FRIGHTFULLY BURNED.
While Two Brothers Write in Terrible Agony, Striking Miners Hoot at and Mock Them.

Last Friday while working in the mines, Alvin and Herbert Statler, sons of Emanuel Statler, of this place, met with an accident that came very near costing them their lives. They had lit the fuse to put off a shot, then walked out of their room, turned at corner and stood on the heading until they heard the report of the blast. They had no sooner stepped around the corner to see what execution the shot did, than a terrific powder explosion took place near them, which set fire to their clothes and burned them in a most horrible manner. One of them was so stunned that he could help himself but little, and had it not been for the heroic efforts of his brother, he would have lost his life. Clarence, another brother, who was working in a nearby room, also rendered valuable assistance to both of them. The cause of the accident was a blown-out shot, which threw some burning cartridge paper into a can of powder.

They were taken out of the mines as soon as possible, and the news of the accident soon reached the ears of a lot of striking miners at Coal Run. In a very short time about fifty or seventy-five strikers had assembled near the mine, and they at once began to cheer and gloat over the horrible accident. "Two more scabs on their way to hell," and other heathenish remarks of the same order were freely uttered and belabored out by the assembled strikers. The father of the young men, who had been at work in the Meager mine, was promptly telephoned for, and as soon as he arrived he was also hooted at and mocked by the inhuman fiends among the strikers, the class of cattle that old Lou Smith and his anarchistic Commercial uphold, aid and abet in their meanness. Respectable citizens what do you think of such people? We think they are hardly fit to live, even among wild beasts. If there is such a place as a real, old-fashioned fire and brimstone hell, and most people believe there is, the fellows that gloat over the pain and sufferings of the Statler brothers will go there sure, and the hounds of hades will chase the souls of such fiends over the hills of damnation through all the ceaseless ages of eternity. Mark our words and see if some of the heartless wishes of the strikers do not come home to them with compound interest. They are not through with this old world yet, and the old world is not through with them. "Chickens usually come home to roost," if you take notice.

As soon as the Statler brothers could be brought home, medical aid was summoned, and they are now getting along as well as can be expected. While their burns are very serious and painful, the boys will recover. They were burned but little in their faces, but their arms, hands and backs are frightful to behold. It is believed, however, by their physician, that they will be able to resume work in a few months, which they will do if they can. Both of them are very honorable young men, and they are highly esteemed in this community by all respectable people. They are young men of very correct habits and have always been industrious, ever ready to improve their conditions in life and take care of their earnings. Alvin saved enough of his earnings in the mines to educate himself with, and only a few weeks ago he returned from Cumberland, Md., where he entered the Cumberland Commercial College, last year, to take a business course. During his vacation he went in the mines again to earn enough to complete his course, so that he could follow something better than mining in future years.

The Statlers were for years in the mine operating business themselves, and the boys had too much business sense to continue in a hopeless and useless strike, knowing that the companies were offering all they were justified in paying in the face of the present dull coal market. Therefore, instead of remaining idle and squandering what they had saved by hard work and correct habits, they went to work, as they should have done, and as all others who can get work should do. Compare the Statler boys to those who are gloating over their sad accident, and you will see that they rank as far above their traducers and their heartless enemies as one of God's noblest creations ranks above the vilest mud he used in making snakes and slimy reptiles like old Lou Smith. And they'll not go begging, either, as most of their traducers will as soon as they meet with bad luck.

HOW THEY LIE.
Misleading Statements of the Strike Organs Exposed.

The men who for some time have uselessly been trying to keep up a strike in the Elk Lick and Meyersdale coal region, never had much besides lies, blow, bluster and threats to rely on to win out, and the more hopeless their fight becomes, the more desperately they resort to having lies published. The following, which last week appeared in the Georges Creek Press is only a fair sample of the ridiculous lies circulated by those who have the shattered and broken strike in charge:

THE MEYERSDALE SITUATION.
Conditions in the Meyersdale region do not appear to be changing to any great extent. There are now less than 400 men working in the entire region, where over two thousand wrought last December. Of these, about 75 are English-speaking men, and the rest imported Huns, Italians and Slavs. The company brings these men in one week and lose them the next, or as soon as the men see what sort of affair they have lugged them into.

THE REAL SITUATION.
There is scarcely a man or woman in this entire region, strikers included, that does not know that the Press item is a clumsy and ridiculous lie. The editor of the Press may have published the item in good faith, but the information he hands out through his paper is nevertheless a lie from beginning to end.

Now, what are the facts? The facts are as follows: There never was a time when 2,000 men were employed in this coal region. The figures are too high by at least 500, and when the strike was first declared there were probably not over 1,200 men employed in the region. At the present time there are nearly or quite 600 men employed in the region, divided about as follows: 300 in the Somerset Coal Company's mines in the lower end of the region, about 50 in the Chapman and Tub Mill mines, 75 in Merchants mines Nos. 1 and 2, from 10 to 12 in the Meager mine, and the balance at Niverton.

At the last named place, at which none of the miners struck, about one-fourth of the men are Slavs, the balance Americans. At the Merchants mines, Chapman and Tub Mill, at which about 125 men are employed, all are English-speaking people, except about 28 experienced Italian miners from the north end of the county. The great bulk of the miners at this end of the region are well known citizens and practical miners of this community.

At the lower end of the region, where about 300 miners are employed, at least two-thirds of them are English-speaking people, and many of them are among the best practical miners that have been working in those mines for years. It will therefore be seen that enough men are at work in this region to mine all the coal our operators have sale for during the present depression in the coal trade. With very few exceptions they have been sticking right to their work, too. Of course, we know of a few instances where men started to work and were persuaded to quit by the United Mine Workers, and we also know that some of that class returned later and asked for employment again, but were refused. Only last week seventy of the old employees of the Somerset Coal Company in the lower end of the region applied for their former places, and out of the seventy all but 24 were refused.

Is there a strike in this region? Yes, there is, among a certain class, a large percentage of which the operators do not want at any price. Nearly all the mines are running, and our operators have no trouble in filling all the orders they can get. Several months ago all the mines were idle, except Niverton, while now nearly all are running, and yet some foolish miners are contending that they have brighter prospects to win the strike now than ever. What fools!

DEMOCRATIC TIMES.
A few years ago, when this country was under Democratic rule, the price of coke was 90c a ton and wages at a corresponding figure. There wasn't a bootblack stand in Connellsville. People were Democratic and blacked their own shoes, chiefly because they hadn't any spare change to pay somebody else for doing the job. To-day, one can get a shine on almost any corner, and a good one, too. This is a homely but striking illustration of the difference between Democratic and Republican rule. Is it any wonder the people of this country do not want any more Democratic times? —Connellsville Courier.

A Merchant Cured After Having Given Up Hope.
Foley & Co., Chicago.
Gentlemen:—I was afflicted with Kidney and Bladder trouble for six years and had tried numerous preparations without getting any relief and had given up hope of ever being cured when FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE was recommended to me. After using one bottle I could feel the effect of it, and after taking six fifty-cent bottles, I was cured of Kidney and Bladder trouble and have not felt so well for the past twenty years and I owe it to FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. James Smith, Bentons Ferry, W. Va.

A Veteran of the Civil War Cured After Ten Years of Suffering.
R. A. Cray, J.P., of Oakville, Ind., writes:—"Most of the time for ten years I was confined to my bed with some disease of the kidneys. It was so severe I could not move part of the time. I consulted the best medical skill available, but got no relief until FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE was recommended to me. I am grateful to be able to say that it entirely cured me."
