TO THE DREAMER.

Dreamer, lift the veil that covers all the weary years;

Can you wend your fancy backward over hills and vales of tears

To the dreamland, to the boyland, half forgotten long ago;

Can you tell if boys of nowtime know the joys we used to know?

Does the rustle of the trees, the rippling brook, remain the same—

Do the boys that run barefooted sigh for worldly wealth and fame?

Does the dusty road stretch winding over acres broad and sweet—

The same old road I used to plod with stained and stone-bruised feet?

The meadows, are they just as sweet, I wonder, to the boys—

I mean the boys of nowtime—do they find their sweetest joys

Romping thro' the fragrant blossoms, tangled vines, and shaded nooks—

Or is that sort of pleasure now confined to story books?

The boyhood days—ah, dreamer, they are sweet, but O, so brief,

So fleeting are their vagrancies—then sorrowing and grief

Come, mantlelike, upon our brow, a-dampening our joys—

But we can keep a-dreaming them—the days when we were boys.

—Milwaukee Sentinel.

THE races at Meyersdale drew a large crowd on July 4th, as usual, and as usual we hear the same amount of howling against the unfairness shown there. People swear and declare that they will never go there again, just as they do each succeeding year, but we take notice that they always hie themselves away to be faked again at the very next opportunity. Anyway, what is a race track for if it isn't to skin and fake people? They're all about alike, and the man who goes to the average race track to witness honesty and fair play is not going to the proper place. Might as well look for virtue in a house of prostitution as for honesty and fair play at a race track. There never was a blowout in Meyersdale of any kind that was worth going two inches to see, but a large crowd of suckers can always be counted on. Upon the very next occasion the crowd will be just as large as ever, and the amount of kicking afterwards will be ditto. Between the fakirs and the faked, the people who stay away from snide races and snide ponies are furnished with lots of amusement. It is interesting to hear the after-howling and see the wry faces, and it causes us to roll on the ground and laugh. Blessed is the man who remaineth with his wife and children on the glorious 4th, going to the woods with them, or with a few good friends, if he has no family, and communing with nature and nature's God. Go to the race track, ye who will, To see the fakir plying his skill— See the torture of poor dumb brute, And crooked work of race track "galoot."

We prefer the song of the brook, Hearing it in some cool, shady nook, Enjoying the cool air and breeze, And perfume of wild flowers and trees. Of all places on earth most sweet, Thine are the praises, sylvan retreat. Go to the races, ye who will, Give us the breezy shade by the rill.

Some False Rumors Corrected—Some Timely Suggestions. It having been noised about town that the editor had two cases of typhoid fever in his family, and that little or no attention was paid to the rules of sanitation, etc., by those who attended the patients, we arise to remark that the gossip is outrageously false and unjust.

To begin with, we have at no time had a regular case of typhoid fever at our house, and our family doctor has so informed us. After Mrs. Livengood was taken ill and suffered about a week, Dr. E. H. Perry and Dr. A. M. Lichty were both called in consultation, and both gave the same diagnosis of the case, but it was not typhoid fever. She was treated for ovarian trouble, and in about a week was considerably better. Then other complications set in, and at times her ailment resembled typhoid fever, but not for any considerable length of time. The doctor said that while it was evidently not genuine typhoid fever, there might be a little typhoid infection about it, and he stated what precautions it might be well enough to take in regard to using disinfectants. His instructions have been all along obeyed to the letter, and the reports that we have been emptying anything and everything from the sick room out in our lot is outrageously false, and as unkind as it is false. Nothing from the sick room has ever been emptied out in our lot, except now and then a little waste water, discarded medicines and other harmless accumulations that have occasionally been emptied into various kinds of vessels and carried out.

We have always kept our premises scrupulously clean, and we court investigation and inspection at any and all times by the Town Council, Health Board or anybody that cares to investigate the lying rumors that have been so unjustly and unkindly circulated by people who should be minding their own business and looking more closely to the sanitation of their own homes. We court inspection at all times for the reason that we are anxious for people to come and see how much cleaner we keep everything about our premises than most people do. We have no cesspools, stench, filth, decaying matter in old tin cans or anything of that sort anywhere about our place, and we never allowed anything of that kind to accumulate. We have no hog pen, chicken yard, dog or cat to drag filth into our lot, and neither do we have an old stinking stable only a few steps from our back door. That is more than a good many people can say, and we do hope that the Town Council will order a general cleaning up and inspection of all the homes and places of business in this town that need it.

We have suffered enough from sickness and misfortune, but when it comes to suffering persecution from the shafts of lying tongues, we resent it and court investigation of the lying rumors afoot. In conclusion we will say that our sick daughter suffered principally from a badly sprained back. She was in bed about two weeks, but is again able to be up. Mrs. Livengood is also able to be up for a few minutes at a time, but will not be able to do much for six months or a year. Neither of them had regular typhoid fever, and even if they would have had it, it would have been no crime, and the sickness of others cannot be justly charged to them or to any of the other folks about the house. The disease is not contagious, anyway, say all the doctors, and there has been typhoid fever in this community at intervals ever since we know anything of the place, and that covers a period of nearly 32 years. People who get hysterical and slanderous when there is sickness about, should take to the woods and remain there.

LICENSE CASES IN SUPREME COURT.

Appeal from Superior Court Has Been Allowed.

Higher Court Refused to Issue Supersedeas.

The Incident is Considered Closed Until Next October.

Among the orders handed down by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, sitting in Philadelphia, last Thursday, was an order allowing the appeal of the Somerset Prohibition Alliance from the decision of the State Superior Court in the mooted Somerset county liquor license cases. No date was fixed by the Court for argument and it is probable that the cases will be heard by that tribunal in October.

So much has been said in the newspapers concerning the seventeen applications that were refused by Judge Kooser because the petitions did not contain the names of the sureties in paragraph nine, that it is not necessary to recite to Standard readers the history of the omission and what led up to the filing of objections to the granting of the licenses.

Judge Kooser held, and gave his reasons therefor at great length, that the omission of those names from that paragraph was a fatal error and left him without jurisdiction to permit the amendments or grant the licenses. From this decision Attorney Berkey, representing eight of the refused applicants, carried an appeal to the Superior Court, and that body sustained Berkey's contention, that the omissions were merely of form and not matters of substance. The cases were remitted to Judge Kooser "for further proceedings according to law," and several days after receiving the order the licenses were granted by the Somerset county Court.

Attorneys W. H. Ruppel and J. C. Lowry promptly filed a petition with the prothonotary of the Supreme Court for an appeal from the Superior Court. In their petition they asserted that they regarded the opinion of the Superior Court as conflicting with other rulings it has made; that only four members of the court were present when the arguments were heard; that the opinion seems to rest largely on the Oberfell case and that the Somerset county cases were widely different; that word from the legal profession in different parts of the state showed that the question is regarded as unsettled; that there ought to be an authoritative declaration in the matter as a guide for future practice, as the question was one of public concern.

The order of the higher court was sent to Attorney W. H. Ruppel and contained but two words: "Appeal allowed."

Ten days subsequent to the filing of the petition for an appeal the attorneys asking for the appeal filed another petition to the Supreme Court, asking that a special supersedeas issue, preventing the lower court from granting the licenses until the questions were passed upon by the Supreme Court. This petition has been refused or withheld. Consequently the landlords who are specially concerned in the matter will enjoy the privileges of their licenses for some months, unless they should be revoked for some other reason.

The Supreme Court will meet in October, and if the usual course of that body is followed, some weeks, and perhaps months, will elapse before a decision is rendered.—Somerset Standard.

MEN WHO PAY FREIGHT.

In reading so much of the "man with the hoe,"

Bemoaning the harsh hand of fate, We scarcely have time to remember the woe

Of men who look after the freight. Of all kinds and classes in Adam's thrall,

Decreed to work early and late, No class so down-trodden of men since the fall

As those who are taxed with the freight. The hoers of corn bear their share of the brunt

Of burdens of life in full weight; But eaters of corn have no less to confront,

For they are the ones who pay freight. Thus diggers of coal grumble loudly and long

Because of oppression so great; But how compares this with the unexercised wrong

Of doubling the price in the freight? Producers are wont, in all earnestness, too,

Their hardships of life to relate; Not deigning to ask what consumers can do

Who buy a thing twice, paying freight. Undoubtedly all have a hard enough time

To justify most of their prate; But woe is the man, he needs courage sublime.

Who belongs to the class that pays freight. —LEROY G. DAAIS.

FORCED TO STARVE.

B. F. Leek, of Concord, Ky., says: "For 20 years I suffered agonies, with a sore on my upper lip, so painful, sometimes, that I could not eat. After vainly trying everything else, I cured it, with Bucklen's Arnica Salve." It's great for burns, cuts and wounds. At E. H. Miller's drug store; Only 25c. 8-1

Cannot Announce Drawings and Raffles.

Under a recent ruling of the Post-office Department at Washington, newspapers are forbidden to publish any announcement of or reference to any drawing or raffle, under penalty of exclusion from the mails.

The order says that the terms of the law bar "endless chain" enterprises, so-called "gift concerts" or similar enterprises offering prizes depending on lot or chance, including "guessing" or "estimating" contests for prizes, as well as drawings and raffles of every kind, whether general or local, for money or otherwise, for private gain or in aid of charities, educational or religious objects.

Publications, circulars, cards or pamphlets containing advertisements or other information relating to such enterprises are required to be withdrawn from the mails.

The STAR's friends, therefore, will understand why we cannot announce anything in connection with drawings or raffles hereafter in these columns.

Somerset County Labor Troubles Slop Over into Bedford.

Frank Hayman, fireman of a helping engine on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, residing at Hyndman, was shot in the foot and painfully wounded at that place on Saturday night, June 14, during some trouble with non-union men working at Williams Station, who were in Hyndman on Saturday night.

Some persons called the non-unionists "scabs," when one of the men pulled a revolver and began shooting, stopping only after he had emptied his revolver. One shot struck Hayman in the foot and another shot grazed the breast of a bystander. After Hayman was shot he chased the non-unionists with stones, but they escaped, and the man who did the shooting has not yet been captured.—Somerset Democrat.

One Dollar Reward.

I will pay a reward of one dollar to any person who will furnish information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the person who stole a large store box from me that I had left on the sidewalk in front of Haselbarth's store. I will also pay a reward of one dollar to any person furnishing information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the person who stole some left-over fencing boards away from my lot in the Beachy addition, a little over a year ago.
