

THE DOUBLE DEALING OF MRS. SMITH.

When my dear husband died two years ago, leaving me with little money and an invalid daughter, it was as if a warm, protecting wall between me and the world had been suddenly removed.

Fortunately, our house, with its pretty garden at the back, and decent neighbors was left us; and there was a steady demand for our front and back parlors, and the little room off that answered for a library, or dressing room. I got on, and was very cheerfully adding their savings to the tiny growing sum in an empty tea-caddy.

Well, in the very biggest rush of visitors they came. The young man I had married, a fine-looking boy of 21 or so—who was willing to pay any reasonable price for a comfortable quiet room all to himself, was engaged to be married, and he was engaged to be married.

The time flew swiftly, and I found myself with a very nice young man who was to be my second husband. I had been thinking of it for some time, and I had been thinking of it for some time.

I told him I truly liked him, and I was so glad to see him. I was so glad to see him, and I was so glad to see him.

It gives us a very kindly feeling toward the government, and we are so glad to see him, and we are so glad to see him.
