and established human religions; some of the old, true and established social restraints. And if we look at our modern society very closely we see it not only appearing here and there among the young men and the young women, but also among some others that are not yet so young, too much freedom, perhaps, among the old if you please, when they throw aside the old fashioned feminine graces, modesties, proprieties, too much freedom in de-meanor and deportment, hoping thus to show, perhaps, that they are eman-cipated. But, as some one has remarked, such freedom is not the result of high-er education, or culture, or advance-ment, or progress, but of a dull and stupid ignorance. It is a reversion of the lesson of Peter's vision, and always to call all things common and un-clean.

The Making of a Christian: His Speech.—Psa. 145. 1-12, 21; Matt. 10. 32, 33.

Matt. 10. 32, 63. The author of Psalm 145 would glorify God wth his utterances: He would "bless the name of God"; he would "speak of his glorious honor." He declares that men shall "speak of his might," and "declare his great-ness." The Lord was set forth as nigh to "all that call upon him." Every word of the mouth to the psalmist was to be spoken to the hca-or of God. In Matthew we have de-clared the fact that whosoever, whether preacher or hearer, who "confesses" Christ, acknowledges in the face of persecution his Lord and Master, shall be confessed by him. He who fails to do this, and thus de-nies Christ, may expect nothing but denial by the Master. The heart may believe unto righteousnes, but with the "mouth" confession must be made unto salvation. The whole trend of these Scriptures is that the words we speak are an important factor in the destiny of the soul. Two months ago we considered the birth as related to that same end. No factor is more important in character making tha that of speech. Many a man is destroyed by an un-ruly tongue. James says it is un-tamable. The psalmist said, "I sald I will take heed unto my ways, that I sin not with my tongue." "Mow for-cible," said Job, "are right words!" And Solomon declared, "A word fit-ly spoken is like apples of gold in pic-tures of silver." Hence how import-ant in building, character there be right speech. Many of the sins of our lives are sins of the tongue. And Laurentlus said, "There are as many kinds of sins of the tongue as there are letters in the alphabet." Con-sider— Things to avoid in Speech. This His will, include certainly profanity, falsehood, gossip and slander, ob-scenity and unkindness, and all the innumerable kinds of speech. All loose ness, all cutting, uncharitable speech, must be avoided if we would make a Christian. A whole lesson might well be avoided if we would make a Christian. A whole lesson might well be avoided if we would make a Christian. A whole lesson might Lesson Thoughts. Lesson Thoughts. It is not always eloquence that is needed to witness for Christ; any tongue that can utter a word may be a useful instrument under God's direc-tion. We may confess Christ by our words, but we should confirm 'the words we speak, and the signs by which we should do it are a holy and consistent life.

SPECIALTIES IN PRINTING. Succeed, Perfection Must Be Sought in Some Particular Line.

Printing during the last few years has taken on a very different form from the old-time system, when every has taken on a very different form from the old-time system, when every printing office was expected to be equipped for almost any kind of work that came along; says the Progressive Printer. The business is fast being di-vided into specialties and this has been found much better, as the work has in-creased to such proportions and is of such a diversified character that it has been found almost impossible to organ-ize a plant and the help to operate it in all the branches profitably under the old-time system. Some houses turn their attention almost exclusively to catalogue work, while others adapt themselves to all the requirements of office stationery; others again turn their attention to railroad and large corpor-ation printing. This, too, is divided, as some are adapted for the blanks re-quired, while others turn their atten-tion to the advertising matter, such as folders, time tables and other requi-sites of the passenger department. The enormous quantity of printing used would be a surprise to the unitisted thin to the advertising matter, such as folders, time tables and other requi-sites of the passenger department. The enormous quantity of printing used would be a surprise to the unitiated. It is not an uncommon thing to-day to receive orders for a million catalogs of many pages, and the blanks used by some of the larger corporations run up into many millions. This all requires special machinery of the most costly character, to be handled successfully in any of these various specialized busi-amount of capital. It was once thought that the improved facilities for turning out work, in the way of machinery, etc., would decrease to an alarming ex-tent the number of people that would find employment, but the reverse has been the case: there are more people employed to-day in all the different branches of printing and bookbinding than at any previous time. The de-mand has kept in advance of the out-put, and all the makers of machiner; for the different branches of printing are taxed to their utmost; althougi, they have increased their capacity for turning out machinery of an improved character, some of them wonderful new inventions, as fast as prudence would warrant. The specializing work has been of great benefit, not only to print-ers but to the consumers of printing, as they now know where work such as they require can be obtained to the best advantage. Then, too, it has necessarily improved the quality to a very great extent. A large plant adapted specially for catalognes or for newspapers is not fitted to turn out the smaller stationery needed by a large concern as well as a smailer office equipped, for this particular line of work, and being each trained to han-dle its own particular specialty, much better results are obtained, at a corre-spondingly less expense. To-day, to be a successful printer in the large cities one has to choose from the different better results are obtained, at a corre-spondingly less expense. To-day, to be a successful printer in the large cities one has to choose from the different special lines and turn all his energy to that particular branch, otherwise he will find himself in a very unsatisfac-tory position. It will be difficult to do printing profitably in all its diversified lines. This is well known and admitted by those experienced in the trade and by those experienced in the trade, and they are bending their energies to per-fect themselves in some particular line, for which they and their machinery are To be successful, spe best adapted. Origin of the Honeymoon. The honeymoon used to last a month. The accepted notion is that it must be spent away from home in it must be spent away from home in order that the happy pair may get thoroughly acquainted without being victims of the curlosity of relatives and friends. It is so called from the habit of the ancient Germans of drinking "hydromel," which is a mix-ture of honey and water, for 30 days after marriage. Hydromel ferment-ed contains enough alcohol to make a man intoxicated in short order, so that the honeymoon really was a royal old drunk. Attila, the Hun, indulged so freely at his wedding that he died.—New York Press.

Have you lifted up the lamp for others That has guided your own glad feet? Have you echoed the loving message That seemed to you so sweet? It is a great thing to know when to speak and when to keep silence. A good word, spoken out of season, is like an arrow shot when the game has flown past. "Know thine oppor-tunity" was written on the temple at Delphos. First, do not speak until the right moment; second, do not al-low the right moment to go without speaking."

low the right moment to go without speaking. When Latimer was on trial for heresy, he heard the scratch of a pan behind the tapestry. In a moment he-bethought himself that every word he spoke was taken down, and he says he was very careful what words he uttered. Behind the veil that hides eternity is a record-book in which our every syllable is taken down. Even the most trivial are not forgotten, for the Lord Jesus tells us "that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Never think khd words are wasted; Bread on waters cast are they.
