

LL of Eleanor Merton's friends declared that she was like to go mad with grief.

She had had an unusually bitter experience. The beautiful, willful orphan girl had married a handsome youth who developed into a cruel and dissipated man. For three years Eleanor bore her trials in silence with splending bridge; then her husband's are girl and the silence with splending bridge; then her husband's or said to Godfrey. It shall dress Reglike to go mad with grief.
She had had an unusually bitter experience. The beautiful, willful orphan girl had married a handsome youth who developed into a cruel and dissipated man. For three years Eleanor bore her trials in silence with a splendid pride; then her husband's sudden death set her free, and she abandoned herself happily to her absorbing love for her child, his young mother's delight.

Her friends had laughed, and said that Eleanor Merton could talk of nothing but "Reggie," and they were the bring them into my home—"
Godfrey flushed. "Is it their fault that they were born in the gutter, that they are dirty, ignorant and half clad? In the eyes of God, Eleanor, I believe those children are as dear as your spotless Reginald."

She looked at him aghast. "I shall or or forgive you," she said. "How dared you do it?" she cried again.

"I dared because I thought—I hoped—it might save you from this useless brooding, this awful misery—"
"Eleanor!" he protested.

"I shall do it!" she said firmly, and that Eleanor Merton could talk of nothing but "Reggie," and they were mother's delight.

Her friends had laughed, and said that Eleanor Merton could talk of nothing but "Reggie," and they were sick and tired of hearing of the little prodigy! So they came to visit her with less and less frequency, and truth to tell—she never missed their coming. One friend, at least, was faithful, and that was Godfrey Waring. He was a distant connection of Eleanor's, her friend from childhood and little Reggie's godpapa. Now he was also

Reggie's godpapa. Now he was also her chief counsellor in all important matters.

The happiest time of the year for Eleanor was the holiday season, and she thoroughly enjoyed the fun of Reggie's tiny stocking and his little Christmas tree.

The Christmas preparations when Reggie was approaching the mature age of four proved happier than any ever before. The boy was quite old enough to appreciate all sorts of wonderful things, and every evening for almost a week, after he was safely in almost a week, after he was safely hed, Eleanor, with Godfrey for an escort, visited the toy shops and bought the prettiest things she saw, and then on Christmas Eve Eleanor and Godfrey dressed the tree. It was nearly 11 c'clock before they had finished, and Godfrey was rewarded for his share of the work by an invitation to "come and take dinner with Reggie" the following day.

When Godfrey reached his rooms perhaps an hour after he left her he found a note from Eleanor awaiting him.

"She forgot to tell me the hour at which Reggie will dine," he said to himself with a smile as he tore open the envelope. But the words he read were these: "Reggie is ill. Come at

He hurried back to find doctors com ing and going and Eleanor half distracted, and when he caught the words "malignant diphtheria" he did not wonder at her alarm.

That night no one thought of sleep Day dawned and slowly dragged through all its awful length, and though all things were done which hu-man wisdom could suggest when night mit it to be removed.

Time went on, and though Eleanor's grief was no less absorbing it gradually became more quiet in its form.

Godfrey keenly dreaded for her the approach of Christmas time, and he felt greatly disturbed when important business kept him away from the city until late on Christmas Eve. It was too late to see Eleanor on his return, but he went to her early on Christmas morning and found her, to his horror, morning and tound her, to his horror, gazing with glassy eyes upon a Christmas tree, the counterpart of the one which they two had decorated the Christmas Eve before.

"Eleanor!" he said, "you will drive yourself mad! 'What then!" she answered, dully

"What then!" she answered, dully.
"At least I should be less miserable than I am now."
So during that awful anniversary day she lived over again her agony of grief, and Godfrey was powerless to tutn, even for a moment, the current of her thoughts.

"I thought you were Reggie's friend—and mine," she said hoarsely. "How much I was mistaken. Our bitterest enemy could have devised nothing half so cruel."

With these words she left the room

With these words she left the room, and Godfrey turned back to complete the ruin he had wrought.

Full an hour passed before he heard her step descending the stair. She thought that he had gone, and she started when she entered the room and saw him there. Her quick eyes noted the absence of the tree.

"How dared you do it?" she cried at last—"how dared you give away the toys I had bought for my own dead child?"

"They have made three living chil-

"They have made three living children happy, Eleanor—"
"Dirty beggars from the street. It was an insult to me and to Reginald's memory even to bring them into my home—"

"THE HOLY NIGHT." H. GRASS.

Oddities For Christma

TWEEDLEDUM AND TWEEDLEDER
Here is a group of Christmas novelies. Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dee are dolls and Humpty Dumpty is a pin cushion. A very pretty present for a baby is a silver spoon, with a loop han-dle, and which has in the chased bowl a representation of a nursery rhyme. These loop handles make the spoons very safe and comfortable for little fingers. As for the tiny balloon, that is an ornamental pin cushion.

Oysiers; radishes; celery-Clear soup; croūlons Boiled salmon, sauce mayonnaise, dressed cucumbers

Game (or chicken) pie.
Roast l'urkey, creamed chestnuts; sweet-polates; pease in cases; cranberries
Grape truit salad; cheese-strawsFrozen plum pudding; cakes Cottee; nuls and raisins

ter, over which a napkin has first Christmas down er, over which a napkin been laid.—Harper's Bazar.

A pretty doll in a stocking hung. While near her a soldierdoll bravely swung. When, lo! the timepiece struck twelve o'clock. And gave the mistletoe quile a shock Then the startled doll heard the soldier say "All right, little neighbor" li's Christmas Day."

After the gifts are all given, After the feasting is done, In front of the Christmas fire Is time for the Christmas tune

KEYSTONE STATE NEWS CONDENSED

PENSIONS GRANTED.

Epidemic of Diphtheria-Mysterious Death-Vote on Increase of Debt. Judge Appointed.

The pension list was increased during the past week by the addition of the folowing names: Thomas D. Wilson, Hoyddale, $6; John F. Morris, Phillipsburg, $10; Walter C. Cravin, Wilkinsburg, $6; John H. Hoffer, Clay-Lice, $12; William H. Cornman, Carille, $12; Daniel Switzer, Rouserville, $12; Daniel Seibert, Summerhill, $12; Augustus A. Sturl, Pottsville, $12; William McGinnis, McKees Rocks, $8; William P. Barr, Sterling Run, $12; Henry Sanborn, Russell, $10; Lyman Weeks, Girard, $8; John S. McCoy, Indiana, $12; William M. Gift, Snooks, $12; George McCray, Lemont Furnace, $10; James C. Farley, Gaines, $10; John F. Hosterman, Shippensville, $8; Martha M. Thempson, Mahoning, $8; Sarah Clark, Mansfeld, $20; Louisa Dobson, Fairmount City, $8.

The voters of DuBois will be asked to vote upon a proposition to increase the indebtedness of the borough $30,-

The voters of DuBois will be asked to vote upon a proposition to increase the indebtedness of the borough $30,•000 in addition to the $35,000 recently authorized, and for which the bonds have not been issued. This will bring the indebtedness almost up to the Himitations of the law. The increase is for the purpose of completing the water supply system from Anderson creek. The assessed valuation of the borough is $2,980,913, and the present debt is $109,113.54.

Beginning with January 10 the debt is $109,113.54.

Beginning with January 10 the wages of the Lehigh Valley railroad brakemen on the Packerton freight and coal runs of the Hazleton and Mahoning division will be increased from $1.75 to $1.55 and of flagmen, $1.85 to $1.95 per day. Brakemen on mine runs and yard engines will be advanced from $1.90 to $2.00, and all the other brakemen, with the exception of those on passenger runs, from $1.80 to $1.89.

The board of education at Philadel-from $1.80 to $1.89.

The board of education at Philadelphia notified the Philadelphia and Reading Coal Company, which has the contract for furnishing coal to the schools of that city, that the Central High schools have but three tons of coal on hand, and that unless a supply is obtained the school will be forced to close. One school was closed on account of the coal shortage.

Richard Byers, Richard Byers, a lumberman, whose relatives are in Clearfield county, was found dead in bed at a lumber camp near Dunlo. At the undertakers in Johnstown, a kinife wound was found in his heart. Later a pecket knife was found in the bed he occupied. There is a question as to whether it was murder or suicide. to whether it was murder or suicide. The burglar shot by Rev. D. B. Shellenberger, the postmaster, at Bannerville, died in his cell at the county iail. The burglar died without revealing his name. The burglar was shot while robbing the postofflee. The Bedford County Teachers' Institute closed after one of the most successful sessions in its history. County Superintendent J. Anson Wright was presented with a gold watch by the teachers.

Meyersdale Lodge No. 299, A. O. U. ence.
of H for n
the s abide he al fight
I li than restfu in th is als the f surel;
is jus
When world cover

prese As aring or succes and first scious speak over God scious rever he er we co how h

The holy priest assure new so the that new a crated to say when Christ text i low n is an undist of the home, one m birds in the ideas in the again the capass derful have gun I the st with restfurest urest u watch by the teachers.

Meyersdale Lodge No. 299, A. O. U.
W. was installed. R. L. Frazier, deputy grand organizer, of Wheeling,
W. Va., was assisted in organizing the lodge by Deputy Grand Master
Ward M. Sackett.

At the closing exercises of the fall term of Juniata college at Huntingdon, Acting President I. Harvey Brumbaugh announced to the students that $2,500 had been contributed to the endowment fund of the college during the term.

lege during the term.

Miss Pansy A. Newton, of Perry, township, won the title of champion speller of Lawrence county in the contest which took place in New Castle. Each school district in the county furnished its champion to compete in the event.

Through the efforts of Mayor Gibpote in the event.

Through the efforts of Mayor Gibson 20 carloads of hard coal were secured for York from the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company.

H. B. Mitchell & Co., of Harrisburg, shipped 11 carloads to York for use in the public schools.

By order of the court at Greensburg Joseph Roche, who was a prisoner in the county jail as a suspect in the murder of Louis Ernette at North Jeannette, but who was not held for the crime by the coroner's held for the crime by the coroner's jury, was released.

jury, was released.

Frank Hager, of Johnstown, at McKeesport, suffering from partial asphyxiation. Hager turned the gas down low in his room and it is supposed to have flickered out. He was found unconscious. He will recover.

Governot W. A. Stone announced that Frederick M. Trexler will be appointed judge of Lehigh county to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Edwin Albright.

Judge Edwin Albright.

Judge Gray at Scranton, temporarily stopped evidence before the strike commission of exorbitant freight rates by saying that employers who cannot pay fair wages ought to get out of business.

The public schools of Conemaugh were cased owing to an epidemic of diphtheria.

Fire damaged the pattern of Monte of the control of the Fire damaged the pottery of Mayer Bros., Leaver Falls, to the extent of $3,000.

53,000.

Paul Forest, an Italian miner employed at the Moorewild mills, Mt. Pleasant, dropped dead while at work, being due to heart trouble. Hyndman is without light and water owing to a difference between the town council and the light and water companies over contracts.

The Reading Railroad Company has over 50 locomotives in service hauling coal trains to Philadelphia and other Eastern cities.

Governor-elect Pennypacker has announced the appointment as his private secretary of Henry S. Dot-terer, of Philadelphia.

as instruments of torture for a wom-an's heart.

It was late when their task was finished and be bade her good-night.
Her face haunted him all night, and in the morning he went to her again.

Before the house he saw three tat-tered, wistful little vagrants loitering, and as he passed them he heard one tered, wistful little vagrants loitering, and as he passed them he heard one say, "Gee! wisht I cud git in dere wanst—jist ter see dem tings clus to!"

He glauced up, and where the draperies had been pushed aside he caught a glimpse of Reginald's Christmas tree.

"Mrs. Merton is out!" he said in surprise, repeating the maid's words.
"Gone to church, you say! Yes, I'll come in and wait."

come in and wait.

come in and wait."

He was glad. He glanced at his watch; it was a full hour until the service would be over. He went to the window and pushed the curtains aside to look out, and a shrill cry of delight came from the urchins outside-whom came from the urchins outside—whom he had forgotten—as they caught a better view of the gayly decorated tree. In an instant his resolution was formed, and beckoning to the children he ran and opened the front door.

"I'm not Santa Claus," he said, "but I'm a friend of his—and you haven't had any presents from him yet, have you?"

They grinned, abashed, and vigorously shook their heads.

"Did he bring you any toys last Christmas?"

They shook their heads again.
"I thought not. Well, come in; he's left a double supply for you here."

left a double supply for you here."
In stupefied amazement they entered, a tattered, dirty crew, whose jargon when their tongues were loosened Godfrey could hardly understand.
Quickly and thoroughly he did his work and the tree was stripped and the toys divided among them in an incredibly short time.

He was just pulling down the last tinsel garland amid their shricks of rapture when he looked up and saw tinse garanta and take shows of rapture when he looked up and saw Eleanor—a tall black figure — in the doorway. Her veil was thrown back and her face was white and shadowy. Godfrey saw her sway and she seemed about to fall. He sprang forsections of the same seemed about to fall. He sprang forward to support her, but she shrank away from him.

through all its awful length, and though all things were done which human wisdom could suggest when night came little Reginald was dead.

Eleanor's grief was frantic, passionate, pitiful. No wonder her friends feared for her reason. Godfrey alone was of any comfort to her, and that only because she could talk to him incessantly of her dead child.

Until Twelfth Night Regie's Christmas tree stood just as they had dressed it, and Eleanor would not permit it to be removed.

Time went on, and though Eleanor's grief was no less absorbing it gradually became more quiet in its form.

Certain had been bought for little Reginald so long before. It seemed monstrous that these playthings, made for a child's your child—whom I loved, too—or to help you in any way, and I thought that what I have done might make it easier for you in the future, that was all. In the purpose and used again and again and again and sinstruments of torture for a woman's heart.

It was late when their task was grief was no less absorbing it gradually became more quiet in its form.

Certain had been bought for little Reginald so long before. It seemed monstrous that delight, could be thus perverted from their purpose and used again and again and again and sinstruments of torture for a woman's heart.

It was late when their task was given my life to give you back your child—whom I loved, too—or to help you in any way, and I thought that what I have done might make it easier for you in the future, that was all. In the purpose and used again and again and again and sinstruments of torture for a woman's heart.

It was late when their task was france heavy which had been bought for little Reginald so long before. It seemed monstrous that what I have done might make it easier for you in the future, that was all. In the purpose and used again and again and again and purpose and virtues of a chord. I will knowledge of the failings and virtues of a hopeles and lifelong love, "he said, after a moment's pause. "Eleanor, I would himself as he helped her cold an evinces a wonderful knowledge of the failings and virtues of each child, scolding and praising each according to the merits of their family behavior. Finally, however, he bestows his blessings on them all, and promising to give each a present on the next morning he disappears. Before retiring to rest that night each member of the family places one of his or her shoes on the table in the parlor. The door is then locked, but the next morning proves the truth of Santa Claus' promises, for resting upon the table before her and her face tunned from him.

"Even now I am not sorry it is done," he said slowly, "and I hope in time you may come to believe I did it in all kind-rest to you. And now at least you.

A necessity of the Coloma Christmas table was a generous plate of raised doughnuts. A formula for these, which is contributed by a famous New England housekeeper, is as follows: One cupful of lard or butter, two cupfuls ness to you. And now, at least, you will not refuse to say good-bye."

With her face still hidden she blindly stretched out her hand and he took oupful of lara or outer, two cupins of milk, one cupful of yeast, three cupfuls of sugar, four or five eggs, nutmeg and a pinch of salt. Warm together the milk and lard, then add the yeast; stir in flour enough to make a batter, and let it stand over night; then add it, misunderstanding her.

"Good-bye—forever," he said.

The small white fingers grasped his own, and still he did not understand.

Now she was weeping silently and he Now she was weeping silently and he was filled with pity for her.

"Poor child," he said, "if only some one could comfort you—where I so la-mentably have failed."

The small white clinging fingers sud-denly carried his hand to her hidden

"Eleanor!" he cried. "Godfrey," she murmured, still clinging to his hand.

The new year was still young when Eleanor Merton became Godfrey War-

Eleanor Merton became Godfrey Waring's wife.
But when the next Christmastide drew uear Eleanor said to her husband with a tremulous smile, 'Godfrey, I want to ask your indulgence. Will you take me out to-night and again help me to select some toys and a little tree? I have found some poor, neglected children—some of 'God's little ones'—who will have no merry Christmas otherwise. And I want—I want you to help me dress the tree, and to let me help me dress the tree, and to let me have them all here and make them happy, on Christmas Day—for Reginald's sake—"

And Godfrey did not say no.—The

For a man who has learned to do something well, and do it better than the run of men, there is always a demand in the world of affairs.

Washington Irving's home on East Seventeenth street, New York, in which the author lived for years, has been sold by a relative, Henry Morris.

