the smith bushes himself chiefly in forging knives; most of the carpenter work is done with knives and it requires a blade of unusual keenness and temper to work on such a material as bamboo. Around the central portion and near the kiosk are bazaars for the sale of matting, woven bamboo hats, reed instruments, curious drums, and toys, and a great variety of Javanese art work.

The whole village was constructed in Java on the estates of the proprietors and shipped by way of Hong Kong and San Francisco to Chicago. In Java the village would occupy many acres, but here in the Pleasureland beautiful gardens surrounding each house at home have necessarily been crowded out. Fifty tons of coffee and thirty tons of tea were brought from the same estates properly to represent Javanese life to the Western world. The village is a typical Javanese village police station. It is a small affair, having room for not more than two or three persons. In front hangs a gong, in the form of a great red fish, upon which alarms are given. Leaning against the station are the implements with which the culprit is apprehended, and most uncomfortable looking implements they are. They are called tjagaks. One, the tjagak besi, is of iron, shaped like the letter U, with bars on the inner side, and the other is of wood in the form of a Y. This has on the inside wicked-looking thorns from the rattan which point backward. Both the tjagaks are fastened to long poles, so that the prisoner may be kept at a distance when his neck is in the jaws of this contrivance, and the long thorns or bars pointing to the rear deter the poor wretch of any temptation to escape by running. However, there is comparatively little use for jails or tjagaks in Java now. Occasionally a native gets some opium and has a jollification, but a time, especially of a grave character, is uncommon. The people are naturally gentle, and so extremely sensitive that one who has mastered their language is said to be able to punish them much more severely by words than with a stick.

Beyond the police station to the north is the theatre. This is a long building of the same general construction as the others, except that it is higher, wider, more elaborately decorated, and generally a more pretentious piece of architecture. Its seating capacity is for 1000 or more people, and here are given Javanese plays of the present and former periods. In former times the tale was unfolded by using marionettes behind an illuminated screen. One man, called the dalang, worked them and spoke the different parts, changing his voice with the characters represented, then the screen was abandoned and dolls were substituted in which the extravagant and characteristic profiles were preserved. Afterwards the several roles were played by persons wearing the typical masks and supplying the appropriate gestures, while the dalang, from a concealed position spoke the various parts. In this form, which is still the common amusement of the poor people, the different characters were known by the masks, the princess and nobles wearing white masks, giants and devils red and brown masks, etc. In the last evolution the parts are both spoken and acted by the same person, but the plot of the play is taken as of old from mythological tales.

The orchestra of the theatre numbers about twenty-five, and the music, though quaint and strange, is not at all bad. The leader plays a two-stringed violin, or rebab, there is one wind instrument, the so-called a kind of bamboo whistle, several xylophones, some bonangs, a kettle-shaped affair made of bell metal, some big gongs of the same material, and drums great and small. None of the instruments are the work of the Javanese, but the plot of the play is taken as of old from mythological tales.

The Horse.

In France, when a horse reaches the age of twenty or thirty, it is destined for a chemical factory; it is first relieved of its hair, which is used to stuff cushions and saddles; then it is skinned; the hoofs serve to make combs.

Next the carcass is placed in a cylinder, and cooked by steam at a pressure of three atmospheres; a cock is opened, which lets the steam run off; then the remains are cut up, the leg bones are sold to make knife handles, etc., and the coarser, the ribs, the head, etc., are made into animal black and glue.

The first are calcined in cylinders, and the vapor, when condensed, form the chief source of carbonate of ammonia, which constitutes the base of nearly all the ammoniacal salts.

There is an animal oil yielded which makes a capital insecticide and a vermifuge.

The bones, to make glue, are dissolved in muriatic acid, which takes the phosphate of lime away; the soft element, retaining the shape of the bone, is dissolved in boiling water, cast into squares and dried on nets.

The phosphate of lime, acted upon by sulphuric acid, and calcined with carbon, produces phosphorus for our lucifer matches.

The remaining flesh is distilled to obtain the carbonate of ammonia; the resulting mass is pounded up with potash, then mixed with old nails and iron of every description; the whole is calcined and yields magnificent yellow crystals—prussiate of potash, with which tissues are dyed a Prussian blue and iron transferred into steel; it also forms the cyanide of potassium and prussic acid, the two most terrible poisons known in chemistry.

An Unlooked-for Effect.

In former days the fashionable women of France carried their passion for sentiment and theatrical effects to strange lengths. A fair and florid duchess, more remarkable for amiability than wit, once resolved to give, in the heart of winter, a fete that should eclipse anything of the kind yet known. She fitted up her vast salon in a style of extraordinary splendor with wide looking-glasses that reached from the floor to the ceiling. At the further extremity of the apartment a deep recess, separated from it by a glass casement, was beautifully decorated with shrubs and flowers so as to represent a lovely bower. Along a winding path a pretty actress from the opera, attired as shepherdess, was to appear, with dog and crook, leading a flock of snowy sheep, to the sound of soft pastoral melody. The duchess could hardly wait until the moment arrived to give the signal which was to summon the shepherdess and her flock. Just as she was about to do so a most unfortunate accident occurred. The sheep suddenly broke forth from their place of confinement and burst through the glass casement into the ball-room. Panic-struck with the novel sight, and especially with the glare of innumerable lights reflected in the large mirrors, they rushed in every direction, knocking down the dancers, upon whom they trampled with desperate energy. Ladies screamed and fainted away, while the disconsolate duchess looked upon the scene of havoc and confusion with unutterable chagrin.

DR. KILMER'S SWAMP-ROOT CURED ME

And Made Life More Enjoyable.

Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Gentlemen—"It affords me pleasure to give you a recommendation for Dr. Kilmer's SWAMP-ROOT, of which I have taken 3 small bottles. It has nearly removed the effect of the Rheumatism of about 7 years standing, also a severe weakness of my back and kidneys of about 10 years' standing and has helped a severe attack of inflammation of the bladder, which I am sure SWAMP-ROOT will entirely cure in a short time. I purchased the medicine of S. G. Stone, the Druggist here in Butler, Ind., March 7, '93. W. L. Chilton.

RHEUMATISM! RHEUMATISM! Swamp-Root Cures.

Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

For the past twenty years I had been troubled with Rheumatism and doctoring a great deal without realizing any benefit. Two years ago my attention was called to Dr. Kilmer's SWAMP-ROOT, which was highly recommended to me. I thought I would try a bottle and I used fourteen bottles. It has done me more good than all the other medicines I had ever taken in the past twenty years. The past year has been one of comfort in place of suffering. A great many are using Dr. Kilmer's SWAMP-ROOT in Van Wert, Ohio.

Yours respectfully,
Feb. 19th, 1893.

An ingenious person has been pondering the subject of floral badges, and makes these suggestions, to which we add others of our own to carry out the idea.

For the First Lord of the Admiralty, docks; for a doctor, cyclamen and self-heal; for an oculist, eyebright and iris; for a tailor, Dutchman's breeches; for a broker, stocks and bull-rush; for a philosopher, sage; for a cook, butter-and-eggs; for a land agent, groundsel; for a butcher, lambkill; for a policeman, beet; for a shepherd, phlox; for a musician, thyme; for an acrobat, capers; for a jockey, speedwell; for a woodcutter, hardhack; for a newspaper humorist, chestnut; for a shoemaker, lady's slipper; for an honest man, lilac; and for a rogue, hemp.

Nervous Ailments Among Indians.

An opinion is gaining ground that nervous ailments are by no means exclusively the product of a finished civilization. Dr. Rosse, of the Georgia Medical College, propounds a theory that any sudden change in the social habits and conditions of a race, at any stage of advancement, is sufficient to produce epilepsy in large quantities, and instances are given of its prevalence among many savage peoples, notably the Hurons and the Iroquois at the time of the Jesuit mission, and more particularly still the Siberian tribes, who may be thrown into convulsions by suddenly tapping on their huts.—London Public Opinion.

Don't Blame the Cook

If a baking powder is not uniform in strength, so that the same quantity will always do the same work, no one can know how to use it, and uniformly good, light food cannot be produced with it.

All baking powders except Royal, because improperly compounded and made from inferior materials, lose their strength quickly when the can is opened for use. At subsequent bakings there will be noticed a falling off in strength. The food is heavy, and the flour, eggs and butter wasted.

It is always the case that the consumer suffers in pocket, if not in health, by accepting any substitute for the Royal Baking Powder. The Royal is the embodiment of all the excellence that it is possible to attain in an absolutely pure powder. It is always strictly reliable. It is not only more economical because of its greater strength, but will retain its full leavening power, which no other powder will, until used, and make more wholesome food.

"German Syrup"

Mr. Albert Hartley of Hudson, N. C., was taken with Pneumonia. His brother had just died from it. When he found his doctor could not rally him he took one bottle of German Syrup and came out sound and well. Mr. S. B. Gardiner, Clerk with Druggist J. E. Barr, Aurora, Texas, prevented a bad attack of pneumonia by taking German Syrup in time. He was in the business and knew the danger. He used the great remedy—Boschee's German Syrup—for lung diseases.
