Twenty minutes later the Canada went to the bottom. At the time of the collision there were 110 people on board the Canada. Five were lost, the others were rescued. Those who perished were: Alfred Thibeault, ticket agent of the com-pany at Quebec, and his two sons, aged 12 and 15; Purser Bonneterre, of

The shock of the collision aroused the sleeping passengers. The Canada at once began to settle and as the Cape Breton did not appear to be seriously damaged the passengers were hurriedly transferred to this steamer. In the excitement some of them jumped overboard and were picked up by boats from the Canada and the Cape Breton.

The Japanese were preceded by two battallons, who walked into the Russian ambuscade. They received a murderous rife and artillery fire at close range and were wiped out, only one or two escaping.

Rear Admiral Togo reports that on Tuesday a part of the fleet bombarded the west costs of the Liao Tung peninsula, near Kai Chau, and drove back a military train that was approaching southward. No trains have been seen since. The enemy was driving in troops and throwing upworks, evidently expecting a landing of the Japanese on that point and making all preparations to prevent it. Small gunboats sent in by Rear Admiral Togo bombarded the Russians at work, and it is believed caused considerable damage.

Rumors are in circulation in St. Petersburg to the effect that a great naval battle has taken place off Port Arthur, in which two Russian and four Japanese battleships were sunk. No confirmation of the rumor can be obtained.

This attitude will be adhered to regardless of consequences to Perdicaris.

Ninchwang, driving out the Russians.

The occupation of the town was accomplished only after stubborn fighting that lasted throughout the day, June 8. That the losses were severe on the Russian side at least is evident from Gen. Kuropatkin's report of the engagement, but the number of men lost is not intimated in the text of the dispatch made public.

What Kuroki's plans are now is the subject of much conjecture in St. Petersburg. Siu Yen gives opportunity for advance in three directions—on Hal Cheng, on Kai Ping, or on Niuchwang. One conjecture here is that Kuroki's activity is merely a feint to distract the attention of the Russian army from the relief of Port Arthur and another is that he is really intending to give battle in force, if possible, to the main army under the Russian commander-inchief.

ADMIRAL TAKES GLOOMY VIEW.

The Sultan Accedes to the Demands of Bandit Raisuli for Release of Captives.

American marines have been landed at Tangier for the protection of the Belgian legation. Disorders have broken out in the commercial capital of Morocco and Admiral Chadwick, as the commander of the largest force on the scene, dispatched armed force as an act of humanity and international comity. The landing was reported to the Navy Department at Washington by a cipher message. Not all of it was made public. The part that was withheld contains information as to conditions in the Moorish city that it was not deemed advisable to give out. It is known that the Admiral takes a gloomy view of the state of affairs and indirectly leaves the impression on the minds of officers of the navy work is probably ahead for the entire force under his command. The request for a force was made to consul General Gummere by the Belgian diplomat. It is the understanding here that the Belgian legation is outside of the city in the hills, where the tribesmen have been making raids ever since the exploit of Rasull in a report sent him by the British Consul at Fez, the holy capital of the Sultan, that Abdul Aziz has agreed to the terms imposed by the bandit chief. Gummere has no confirmation of the greport. American marines have been landed
