ROOSEVELT LANDSLIDE

Democrats Concede Overwhelming Popular Sentiment Against Them.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER RANG TRUE

He is Everywhere Praised, While Judge Parker, on the Other Hand, is Regarded As the Candidate of Wall Street.

[Special Correspondence.]
Harrisburg, Sept. 20.

Now that the political campaign can be said to be fairly under way, interest is taken in the reports that are coming from every section of Pennsylvania regarding the sentiment of the voters toward the rival candidates for the presidency. Men employed in the several state departments who mingle with the voters in their respective counties are in a splendid position to gauge the public pulse. Within the last few days a careful canvass has been made for frank, unbiased and absolutely impartial reports from these men, and visitors who are brought here on official and private business, and there is a remarkable unanimity indicating a great popular tide of sentiment in favor of President Roosevelt's election.

Democrats privately admit this to be a fact, and when talking to friends many of them admit that they have already given up the fight.

Roosevelt's letter of acceptance has probably had more to do with emphasizing the popular feeling regarding his candidacy than any other feature or phase of the canvass.

The President's letter of acceptance rang true. It was characteristic of the man, through and through—honest, frank, straightforward, fearless and patriotic.

His letter may well be perused by all. All will agree, although they may not agree with all of the President's views, that every subject is frankly discussed, that there is no lurking in the dark, no skulking, no ambiguity nor insincerity. Mr. Roosevelt has something important to say, and goes about it in a straightforward, manly way. True, his letter may not abound in figurative language and literary elegance, but it is the product of a man deeply in earnest, possessed of the highest motives.

At the outset Theodore Roosevelt was beset, and probably will continue to be beset, with adverse criticism from the Democratic party, and in every instance he has boldly defended himself; in fact, vindicated himself. The Panama question, the pensions matter, the government expenditure and others are ably defended and justified.

Certainly his attitude toward the Philippine Islands question is just, equitable and sensible. He would give the inhabitants self government and do everything possible to better their condition, but he would be slow to make rash promises, to break faith with the people of the Philippines.

Mr. Roosevelt points with pride to Governor Taft's admirable administration in the islands, and shows how disastrous it would be to do anything that would again incite insurrection, now that affairs are progressing so well there.

President Roosevelt's stand on the money question is also admirable, straightforward and certain, no warring, no equivocation. He justly upbraids the Democratic party for its stand on the currency question. "Absurd," says Roosevelt, "that the gold standard is irrevocably fixed. What assurance of a stable currency have we? What could we be sure of with a party in power that was not honest enough to insert the all-important plank—the money plank—in its platform?"

Last, but not least, President Roosevelt is highly respected and admired by the nations abroad. He is an all-around man, with snap and go—not a puppet—who has come into international prominence. Even in England, where the Republican party's principles are not especially popular, Mr. Roosevelt is greatly admired. A man with a negative personality, one insincere, unpatriotic and selfish, could never have gained this world-wide popularity.

The rank and file of the Democrats of Pennsylvania do not enthuse over the candidacy of Parker. He is looked upon as the candidate of the Wall street money power, and as not in any way representing the sentiments of the old-fashioned Democrats. The feelings of these Democrats are expressed by Thomas Watson, the Populist's candidate for president, who a few days ago said:

"We want to drive out from the temple the money changers who defile it. Can I hope to do inside the Democratic party what Bryan so signally failed to do? For eight years he exerted all of his marvelous powers to accomplish something inside the Democratic party. Back of him were hundreds of strong newspapers. He went into the fight followed by a powerful organization; he secured more votes than Grover Cleveland ever had, and yet because he could not succeed within eight years the Democratic party repudiated him and trampled his platform under foot.

"What do the greedy corporation hordes expect from Parker? Are they doing this simply for health and pleasure, or is it a matter of business with them? It is high time that the people of this country woke up to the fact that corporate interests represented by Belmont, Pat McCarran, Lamont, Gorman, Carlisle and Olney are not in the habit of spending their time and their money on any candidate unless they have good reason to believe that they will get value received."

A DARK LANTERN GAME

Democratic Scheme to Capture Congressional Districts Uncarried.

PENROSE SOUNDS A WARNING

Backed By the National Committee, the Democrats in Pennsylvania Have Been Making a "Still Hunt" Canvass.

[Special Correspondence.]
Philadelphia, Sept. 20.

Chairman Penrose, of the Republican state committee, has sounded an alarm to the Republicans of every debatable congressional district in Pennsylvania.

The chairman has discovered that the Democrats are making a "still hunt" in more than half a dozen districts in this state, and that they are being liberally supplied with funds by the Democratic national committee to elect their candidates. Reports received from several Republican county leaders regarding the quiet moves of the Democratic workers in this state were verified by Chairman Penrose when he went to New York a few days ago and ascertained from the confidential reports made to the Republican congressional committee that the Democrats are engaged in a general campaign through the country to capture the next house of representatives by dark-lantern methods.

Chairman Cowherd, of the Democratic congressional committee, co-operating with Chairman Taggart, of the Democratic national committee, has indicated the districts in each state which it is proposed to make a determined effort to carry. They are discarding the usual "brass band" style of campaigning and hope to catch the Republicans off their guard by secret but effective work in the districts in which they are most likely to win by the use of extraordinary tactics and with a liberal supply of money.

The Democrats have not had so much money for congressional campaigning for many years, and they are farming it out where it will do the most good.

They have figured out that with but 20 Republican majorities in the present house of representatives they have but to win over 16 districts to get control of the next house and elect their leader, John Sharp Williams, to preside in place of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, the present Republican speaker. They count on a gain of four votes in New York, as many in Ohio, two in New Jersey, one in Delaware, at least four in Pennsylvania, one in Connecticut, two in Indiana, two in Wisconsin and one in California, among others. These estimates were probably obtained at the headquarters of the Democratic congressional committee, and they give an inkling of what the Democratic campaign managers are driving at.

The claims for Pennsylvania were naturally interesting to Chairman Penrose, who has determined to disapprove the Democratic schemers and block their game at once. In the districts in which he knows the Democrats are playing their cards for secret work to capture what should be Republican seats in congress he has instituted a thorough and systematic canvass and has appealed directly to the voters in many cases to warn them of the danger to the Republican cause. He has pointed out that it is of the greatest importance that the efforts of the Democrats should be met promptly and energetically. The loss of a single congressman in Pennsylvania may place the house of representatives in Washington in jeopardy and thereby greatly embarrass the business interests of the country, in which Pennsylvania has such a vital concern.

NO REPUBLICAN SHOULD CUT HIS TICKET.

The election of the Republican candidates for the legislature should be carefully watched.

"The Republican nominees for the state senate and house of representatives should be loyally and energetically supported," said Chairman Penrose, "for the reason that on their election depends the selection of a United States senator for a term of six years from the 4th of next March, and the same exigency exists for the support of the legislature to choose a United States senator as those stated for the election of Republican congressmen.

"In view of the importance attached to the election of the officials herein mentioned, it is plainly the duty of every Republican to refuse to support the claims of individuals, no matter how speciously pressed, unless they are recognized as the regular nominees of the Republican party.

"The speaker of the house of representatives at Washington or Harrisburg might be lost or won by a single vote, and, therefore, I cannot too emphatically impress upon you the importance of supporting the regular Republican nominees, who, if elected, will comply with the usages of the party in attending the party caucuses and abiding by their decrees.

"In view of the issues involved and the embarrassments that might be occasioned to the state and nation," continued Chairman Penrose, "it is to be hoped that every Republican will exert himself in behalf of the regular nominees of his party, in which event I can assure you in advance that a great and overwhelming victory will be recorded in Pennsylvania in November for the entire Republican ticket from top to bottom."

A Sample of "Hindend Henry's" Soft Twaddle.

Last November The Gleaner received a letter from W. A. Brubaker, a Prohibition organizer working in Texas, enclosing one dollar for a year's subscription for a brother living in Hooversville, this county. The tone and spirit of that letter impressed us very much and showed true brotherly love and devotion. We followed that letter with our prayers and hoped that some day the erring brother would be led to see the light as revealed in political righteousness. Now the brother writes us from Michigan that his heart's desire has been fulfilled, his brother has been converted and his gratitude to The Gleaner finds expression in a letter elsewhere printed. All this is cheerful news to The Gleaner, and we thank God and take courage. But to make that joy complete we ought to have some further assurance that the brother has really turned his back on the old whisky party and will henceforth join in the good work for prohibition. Shall we receive that assurance?—Berlin Gleaner.

Great is "Hindend Henry" when his great editorials are backed by his prayers. But if it takes nearly one year of ranting and mud-throwing through his paper, plus nearly one year of "Hindend Henry's" influential prayers to convert one Hooversville Republican, how long will it take "Cookie, the half-baked," to convert the nation to the Prohibition doctrine? "Worst of all, "Hindend Henry" shows all the symptoms of a "doubting Thomas," for he says to make his joy complete "we ought to have some further assurance that the brother has really turned his back on the old whisky party."

Geewhiz! Can't he take the reformed man's brother's word for it? If "Cookie, the half-baked," can't fully and implicitly believe a Prohibition organizer, is it any wonder that so many people will not believe the saintly and Phariseical editor of the Gleaner, who makes ugly faces at Republicans and Democrats, calls them vile names, but yet claims to save them by his prayers?

"Hindend Henry," or "Cookie, the half-baked," is a jay from Jayville, and he is so soft that if he were to fall head first on a feather tick, his pate would be smashed. However, no brains would be lost.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus with One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler, of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Clebourne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some souse meat, and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life, and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the drug-gist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner, and one small bottle cured the three of us." For sale by E. H. Miller.

THE FARMER AND HIS VOTE.

All will remember how during the campaign of 1888 and again in 1892 the Democratic press and spell-binders were disseminating utterances concerning the farm mortgages of the agricultural portion of our Western states. Tables were compiled and circulated which while though untrue, were based to some extent upon facts. However, during the campaigns of 1896 and 1900, the farm mortgage argument was dropped, and now it is not even heard of. The fact is that under the splendid operation of the Dingley tariff the farmer has not only been able to cancel these mortgages, but at the present time instead of paying Eastern capitalists ten per cent. upon his loan, he himself stands ready to loan to his Eastern competitor, either on the farm or in the manufacturing interests, all the money he may need at from four to six per cent. This is not alone true of the farmers of any one state. Perhaps in Kansas the farmer is better off than in many other states, and yet without exception the splendid values which all our Western farmers have reaped during the past six or seven years have made them not only independent, but possessed of a large workable surplus to use in reinvestment or in loaning where it may bring a good return. It can hardly be doubted that these prosperous farmers who have burned their mortgages and now have money to burn instead of corn, will vote next November for Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

WHAT IS LIFE?
In the last analysis nobody knows, but we do know that it is under strict law. Abuse that law even slightly, pain results. Irregular living means derangement of the organs, resulting in Constipation, Headache or Liver trouble. Dr. King's New Life Pills quickly readjusts this. It's gentle, yet thorough. Only 25c. at E. H. THE WAY OF THE RAIL IN THE WORLD.

Unique World's Fair Edition of the "Book of The Royal Blue."

The September number "Book of the Royal Blue," issued by the Passenger Department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which will come from press on September 12th, is entirely devoted to special interests at the World's Fair.

Its leading feature is an excellently prepared article on "The Way of the Rail in the World," by J. G. Pangborn, who has charge of the Baltimore & Ohio exhibit at the World's Fair, and which has been illustrated from photographs taken during the present month.

The B. & O. exhibit, which is the most complete of its kind in existence, and the result of nearly fifteen years' research, presents all types of locomotives, various cars, railway equipment, photographs, etc., both European and American, from the beginning of railway transportation. Mr. Pangborn, who made a study of the progress of railways throughout the world under a special commission of the Field Columbian Museum of Chicago, is the author of several books on railways, notable among them is the "World's Railways." Another article by Mr. Pangborn on the "Locomotive Tonnage at the World's Fair" comments on the great amount of idle motive power on exhibition in the Transportation Building.

One, two and three-day itineraries give pointers to the prospective World's Fair visitors, whose time of sight seeing at the Fair is limited.

Pen sketches of various exhibits are also given, and the entire volume is uniquely illustrated with snap shot photographs at random throughout the grounds.

For those intending to visit the Fair, as well as for those who cannot make the trip, this particular number is most valuable, as it presents the greatest of World's Fairs in a photographically realistic manner.

The edition will be limited. Single copies can be obtained for 5 cents each, on application to D. B. Martin, Manager Passenger Traffic, Baltimore, Md. Regular subscription, 50 cents per annum.

CURED OF LAME BACK AFTER 15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

"I had been troubled with lame back for fifteen years, and I found a complete recovery in the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says John G. Bisher, Gilliam, Ind. This liniment is also without an equal for sprains and bruises. It is for sale by E. H. Miller.
