The people ought simply to stand and cry aloud, "Flee from the wrath to come, flee from the wrath to come," he cause we are in the dispensation of the Holy Ghost. I. This is a solemn subject because of the peouliar kind of sin which may drive away God's spirit. In the Old Testament the "Almost no preacher to day dwells ex-clusively upon sin, salvation and the re-clusively upon sin, salvation and the re-duction of Christ to the sinner," says the Compregationalist, of Boston and Chicago. ers. Elizabeth, who was named after our queen of "spacious times." was deeply attached to Henry, the eldest son of James I, who died in his father's life-time. She married in 1613 the Pal-grave of the Rhine, who afterward be-came the winter king of Bohemia, and after much suffering, died in 1632, just as Gustavus Adophus of Sweden, who had ben a claimant for Elizabeth's hand was triumphing. The widowed queen lived on poor allowances from England, Holland or the Rhine states until she returned to England after until she returned to England after the restoration of her nephew, Charles II. She then resided in Lord Craven's house in Drury lane, where she died in 1662.

house in Drury lane, where she died in 1662. We cannot now measure what the charms and wit were which gained for her the name of "Queen of Hearts" and the admiration of all who knew her. She was not clever. She was not on the best of terms with all of her numerous children, many of whom be-came Roman Catholics. It was owing to this fact that it was her youngest but one, Sophia of Hanover, who gave us our present reigning family, for the Duc d'Orleans, now living, is the sen-ior of our king even as descendant of Elizabeth, whose name is renewed to-day in the second heir to the throne of Bavaria, to whose house he belonged. —London News. -London News.

beautiful cities in Europe, has long been famous for its diamond cutting, but it is not so well known that the art is largely in the hands of women. Under the general term of "diamond cutting" are included three processes, diamona splitting, diamond cutting and diamond polishing. It is the second which is in the hand of women. One of the largest of the Amsterdam dia-mond factories, founded in 1843, did not employ women till 1875. But their work in this particular branch was found so satisfactory that it is now given over to them entirely. The first progress in the treatment of the rough unamond is "splitting." The object is to take a large stone, containing several flaws, and divide it into several small, flawless stones. This is done by applying a little dia-mond tipped tool to the flaws, which are weak spots. The stone is, divided into as many pieces as there are flaws. This part of the work is done by men. The stones are then passed over to the women, for whom a pleasant work-shop has been built on the quay, fac-ing the 'Amstel Canal, and flooded with the light which their trying work de-mands. Some of the diamonds are so small mands. Some of the diamonds are so small Some of the diamonds are so share that 400 of them weigh only half a car-at. Each worker is responsible for all the diamonds given her, and in case of loss is obliged to replace the stone. The women use little pearshaped tools, The women use little pears are store. The women use little pears have store, tipped with diamonds. They hold in the left hand the rough diamond, firm-ly waxed into a little frame. Then they round the whole stone, removing all angles. An ordinary diamond, 10 carats in weight, can be cut in a day of eight hours. The last process, that of polishing, is done by machinery run by steam. All diamonds are either "brilliants" or "rose," and the difference is made in the polishing. A brilliant has 58 sides, and is pointed at both ends, while the rose need have only 24 sides, and is flat on one side. The women employed are high class workwomen, respectable, well appear-ing, well dressed and prosperous for European workmen. They receive

SCHOOL FOR STORE WORKERS. Counter Service and Window Dressing Among the Subjects Taught.

Among the Subjects Taught. That there is always room at the top is nowhere more fully demonstrat ed than in the great department stores of this country, from which there comes an incessant demand for men of this country, from which there comes an incessant demand for men with energy and ideas. Of the mechan-ical routine workers there is a large supply, and the number grows daily to the despair and irritation of pro-prietors and managers. While there is room in every depart-ment of the stores and retail houses generally for talent and knowledge, a lack of properly equipped workers is felt in the spheres of window dressing, decorating of interiors, card-sign paint-ing and advertisement writing. The possibilities ilong these lines were grasped by a keen-sighted man, himself a successful practicer of most of the arts referred to, who has started a school in New York for the tuition of beginners and for the perfecting of workers already in operation. The col-lege of instruction is absolutely unique, being the only institution in the world dealing with some parts—and these the most important—of its curriculum. In some instances city employers have themselves paid for the tuition of likely young men. Others have given their workers time and facilities for attending the classes, while many students from far-off country districts have not only had their expenses de-frayed, but have received their salaries during the tuition period. Several of the large wholesale dry method is that the instruction given is personal and individual, each pupil being dealt with according to his ca-pacity, and no limit is put on the duration of the course. Most students complete their curriculum in four or six weeks, while none have exceeded two months. A special two-weeks' course of win-dow trimming and card-sign painting for those who desire improvement can be had for $25. For beginners a com-plete course costs $50.

Chinese Art of War. A novel method of testing new weap-ons of warfare is now in vogue in China. A large cannon, of the latest type, was recently imported from Eu-rope, and when it was landed on the coast of Hainan the military manda-rins of the district first inspected it closely and then resolved to test it. They therefore procured a boat closely and then resolved to test it. They therefore procured a boat which they anchored at some distance from the land, and then they loaded the cannon and fired a shot at it. Tc their surprise the shot did not hit the boat, but fell short in the water. They determined to try again, but did not want to miss a second time, and sc they brought the boat to the very spot where the first shot had fallen and anchored it there.

where the first shot had fallen and anchored it there. Then they fired, and to their un bounded joy the shot went clean through the vessel. Evidently it never occurred to them that they could have attained the same end by aiming more carefully and slightly changing the position of the cannon, or, if it did occur to them, they thought that if was easier to move the boat than to sc was easier to move the boat than to so aim with the heavy cannon that they would be absolutely certain of not losing a second shot.—New York Herald.

At the Hinckston Run dam, John-stown, after several cars hauled by a "dinkey" engine had left the rails, En-gineer Dillio, an Italian, left his engine standing on the track unattended and failed to close the trottle entirely. When the cars were uncoupled the en-gine ran away, and, crashing through a set of temporary deadwoods, tum-bled down an embankment into the midst of a crowd of Italian workmen, killing three. Engineer Dilio escaped to the hills, eluding a posse that start-ed after him. At the American tin plate mill, Mon-essen, John Buck, a rigger employed at painting a stack on one of the fur-naces, was caught in the shafting driving the doubling shears of the hot mill, and was whirled around about 40 times before the machinery could be stopped.
