TOPICS AND COMMENT.

The jolly days have come, The gladdest of the year: When candidates are shaking hands, And setting up the beer. —Pittsburg Times.

The fourteen people who dropped 800 feet, in a World's Fair elevator, know what rapid transit is.

A good many opinions have lately been very much revised, so far as they relate to Senator David B. Hill.

The governors seem determined to boom the Corbett-Mitchell fight by threatening to prohibit it in their respective states.

At last something has been found that is tougher than a New York policeman. It is a cable grip car, which knocks out policemen with ease.

Who says good times are not upon us? Under Republican rule, workmen had to labor for their bread; now they get it free—at charity agencies.—Kansas City Journal.

The Indians show their natural shrewdness by regarding with suspicion the proposition to make a state out of Indian Territory. They scent the job in the scheme.

By a vote of 39 to 22, the U. S. Senate has decided that $50,000 campaign contributions are good credentials for the highest diplomatic honor the country has to bestow.

If there be anything on earth that contains more crookedness than the square inch than New York City politics, the papers of that city should all be indicted for criminal libel.

There are 2,000,000 unemployed wage earners in England, against one-fourth that number here. Such is the difference between having Free-Trade and merely being threatened with it.—Providence News.

The Russian bear and the French eagle would certainly make a strong team, if they could be made to work in double harness. Even the great Napoleon made a failure in pitting them against each other.

It has been estimated that 60 per cent. of the male population of the United States would willingly give up their present occupations to hold Federal office. And perhaps 39 per cent. of the others could be persuaded to hold office.

SOMEBODY—Frank Hatton, we believe—has been trying to prove that the life of a Congressman is one of misery and suffering. This may be true, but if so, why do not Congressmen resign more frequently or decline re-election?

WHEN President Cleveland and Senator Hill fall on each other's necks in the wind-up tableau of the great conciliation act, care should be taken to see that the tear receptacles are numerous and large and that the principals are unarmed.

ANY system under which the labor of convicts is allowed to compete with that of honorable persons, is wrong and vicious. Under the present laws all imported goods have to be branded with the name of the country in which they are produced. Why not a law compelling all convict-made goods to be plainly branded?

AN explosion in connection with a volcanic eruption was, it is claimed, heard 1,700 miles away and was consequently rated as the loudest noise ever made in the world. The daily explosions in the U. S. Senate may not be as loud as that of the volcano, but they are heard much farther—all over the civilized world, in fact.

If Amos Cummings will amend his bill, "for the better protection of animals in transit," by adding "and for their proper classification," he can count upon the support of all those who have met hogs and other animals in parlor cars, and nearly everybody has. If Mr. Cummings can compel the hogs to travel in cages, he will become a public benefactor.

DO THE "daily prayers" of President Cleveland ever beg of the Almighty that soup may be provided for the unemployed and their families, now that they are out of work under his administration, or does the Almighty Cleveland forget "the plain people," now that they are in the soup, or are all the "daily prayers" needed to get himself and his party out of the soup? —American Economist.

WHEAT sold in New York, the other day, for 68 cents per bushel for December delivery. This is the lowest price recorded in the dealings of the Produce exchange for upward of 80 years.—Berlin Record.

But the farmers were told, last fall, to vote for Cleveland and get $1.25 per bushel for their wheat. Democracy, thou art a jewel, yea, a daisy in full bloom.

WITH Van Alen in Italy, and Hawaii drifting back to British domination; with the country prostrated by the failure of Cleveland and his party to fulfill their promises, and with workmen starving because of idiotic tariff agitation, the way-faring man, though he be a fool, can appreciate the glorious benefits of living under a Democratic administration such as is in power at the present time.—Philadelphia Press.

THE Democratic Galveston News prophesies the dissolution of its party. It says the Democratic party can not long subsist on the ruin it has wrought. The Dallas News, also a Texas Democratic paper, sizes up the situation in about the same way. It says the Democratic rooster cannot long hold the barnyard by crowing on the fence, and adds that the party must come off the perch, stop its foolishness and do something.

HARD times force many alleged business men to hide their faces and bemoan their ill luck. They also force many, through inaction, to fail. It is, however, the golden opportunity of the bright, plucky man who has the nerve to advertise and push his goods. He talks to buyers through his advertisements, making them larger and inserting them often, so that his goods are continually moving. He thus has a clear field, and, knowing how to use it, gets the public's money.—Ex.

THE greatest joke of the season is that there are still a few Democratic papers in the country that pretend to believe that the Sherman law is responsible for the present panic. However, most of our Democratic exchanges have quit springing that transparent excuse on the public, some time ago, and are silently trying to hatch out something else to hide threatened tariff tinkering, the real cause of the panic. They must invent a lie that looks more like truth than the howl about the Sherman law.

If the men who voted for Cleveland and tariff reform are satisfied with the present condition and future prospects of the country, let them continue to vote the Democratic ticket. If they are not, they can have no better opportunity for making their dissent known than to join in swelling the majority for Fell and Jackson, the candidates on the Republican State ticket. Pennsylvania is the very keystone of protection, and if she sends forth the mandate, "hands off the tariff!" her voice will be potential at Washington.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

It is at all events the duty of the people to hasten to undo the folly of last November by recording their votes wherever possible to express their disapproval of the avowed policy of the Administration, until the constitutional opportunity arrives in 1896 to return to the safe and successful policy under which our country has so long prospered. Until that time shall have arrived and the general wrong been undone, it is our conviction, most regretfully uttered, that he who hopes for a return of the wages or busy industry of last year will be doomed to disappointment.—Irish World.

It is a curious coincidence that the Democratic party occupies upon its return to power very much the same critical position before the country as it occupied when it went out with James Buchanan. It is confronted by an issue vital to the nation and to its own existence. And it is prepared to meet it in the same way it met the issue of 1860. It is split into three factions, each at war with the other two, just as it was when it came out of the Charleston convention and continued to be until national calamity followed its indecision and bickering. As a minority it has proven itself strong, alert, resourceful, combative; as a majority it is again weak, vacillating, disunited. It is afraid of its own shadow.—New York Herald.

GRAND old John Sherman recently "read off the riot act" to the Democratic United States Senate in the following sensible and clear-cut way:

"In times past, when the Republicans were in the majority, we never shrank from the responsibility which is now upon the Democratic party. We were Republicans because we believed in Republican principles, Republican men and Republican measures, and whenever a question came up in this chamber to be decided, we never plead the baby act. We ask our brothers on the other side, for whose ability and standing we have the highest respect, to meet together and consult with each other. If they do not like the President's plan, give us some other, and in God's name let us settle this important question for the people of our country. Then we will take it into our consideration. If we can agree with you we will. We will not follow your example. If we do not agree with you, we will give you a manly no."

Hints on the Detection of Glanders or Equina.

The following able and valuable article was recently contributed to the Cumberland Courier, by Stuart E. Paulet, the English veterinary surgeon, who had his office in Salisbury, last fall. It is so full of valuable information that we take great pleasure in reproducing it:

"It having been reported to the Veterinary profession that there have been outbreaks of glanders in Ohio and adjacent states, it might be interesting to some of the stock raisers in the county to know something of this dread disease.

Glanders is a malignant, very contagious and fatal disease, due to the introduction into or generation in the animal economy of a virus consisting of an organism—the bacillus mallei—which infects the whole system, more especially the mucous membrane of the nose, the lungs, and upon the lymphatic glands and ducts.

Glanders and farcy originate spontaneously in the horse, ass and mule, and are capable of transmission to man, in whom the virus increases in malignancy.

Glanders internally develops an interstitial pneumonia. The submaxillary lymphatic glands are unusually enlarged. Very often the earliest noticeable symptoms is a rise of temperature, followed by diabetes or profuse staling. Then we get a limp watery discharge from the nostrils; the discharge becomes thicker, amber colored and sticky; gets smeared all over the stall and fittings. You may get a peculiar form of lameness which moves about like rheumatism. In a few days you will have bulging of the facial bones, the pulse will be accelerated; the discharge from the nose becomes very purulent, mixed with a starchy looking mucus; temperature about 104 to 106 degrees; appetite often remains good; the mucous membrane of the nose appears red and congested, and in a few days turns a leaden gray color; little pimples crop up in a few hours, turn to vesicles and then to pustules that rupture, with a purulent discharge streaked with blood; the eyes are weak and a discharge issues from them; the breathing is hurried and irregular; abscesses form along the lymphatics of the face. Farcy has little nodules like buttons, which burst, discharging a thin purulent yellow liquid that dries, forming a yellow crust on the surface of the ulcer; it is commonly confined to the extremities, the whole limb being engaged. The flesh is contagious and wild animals have contracted it from eating the meat. In the human subject it is invariably fatal. No cure for glanders has ever been found. Even were there a possibility of recovery, the animal would be a continual source of danger to other horses and to human beings. It is therefore in the end economy to immediately destroy glandered horses when detected, even were human life not endangered by their presence. When glanders appears in a stable, in addition to removing affected animals, you should attend carefully to ventilation, drainage, food and water, and the cleansing and disinfection of stable, fittings, harness, etc. Remove and destroy all contaminated wood work, paint all fixtures, scrape and lime-wash walls, mangers, etc., the wash to contain a pint of crude carbolic acid to every bucketful. Give all horses that may have come in contact with affected animals, two ounces of hypsulphite of soda with every meal."
