A Former Salisbury Lady Gives an Interesting Account of a Pleasure Trip.

As a number of my friends have written me, asking for a description of my summer's outing I will give it by the editor's permission, through the columns of our dear old home paper, whose visits we are eager to receive.

We moved long upon the way, as the train was four hours late in entering Colorado Springs. The sights were new, and the sage brush was dotted here and there over the fields, as we neared for the first time the stupendous peaks of the Rockies.

We are now along the foot hills of Pike's Peak, and the distance, though six miles away, appears like a ten-minute walk. On entering the city, and in view of the depot, your eyes rest upon the magnificent Antlers hotel, of which you have all heard.

We spent but a few days in this beautiful city, as we wanted to enjoy life-giving ozone of the mountains, and drink the draughts from the famous springs at Manitou. Here are the Ute Iron springs, the Soda and Sulphur springs within a radius of one mile.

On our first day at Manitou after being comfortably domiciled beside a winding stream along a steep mountain, we heard among the peels of thunder a terrible crash and cracking of timber amidst shrieks and cries, and on looking out the window where we had full view, we saw what looked like an avalanche, for there had been a cloud burst up the stream about ten miles. The water sweeping everything in the way, soon filled the narrow banks of the stream to overflowing, and we realized for the first time in our lives the horrors a flood brings.

We found the rambles around Manitou remarkably varied and of never-failing interest and attraction. I will note a few of them. The first of which was our visit to Cheyenne Canon, which impressed us as being the grandest natural scenery ever witnessed.

Williams Canon, is a most picturesque and interesting gorge and contains a number of curious caverns, the most wonderful of these being the Cave of the Winds. There are guides in readiness with lights to show you all points of interest.

At the noted Balanced Rock we urged the burros up the steps, and seated on these graceful animals, our beautiful portraits are brought to view. Suffice it to say we were delivered on our return trip safely, but soundly bruised, and would not take a great deal for our experience.

I will say nothing of Pike's Peak, as every school girl and boy knows something of that and its weird scenic attractions. I now bid adieu to scenes and friends in Manitou, as my husband has made his return trip to Salt Lake City, Utah, where he wired me to meet him.

On my trip to Salt Lake I beheld towering monuments of solid stone, and I sat gazing in wonder and admiration at the matchless panorama afforded by rocky wall and rushing river along these wonderful canons.

At the sight of The Royal Gorge my imagination was staggered, and my mind unable to comprehend the sublimity of the scene.

Glenwood Springs is a delightful health resort where over one million dollars have been spent on the grounds. The water in the Hot Springs is as salt as the ocean. Many other noted points were passed, but I hasten through the desert, passing by the great sand mounds that resembled mountains, and enter into the city that was once the den of Mormonism.

One of the first sights, of course, was to show the Temple and great Tabernacle, built by Brigham Young. In the Tabernacle we saw the beautiful grand daughter, who is being educated abroad, and heard her sing a number of very fine solos.

We enjoyed the baths in the Great Salt Lake very much, and as the water is strong enough to carry a potato, we had no trouble learning to float, and the baths are very invigorating.

tirely different, and with the addition of salt and pepper tastes similar to chicken broth.

Fort Douglas being a delightful trolley ride from the city, we paid frequent visits to that point and viewed with pride the boys in blue unfurl the Stars and Stripes and witness the sham battles they fought.

After visiting numbers of other pleasant points, we went to Logan, Utah, to visit our nephew, Prof. James Dryden, wife and children, who visited us in our home in Pennsylvania in the summer of 1901.

We spent a number of very pleasant days picnicing in the canons along the fresh water streams, fishing for trout, and building camp fires, and listening to the huntsman's story of adventure with mountain lions, etc.

Prof. Dryden entertained our party and others at his home one evening by showing numbers of stereopticon views, many of which were taken from college life, among professors and students, which made it very interesting.

We were invited by Mr. Don Magnoir and wife, of Ogden, the state mineralogist, to accompany them to a gold mine in which they were interested. We climbed for miles up the mountain, along the cliffs and great basins, hearing the eaglets in their nests, passed the raw places of the great snow slides, at last arriving at the opening of the mine, where there was said to be seven hundred feet of mountain over our heads.

We learned the fascination of prospecting as we climbed along, picking the various stones from the hills, with their properties of gold, copper, silver and lead.

After our descent from the mountain we refreshed ourselves by a bath in the rooms of the Great Hot Springs of Ogden. The water is said to contain enough salt to season a pot of meat or potatoes perfectly, as it flows steaming from the mountain.

The Mormon religion predominates in Logan, as it is handed down to the posterity of the old settlers. But we felt to rejoice all the more when we saw 'midst the struggles of the Christian people that they succeeded in erecting a handsome protestant church, in which my dear departed sister worshipped Sabbath after Sabbath.

We were very much impressed with the vastness of our country, its diversity of climate and scenery, as well as its almost fabulous wealth. In the glory of the scenes we seemed to find, "Books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, And good in everything."

The Eichnors and Drydens did everything in their zeal to make our visit a pleasurable long to be remembered.

On our return trip we viewed with interest the beautiful city of Denver, and lo, as the Queen of Sheba said to the "Wise Man," "the half has not been told."

Breaking into a blazing home, some firemen lately dragged the sleeping inmates from death. Fancied security, and death near. It's that way when you neglect coughs and colds. Don't do it. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption gives perfect protection against all throat, chest and lung troubles.

NOTICE!

A Change in Business at The Star Office—A Few Words to Our Readers.

THE STAR is this week far from being up to its usual standard. There is a reason for this, and we feel that we owe our readers an explanation, so here it is:

Mr. T. R. Sufall, who has been in our employ for nearly five years, has decided to move to Meyersdale, and much of our time has been spent, this week, looking up a man to take his place at our type cases. Owing to our absence, the paper had to be neglected. We wish further to state that we have not yet succeeded in finding a suitable man, but expect to have one in the very near future.

Such vexations as above set forth sometimes come to all country publishers, and we trust that our many good friends and patrons will bear with us and excuse all shortcomings of the paper until such time as we can secure the necessary help in our mechanical department.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, expose the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach.

New Somerset County Maps.

We have at THE STAR office a large supply of the splendid new map of Somerset county recently compiled and published by Captain Wm. M. Schroock, of Somerset, and Mr. Staniford, of New York City. These maps show all the new towns and townships, all the railroads, county roads, streams, post-offices, etc., in Somerset county, and no one can afford to be without one.

Journalistic.

Hon. A. F. Cooper, congressman-elect from the Somerset (Pa.) district, wrote a letter of thanks to L. A. Smith, editor of the Meyersdale Commercial, for "the very effective work" done for him by that paper. In fact, "no paper was quoted so frequently by the other newspapers as was the Commercial."

A candidate is usually thankful for all the help he can get, no matter from what source it comes. But the Commercial is not the only paper that received a nice letter filled with thanks and compliments from Mr. Cooper. The STAR got one, too, and so did the other Republican papers of the county; but it is so seldom that Lou Smith gets a compliment from an honorable man that he had to preach it from the housetop as soon as he got Mr. Cooper's letter.

One Minute Cough Cure

is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, pneumonia, asthma, la grippe and all throat, chest and lung troubles. I got soaked by rain, says Gertrude E. Ferner, Muncie, Ind., and contracted a severe cold and cough. I failed rapidly; lost 45 lbs. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 48 lbs. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. An ideal remedy for children. E. H. Miller.
