EVILS OF MONOPOLIES.

How the Trust Problem Appears to Attorney General Knox.

In an address delivered before the famber of commerce, Pittsburg, Attorney General P. C. Knox made the following deductions: If trusts, so-called, are being illegally conducted Congress, has the power to enact laws, the enforcement of which will effectually eradicate the evils. A law which would cover contracts and combinations in restraint of trade, as defined by the common law, would exclude all hurfful combinations and compiracies. Congress can, if it sees fit, adopt that law. I challenge the proposition that we are hopelessly helpless under our system of government, to deal with serious problems which confront us in respect to our greatest interests. Public sentiment is sufficiently grave to call for the efforts the President is making to secure an authoritative exposition of existing laws and suggesting additional ones. Every constitutional question is an open one until it is decided by the supreme court. May not Congress, under the commerce clause, effectively amend and extend the law to deal with the trust question? Who shall say that the power of Congress does not extend so far? I think it does. I am quite sure no one can now say it does not.

Five large establishments had been tied up and two more were threatened. General Jacob H. Smith is not so bad as he is painted. This is the opinion which General Frederick Grant expressed when he arrived in Chicago from the Philippines. "General Smith is a man who does a good deal of talking, but I do not believe he is as violent as he seems to make the public believe," said General Grant. "I succeeded him in command of the district where he was supposed to have done so much burning and killing. But I could not find that he had destroyed so vastly as I had supposed. The buildings which General Smith did burn were those shelters which stood a half mile or so from the towns, and which offered cover for the people who came down from the mountains and rushed in at night to attack the American soldiers who were stationed in the towns. He ordered all of these buildings burned, which was just as it should have been."

ALABAMA RACE RIOT.

Three White Men and Eight Negroes Fall in a Fierce Fight Near Birmingham.

A terrific race riot broke out at Littleton, 22 miles west of Birmingham, Ala. Three white men and eight negroes are dead. The negroes in the place outnumber the whites ten to one, and are in complete possession of the town. The negroes have captured a powder magazine belonging to a coal company. A reign of terror existed Sunday. The operators at Littleton at 10 o'clock p. m. Sunday wired Birmingham that 40 armed white men were in his office waiting for a sheriff's posse, and if the officers were not there before morning there was going to be very serious trouble in the place. The riot started in the afternoon, when a white woman was shoved off a trestle by a negro man and woman. The woman told her friends and five white men were worsted. The white men were forced to retire, but succor soon arrived and the negroes were put to flight. Reinforcements for them arrived also. Shooting continued all night. James Thompson, white, is shot in the abdomen and will die. Another man shot and killed instantly worked for the Sisses-Sheffield Company. His name is not known. One white man is missing. The reports from Littleton say there is great excitement and everybody is armed. Sheriff Burgin and 10 deputies left Birmingham for the scene of the riot.

Comes From Brazil.

Coffee was originally indigenous to Abyssinia, from whence it was introduced in Ceylon and Java, but since its introduction into the West Indies and South America its original habitat has almost been forgotten. Its cultivation in its native home has been completely neglected. Brazil is now the most important coffee producing according to the "Government Crop Reporter," almost three-fourths of the annual crop. Brazil's position with reference to the coffee market is much like that which this country occupies as regards corn. Similarly. occupies as regards corn. Similarly, while Chicago is the chief corn mart of the world, Santos, in the State of San Paulo, Brazil, is the chief coffee mart. From this point about one-third of the world's coffee commerce originates.
