The following was written by Mrs.
Jack Williams, who, with her husband, has just completed a trip from Philadelphia to San Francisco on a tanden, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The journey was the outcome of a $1,000 wager made by her husband that they could cross the continent awheel within ninety days, exclusive of Sundays, starting penniless and earning their way as they went. But they lost the bet, for their journey took them a little over four months.

The night before reaching San Francisco we sought shelter in an old scownear Benicia with a dozen Italian fishermen, who at 5 o'clock woke us—we slept on the floor—to give us black coffee, in which one of them had surely lost his pipe. At 11 the captain of the Solano ferryboat gave us 50 cents and we cooked our last camp meal in the marshes, making ten of salt water.

LIEUTENANT of Police Rodgers has reason to wish that he had earlier awakened to the wisdom of being an honest man. For serving the Quay machine as a ballot-box stuffer he has machine as a ballot-box stuffer he has become a fugitive, and his $1200 a year job at Washington is vacant. Though Rodgers may travel around in idleness at the machine's expense for a time, it is no fun being a skulking criminal, seeing in every curious glance the threat of arrest. If Rodgers had to live his life over again he would probably choose the hardest kind of a living in preference to taking the risks of being a Quay heeler, with all the emoluments that the machine has to give in return for crime committed in its interest.—
