In Memory of Frederick J. Anspach.

The subject of this sketch, whose sudden death was announced in last week's Star, passed peacefully away at his residence in Philadelphia, between the hours of five and six o'clock, Wednesday evening, June 21st, 1905, after an illness of several weeks' duration. The funeral took place at three o'clock p. m., Saturday, the 24th inst., and all that was mortal of the deceased was laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery, within four squares of his residence.

Mr. Anspach was subject to acute rheumatism, and that malady was the cause of his death. He had been suffering for several weeks, but his death was not expected at the time it occurred, as he had been improving right along, during the last week of his life, and as late as June 18th he had been out in Fairmount Park for a drive, with his brother, Mr. Charles E. Anspach. However, being a discreet man, he did not risk himself out too much, and the three days following he remained indoors, where he seemed to be progressing nicely toward recovery until a few hours before his death, when he was seized with severe pains which finally drew to the heart and stilled it in death.

Being well and favorably known throughout Somerset county, and especially in and about Salisbury, where he had large business interests, we deem it but proper to make more than ordinary mention of his death.

Mr. Anspach was born in Philadelphia on July 21st, 1842. He was a son of John and Leah Anspach, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. He was educated at the Episcopal Academy and the Central High School, of Philadelphia, and at the breaking out of the great War of the Rebellion he enlisted in the 15th Pennsylvania Cavalry, under General Palmer, and served with distinction around Nashville, Tenn. He was also in the battle of Antietam, under McClellan.

After leaving the army he studied mining engineering with Alex. W. Rea, chief engineer of Locust Mountain Coal and Iron Company. He assisted in the opening of the Middle coal fields, and had two collieries, one at Centralia and one at Big Mine Run. Later he moved to Shomokin and opened the old Lancaster colliery for the Shomokin Coal Company.

After these properties were sold to the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley Railroad Companies, he turned his attention to the development of Spring Lake, N. J. He laid out the place, built many houses and a large hotel.

He next became interested and active in the coal developments of Somerset county, Pa., about the year 1870, and returned to Philadelphia from New Jersey in 1874. He was prominently identified with the coal interests of this county ever since he returned from New Jersey to Philadelphia, and at the time of his death, and many years prior thereto, the Anspachs owned the Tub Mill and Niverton tracts of coal in this region, which are being worked an royalty.

Mr. Anspach was married in 1865 at Newburg, N. Y., to Miss Frances V. Ganston, who with one son and two daughters survives him. He is also survived by two brothers, Charles E. and James Anspach, both of Philadelphia.

The editor was intimately acquainted with the deceased for a number of years, and there are indeed few whose death could have saddened us more. We esteemed him most highly as a man, and we loved him for his many admirable traits of character—his extreme kindness, sympathetic nature and helpful consideration for those less favorably situated in life than he was. His life and character were above reproach, and in all the walks of life his ways were most commendable. His hand was open at all times to those in distress, and in a quiet way, without anyone knowing of his good deeds, except the recipients, he gave largely to worthy persons and good causes in need of aid. He was not a dignified, pompous, haughty person, as many men of his means are, but on the contrary was a very approachable, sunny-dispositioned person, a most thorough gentleman at all times, and a man of remarkably graceful and becoming manners. He was in every sense one of nature's noblemen, and a person that money never made a fool of. He treated rich and poor with the same courtesy and respect, and in his death we feel that we have lost a most valued friend, one by whose wise counsel and sound advice we have profited on many occasions.

Frederick J. Anspach was a man that we used to enjoy having an occasional talk with, and we never departed from his very agreeable presence without feeling that we had learned something of value to us or listened to words of encouragement that made the rugged pathway of life smoother and more agreeable.

Of course, there are persons in this vicinity, as everywhere else, who are always mistrustful of those who come from a distance and help to develop the resources of a locality. Mr. Anspach did not escape contact with such people here, and it used to amuse him greatly to note with what suspicion some of the natives of whom he purchased lands and minerals would regard him. But their suspicions were never well grounded, and he was a better friend to them than some of them were aware of. However, a great majority of them, at least, soon learned that he was worthy of their utmost confidence, and they never ceased to respect him thereafter. He was an honest, upright man, and he did much to make this locality the prosperous section of country that it is.

We can add nothing to Mr. Anspach's virtues or his admirable character. We can only speak of them; but if all who received kindness and encouragement from him could drop but a tiny blossom upon his grave, his body would rest beneath a mountain of sweet flowers. He was merciful and kind to his fellow mortals, and a kind Providence has called him to his reward. His body rests beneath the cold ground, but his good deeds and his generous spirit will live forever to bless mankind. Peace to his ashes, sweet repose to his soul.

WILL MAKE A SENSATION.
Revelations by the Score a Feature of Great Chapter of History.

The battle of Mukden, fought in Manchuria in March of this year, was the greatest conflict in the history of the world. There were engaged in it over 700,000 men, and the Russian army fled like a crazy mob, helpless before the pursuing and victorious Japanese. The Russians lost 200,000 men.

The only history yet published of this great combat has just been written. It is told by Francis McCullagh, a correspondent, who went into the battle with the Russian forces, and was captured during the fight by the Japanese.

Mr. McCullagh was an eye-witness of the battle from both sides, and, knowing the story, knows how to tell it. He has written it all graphically, as only an eye-witness can. He has not gone into the labored work of the military expert, but tells his story for the man who wants to read it in good, clear English, letting the horrible facts themselves stand out to adorn it and point its great moral.

Mr. McCullagh's history has been secured for publication in Pennsylvania by the Philadelphia North American. It will be published in two instalments, and the first instalment of eight pages will appear as a special supplement added to the Sunday issue of the paper for July 2. It will be completed on July 9.

The newspaper reader who is watching the course of peace negotiations initiated by President Roosevelt will be able, after reading Mr. McCullagh's story, to see the necessity for a cessation of hostilities in the East, for the stopping of the dumb slaughter of drunken Russians driven by incompetent officers.

Of revelations there are scores in Mr. McCullagh's history. He saw what the papers have never printed, and has put into concrete form all of the scattered bits of stories that were published. Without doubt, Mr. McCullagh's account of this battle is the one to which the future will look as the one true historical account of this struggle of great armies.

Humorous Errors.

A correspondent of the New England Journal has collected the following specimens of false syntax:

An Iowa editor thus acknowledges a present of grapes: "We have received a basket of grapes from friend W., for which he will accept our compliments, some of which are nearly two inches in diameter."

A widow in the West intending to succeed her husband in the management of a hotel, advertises that "the hotel will be kept by the widow of the former landlord, Mr. Brown, who died last summer on a new and improved plan."

One of Sir Boyle Roche's invitations to an Irish nobleman was equivocal. He writes: "I hope, my lord, if you ever come within a mile of my house you will stay there all night."

A clergyman says: "A young woman died in my neighborhood yesterday, while I was preaching in a beastly state of intoxication."

A correspondent, in writing of a recent celebration in the city of Cleveland, says: "The procession was very fine, and nearly two miles long, as was also the report of Dr. Perry, the chaplain."

A Western paper says: "A child was run over by a wagon three years, and cross-eyed, with pantaloon on, which never spoke afterwards."

Over a bridge at Athens, Ga., was the following: "Any person driving over this bridge in a faster pace than a walk shall, if a white person, be fined five dollars, and if a negro, receive twenty-five lashes, half the penalty to be bestowed on the informer."

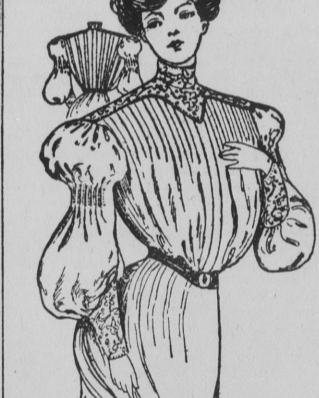

HOME DRESSMAKING
By May Manton,
FOR HOME WEAR.

Shirt Waist House Gown #44. Size 32 to 42.
Negligee Room Gown #96. Size 32, 36 and 40.

No woman who regards her health and comfort allows her to be without tasteful house gowns and negligees. The house gowns provide not alone for her being but are also economical, inasmuch as they save wearing the more dressy ones during the morning hours, while the fact that the negligees are at hand often means that a needed rest will be taken which otherwise might be neglected. Illustrated are two very desirable models which can be made available for all seasons of the year. The house gown is made in shirt waist style but gives the princess lines at the back, which are always graceful and becoming, and is shown in pale blue chambray, not can appropriately be made from any simple washable material or from cashmere, shetland, alpaca or any other fabric that is suited to the morning. When linen and cotton are used the lining is omitted but when the design is utilized for the colder weather it is in every way desirable. The negligee is exceptionally graceful and attractive while at the same time it is so simple that its making involves very little labor and very little time. All the pretty details, laces, ribbons and the like are appropriate as also are formal, fantaisie and courtly, but in this instance the collar edge is composed with an Oriental material cut to make bands. The back is laid in inverted pleats at the shoulders and the front in tucks, so that ample fullness is provided and the sleeves allow a choice of the pointed or the plain edge. Material required for the house gown is 4 1/2 yds. for 32 yds. 11 yds. 30 or 34 yds. 44 inches wide; for negligee 9 yds. 37 1/2 yds. 32 or 37 yds. 44 inches wide with 3/4 yds. of banding 1/2 inch wide for yoke and cuffs. Patterns mailed by Fashion Department ten cents each.

PONGEE AND LACE.

Fancy Blouse Waist #98. Size 32 to 40 bust.

There is almost no limit to the uses of such a pretty blouse as this one. It can be made available for the gown and for the separate waist and is suited to a long list of materials. Again, it is quite dressy enough for dinner, the theatre and informal evening wear while it is not too elaborate to wear with the suit, so that it can be made available for almost numberless occasions. In the illustration it is made of pongee combined with sheer lace, the material being one that can be worn at all seasons of the year but it is equally appropriate for silks and for the many pretty dress materials that are so fashionable while yoke and cuffs can be of any contrasting material that may be liked. The waist is made with a fitted foundation which comes of front and back, and the sleeves are laid in narrow box plaits, those of the back extending for 1 1/2 length, so giving a tapering effect to the figure, while those at the front are fitted for a short distance only at the shoulders, so providing becoming fullness. The yoke is shaped to give the fashionable broad shoulder and the sleeves can either be laid or shirred so for double puffs. Material required for medium size is 4 yds. 21 1/2 yds. 27 or 28 yds. 44 inches wide with 1 1/2 inches wide for yoke and cuffs. Patterns mailed by Fashion Department ten cents each.

FOR GROWING GIRLS.

Girl's Box Plated Dress #98. Size 6 to 12 years.

Nothing suits a girl during the most active period of her life so well as simple dresses made with waist and skirt in one. They allow the freedom that is necessary to health and development yet are stylish and attractive as well as thoroughly comfortable and can be made from almost any material. Illustrated is an exceptionally desirable one which is shown in percale with a little trimming of embroidery at the front but which is equally appropriate to all washable fabrics and also for serge, cashmere, velvety and the simple wools of childhood, that are required for the colder seasons. The dress is made with box plaits from the shoulders to the edge of the skirt and is held in place by a narrow band that can be of leather or of the material of the dress. The sleeves are the new ones that are tucked at the wrists and gathered at the shoulders and the closing is made invisibly at the back. The collar is separate and made from white linen and can be attached to the neck-band by means of button-holes and studs. Material required for medium size is 5 yds. 5 1/2 yds. 27 1/2 yds. 32 or 37 yds. 44 inches wide with 1/4 yds. of linen for the collar. Patterns mailed by Fashion Department ten cents each.
