COL. SAMUEL M. JACKSON.

Republican Candidate for State Treasurer.

Colonel Samuel M. Jackson, the Republican candidate for State Treasurer, was born on a farm near Apollo, Pa., September 24th, 1833. He was reared at his birthplace, and at the age of six years entered the Jacksonville Academy, at Jacksonville, Indiana County, Pa., but before completing his course, the death of his father compelled him to leave school and abandon his contemplated liberal academic education.

At a very early age Colonel Jackson displayed an active interest in military affairs, and when only thirteen he was enrolled as a drummer boy in a company of the State Militia, evincing in childhood those talents which were afterwards of incalculable value to his country in the hour of her sore distress. For efficient service he was promoted, step by step, until he obtained a Captain's commission, and when the dark clouds of rebellion broke in their traitorous wrath, Captain Jackson was one of the first to proffer his services in the great struggle to maintain one flag and a united country. He recruited Company G, or the Apollo Independent Blues, of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves and was commissioned its Captain when it was mustered into service. His signal ability as a soldier could not long remain unnoticed. On July 2nd, 1861, he was made Major of his Regiment; on October 28th, he was promoted to the office of Lieutenant Colonel, and on April 10th, 1862, hardly a year after he first donned the blue, he received the sword and commission of a Colonel. The talents of the man were so marked, his character and bearing so distinguished, that advancement in the service was as steady and natural as the flow of the irresistible tide.

At the head of a brave Regiment he proved himself a gallant officer, and through the whole of his three year's service was a conspicuous figure in all the campaigns in which his Regiment was summoned to duty. At the battles of Gaines' Mill, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Wilderness, Spotsylvania Court House, and Bethesda Church, Colonel Jackson and his Regiment showed the fighting worth of Pennsylvania blood, rendering particularly distinguished service at South Mountain, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg and the Wilderness. At Spotsylvania he commanded his Brigade and so well and ably did he bear himself in this battle that he was brevetted a Brigadier General for his gallant conduct. But it was at Gettysburg that Colonel Jackson so eminently displayed his keenness of judgment, and powers of command. On the second day's fight his Regiment, just arrived on the battlefield, lay in the front on the slope of Little Round Top, overlooking that terrible Valley of Death from which the Third Corps had been driven back. The supports sent to the relief of the Third were fearfully broken, the enemy, flushed with their success, was steadily advancing with a terrible and resolute purpose to carry the hill. Moments, then, were as vital as hours, there was no time to await orders from superiors, and Colonel Jackson, quick to see and realize the danger of delay, on his own responsibility ordered his Regiment forward, and was at once followed by the commands in his rear. Down the slope they charged, and hurling themselves like thunderbolts on the columns of the advancing enemy, they fought them foot by foot back across the Valley of Death, regaining the entire field so nearly and irretrievably lost.

At the Battle of the Wilderness he again displayed his signal ability to command, and his ready power to meet an emergency, however trying. While commanding both his own and the Second Regiment, he suddenly found himself cut off from his Division by a strong force of the enemy. Thus isolated from the Union forces and surrounded by a confident foe, the situation presented but one of two alternatives—death or surrender! But Colonel Jackson had never learned how to surrender; the chance of cutting his way through the enemy's lines, and bravely though it was, was promptly and desperately accepted, and at the head of his troops with an unequal valor, they broke through the rebel forces, and by a circuitous route reached the Union front, where, for several hours they had been given up as lost.

During three years of active, hard service, Colonel Jackson won the confidence and respect of his superiors and the esteem and admiration of all within his command, and when mustered out he returned to his home and the quiet pursuits of a business life. To keep warmer and more vivid the memories of his soldier life, his comradeships and past dangers, Colonel Jackson allied himself with Whitworth Post No. 89, G. A. R., of Apollo; Encampment No. 1, U. V. L., Pittsburg, and the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Loyal Legion. For some time after the close of the war he was engaged in the oil business in Venango County, but in 1869 he returned to his native County of Armstrong and was in the same year elected to State Legislature, and re-elected in the following year. In this position, as in every other that Colonel Jackson has filled, both military and civil, he so won the confidence of those whom he served that, four years later, he was elected to represent the 41st Senatorial district, composed of the Counties of Armstrong and Butler, in the State Senate. At the close of his term of office he was again honored by the offer of a re-nomination, which he felt compelled to decline.

In 1871 he was instrumental in organizing the Apollo Savings Bank, of which he filled the responsible position of cashier until April, 1882, when President Arthur appointed him Collector of Internal Revenue for the 23rd district. He assumed the duties of this office on July 1, 1882, serving until July 1, 1885, when the first Cleveland administration came into power. In September of the same year he was elected President of the Apollo Savings Bank, which place he has filled up to the present time.

In the many positions of grave responsibility and trust to which Colonel Jackson has been called, he proved himself worthy of the confidence imposed in him. As a soldier, he was obedient and brave, as an officer, gallant and fearless; as a legislator, conscientious and wise. His private life is without spot or blemish. Those who know him best, his friends and neighbors, all speak of his affability, his kindness, his generosity and his manliness. He is a type of manhood in which the best American citizenship is exemplified, and in selecting him as a candidate for the highly responsible position of State Treasurer, the Republican party has made a wise and happy choice. To its duties he will bring a ripe experience, a mature wisdom and a moral firmness that will insure their faithful performance, free from all criticism, and we bespeak for him from a united party a hearty and generous support.

TOPICS AND COMMENT.

There is a disposition in some quarters to mistake bull-headedness for statesmanship.

The Ohio campaign is being made just as exciting as though the result was in doubt.

After his pulling Van Alen through the Senate, no one can doubt the strength of ex-Secretary Whitney's "pull."

The son-in-law of the late Don Pedro, by going to Brazil shows that his ambition largely overbalances his good sense.

If that Jersey idea of "organizing the Christian vote" should become popular, some politicians might find themselves hunting for a job.

It is a case of "the kettle calling the pot black" for either political party in New York to refer to the late State conventions as boss-ridden affairs.

KAISER BILLY is now making faces at the Berlin town council, because it had the nerve to refuse to provide at public expense a playground for his royal "kids."

Of all the fool disputes, those that occur on religion are the most useless; they convince nobody and prove nothing, except that man should control his propensity to dispute.

The man who didn't know exactly how the yacht race would turn out has yet to be found. Those who lost money did it by betting against their judgment. What a curious animal man is, anyway.

The politicians' view of the Van Alen nomination was eminently practical. They said in effect to the Senate: "You turn this man down and no more big campaign contributions we'll get. See?" The Senators saw, and Ambassador Van Alen makes his entire upon the stage of diplomacy.

Dr. EDWARD S. BROOKS has wisely arranged for a celebration in all the schools on October 27 of the landing of William Penn. The sectional boards will do something to show their local value if they will take measures in each ward to make the occasion a local celebration. It would be easy, not only to make this an occasion on which the children would learn some history, but on which the interest of their elders in the schools would be quickened by their share in the local commemoration.—Philadelphia Press.

FIFTEEN thousand loaves of bread were distributed last week among unemployed mill workers in Philadelphia, and the war upon the protected industries still goes on.—Kansas City Journal.

Meanwhile the edifying spectacle is presented of Democratic newspapers howling for tariff reduction in one column, and begging subscriptions to open soup kitchens and buy bread for starving mechanics in another.—Philadelphia Press.

A PRACTICAL committee in presenting diplomas, last July, to a graduating class in an Ohio city, spoke as follows: "Girls, in presenting you these diplomas, if, by their significance you are led to allow your mothers to do all the work, bake all the bread, sweep all the floors because you can read Latin or demonstrate a theorem in geometry, then has your school been a most unfortunate course, and in all the teachings you have ever received at my hands, I trust there has been no lesson that has weaned you from the dish pan. Boys, if from this graduation you go out into the world too nice to carry wood and swill the hogs, if need be, then has our school failed in its purpose and sown wrong seed."

SQUIRE J. F. ROBISON, of Garrett county, Md., was a very welcome caller at THE STAR office, yesterday. The squire is a whole-souled, first rate sort of a fellow, but we can't agree worth a cent on politics. He no doubt sees the mistake of voting the Democratic ticket, last fall, but he pretends to believe that his party will give us better times than we have ever had. Well, "so mote it be," but it won't be, and don't you forget it.—SOMERSET COUNTY STAR.

Squire Robison's head is level, and his prediction of better times is no freak of the imagination, but one that will be fully realized, when the Sherman law is repealed and tariff reform has gone into full force and effect.—Oakland Democrat.

Yes, when the Sherman law is repealed, indeed! And why isn't it repealed now? If the Sherman law is the cause of all the trouble, as the Democrats have been telling us, why does not the present Democratic administration go ahead and repeal it? Ever since the panic is with us, the Democrats have been pretending to blame the Sherman law for being the cause of it, and although they have the President and a majority in both houses of Congress, yet the representatives of "the great untried Democracy" sit in the halls of Congress, week after week, in special session, and what are they doing? Nothing but drawing their salaries. Why do they not repeal the Sherman law? Is it because they lack a majority of the votes in both houses? No. Then why is it? Simply because the repeal of the Sherman law will not help matters much and the Democrats know it. The threatened tariff changes are the cause and the sole cause of the present panic, and knowing this, the Democrats are slow about repealing the Sherman bill, knowing that if they do repeal it, the panic will still be with us and they would then have to hunt up something else to blame it on. The Democrats are just now on a study as to whether they ought to carry out their Chicago platform and ruin the country, or whether they ought to ignore their platform and show to the country that they have no faith in their own doctrine.
