TOPICS AND COMMENT.

IRELAND will be an independent nation about the same time the British House of Lords is abolished.

GEORGIA is right "in it," this year. Besides being liberally fed with official pie, she is developing paying gold mines.

SARAH BERNHARDT now maintains for her diversion a menagerie including several lions. Sarah is somewhat of a tigress herself, according to reports.

CONGRESSMAN COOPER, of Texas, wants Congress to wait until the people of the country can hold a special election on the silver question before finally disposing of it. Not a bad idea, either.

AN honest election is the noblest work of a Republican and the shining mark of attack from a Democratic majority like that which is trying to repeal the Federal election laws in the House.—Philadelphia Press.

THE best advice that can be given to the Democrats in the states where elections are to be held this year is not to bet a cent on the success of any candidate of their party.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HOKE SMITH has discovered that there is a Democratic party in the north as well as in the south, and that many northern members of the party are friendly to the old soldiers. That is one reason why his infamous pension order was modified.—Cleveland Leader.

IT is a matter of history that during the long period of Republican supremacy from the end of the war to 1893 the average rate of wages steadily increased, and the cost of living diminished. What will be the record of four years of Democratic supremacy, from the present outlook?—Toledo Blade.

IF the Van Alen incident should result in the abolishment of the entire diplomatic branch of the government, the country would be just the amount of money paid out for the maintenance of that service ahead, and no interest would suffer, except the individual interests of diplomats thrown out of a job.

NEWSPAPER readers have grown accustomed to the absurdity of much of the alleged news cabled from Europe, but the recent statement that English financiers hoped there would be no more gold shipments from New York to Europe, because of their fear that the loss of it might cause another panic in the United States, was worse than absurd.

THE constituents of Gov. McCorkle are still expressing their indignation at the course of the governor in abandoning the position he occupied last fall on the subject of protection, and it begins to look as if the Democracy of West Virginia was badly divided upon the tariff. Gov. McCorkle finds it more difficult than he thought to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. His honest party friends do not understand how he could denounce the tariff as an iniquitous fraud and robbery, last fall, and in less than a year thereafter implore Congress to perpetuate it. Hence these indignation meetings.—Cumberland News.

THE President of the United States is a Democrat. The Senate is Democratic by a majority of 5. The House is Democratic by a majority of 84. The Democratic platform on which these majorities were secured promised the repeal of the Sherman act. The Republican minority has been prepared to note for the repeal of the Sherman act at any hour of any day since Congress first assembled. The Sherman act is not yet repealed, and the Democratic apologists for this Democratic betrayal of trust are screaming that the Republican minority prevents the passage of the Repeal bill. Do they take the people for fools?—N. Y. Tribune.

THE increased activity shown by train robbers has had the effect of putting the railroad companies on their guard. Two attempts to rob have been frustrated, and apparently the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad escaped an unpleasant experience near Pittsburgh by being forewarned and forearmed. It is well for the railroad companies to take precautions commensurate with the danger, but the Government should take a hand also. There is a bill pending to give the National Government special power in such cases in the interest of inter-state commerce. It ought to be passed. It is of far more vital and present interest than the repeal of the election laws, which is occupying the attention of the House of Representatives to the exclusion of everything else.—Philadelphia Press.

A FEW weeks since the Democrats were howling that this was a silver panic and that no change for the better was to be anticipated until the Sherman law was repealed. Having, as they thought, impressed this belief upon the country, a portion of the Senators of that party determined, notwithstanding the charge that it was the cause of all our troubles, that the bill shall not be repealed and so far they have succeeded in their object. But the money panic has passed by, the scare has gone, money is abundant, and the fact is patent that silver was not the trouble. Mills are silent, business remains prostrated, thousands are out of employment, not because of the money panic, but because of the threatened destruction of our manufacturing and mining industries by the passage of a Democratic free trade bill.—Somerset Herald.

THE claim has always been made that the political party now in power was the party of the people. It has been set up as such and held up as such with a species of idolatrous worship; as representing the masses, the wage earners and the toilers, and a class distinction was made between them and the rich. This exists no more. The sham fabric has been swept from the political workshop. The party now in power represents the rich, not the poor. It is a party of the few, not of the masses. Let the wage earners and the toilers consider what they have received for their votes. Work? No. Employment? No. Food? No. Money? No. Loss of work? Yes. Loss of employment? Yes. Loss of food? Yes. Loss of money? Yes. The promises made to them before election have not been kept, but they have got the sure and true returns from their votes with full compound interest. But they are not all served alike. The rich of their party are well cared for. The man with money, but with one vote only, has safely invested his money, but the masses with their many votes may starve. The President of the people's party, so misnamed, has no use now for the votes of the masses, but he has been bought with the money of the rich man whom he sends as an Ambassador to Italy to represent the people at Rome. The people's representative at the court of Rome is to be a rich man who has bought and paid for his position with money—with cold cash. Is this a fit representative for the people, for the wage earners, for the honest masses? Eradicate such rascals. They do not represent the people, they are the party of the few. Pull down the golden image.—American Economist.

Democracy's Responsibility.

From the N. Y. Press. A few silly Democratic organs are still trying to humbug their readers by cackling about the "distrust" caused by the Sherman law. The sham is threadbare. It is time that it was dropped.

The Sherman law has not caused the "distrust" that has closed hundreds of factories, bankrupted thousands of firms and impoverished multitudes of American citizens. Under a Republican administration we had the Sherman law in full operation with marked commercial prosperity and the most encouraging industrial development. The Sherman law has given valuable assistance to the Western silver industry, and furnished the country with about one hundred and fifty millions of urgently needed currency, every dollar of which is equal in purchasing power to the gold dollar today.

With Benjamin Harrison in the White House the nation knew that the integrity of every dollar earned by toil would be protected by the whole power of the national government. It knew that the Republican President stood ready to issue bonds to any amount that was necessary to maintain the public credit. It knew that President Harrison would never sign a bill framed to prostrate American industry and degrade the wages of American labor to the level of foreign pauperism. The merchant, the banker, and the wage earner pursued their callings in confidence and security, conscious that behind their just interests there was all the might and all the credit of the nation.

The triumph of Democracy swept away every one of these safeguards. The politicians who had threatened to destroy protection and beggar labor came into office with full power to execute their threat. The President stubbornly refused to issue bonds to maintain the Treasury reserve, and deliberately sacrificed the business interests to make an "object lesson." The country knows the rest. The responsibility for the loss and destruction of the last six months belongs not to the Sherman law, but to Grover Cleveland and the Democratic party.

Lament of the Unemployed.

Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight. Let the mill whistles sound promptly tonight; Just as they sounded anear and abroad Before we had voted Protection a fraud. Let the smoke pour again out of the stacks And we'll pay without murmur "the dinner pail tax."

No one will grumble and no one will shirk. If you'll just give us work, Grover, just give us work.

We have grown tired of walking the street, Little ones waiting for something to eat; Tired of hearing our Congressmen spout, Tired of reading you've got the gout. So if you care for us, as you pretend, Why don't you hustle so matters will mend? Danger and suffering in idleness lurk. Give us some work, Grover, give us some work.

If it's true that the Tariff was robbing us sure, And with it prosperity could not endure, Since we all voted for it, now isn't it strange? That not the first man of us has any "change"? Except in condition, for it's true that we all Have lost the good jobs we were holding last fall. Skilled artisan, laborer, book-keeper, clerk, We're all out of work, Grover, all out of work.

If it's true, as they say, that impatient you yearn To do the poor man of your land a good turn, Why don't you just do it, not talk through your hat?

And then the dear people will know "what you're at." Say that "Free Traders may clamor in vain; Say that the Tariff unchanged shall remain, Loud, clear, and plain, without quibble or quirk, And we'll all go to work, Grover, all go to work." —P. S. RANDALL.

Soothsaying.

In ancient times every monarch and prince, great or little, kept his soothsayers, or at least had recourse to some person who pretended to read the future in the stars or somewhere else. We have still persons who assume to be able to foretell the future, but the great difference between past ages and the present in this regard is that then the great and often wise men of the earth believed in the soothsayers, while now only the foolish and feeble have any confidence in them.

The decline in the credit and honor of soothsaying dates in a considerable measure, perhaps, from a certain performance of John Galeazzo, Duke of Milan. He, too, had a soothsayer. One day the reader of the stars came to him and said:

"My lord, make haste to arrange your earthly affairs."

"And why shall I do that?" asked the Duke.

"Because the stars tell me that you have not long to live."

"Indeed! And what do the stars tell you about your own lease of life?" asked the Duke John.

"They promise me many years more of life."

"They do?" "So I have read them, my lord." "Well, then," said the Duke, "it appears that the stars know very little about these things, for you will be hanged within half an hour!" He sent the soothsayer to the gallows with promptness, and lived many years afterwards himself. Star reading fell in to disuse in Milan from that time.—Youth's Companion.
