morality. This, of course, leads to de-moralization and inefficiency. The Japanese, on the contrary, are a sober people, always clear-headed and fit to do their work in the best manner. In a contest between a sober and drunken army no prophet is needed to foretell the victory. The Japanese have proven themselves far superior to the Russians in every respect, and in nothing more

It is not generally known that, among his many claims to fame, Thom-as Jefferson was the originator of the mule in America. He it was who brought about the first cross in Virginia which, by subsequent multiplication, introduced to posterity the invaluable farm animal whose labor has done so much to bring about the mar-velous agricultural development of the United States. While they are building so many monuments, why not one to the mule? Many men have been honored in sculpture whose services to the country and claims upon its grati-tude are not so great as that of "the useful animal, which has neither pride of ancestry nor hope of posterity."-American Farmer.

In the death of John Hay, our late Secretary of State, this nation and the world has lost one of its greatest men. John Hay was a diplomat and statesman whose like the world has produced but few equals. He was also a poet of rare ability, and between the lines of many of his poems can be plainly read sentiments as timely and as lofty as were contained in his written words. His religion was the religion of humanity, and in the passing of John Hay the human race has lost one of its most lovable and loving members. With him the rank was but the guinea's stamp, the man the gold for all that. May his great, gentle, poetic soul live to add lustre to the better life beyond

Much rot is published these days concerning "the divorce evil." While it cannot be denied that there is considerable evil in the divorce business, there is also much good in it. At least three-fourths of the divorce-seeking couples ought to be divorced. What moral right have people who are mismated to remain yoked together for life and inflict upon society a pro-geny conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity? What kind of citizens can you expect the children of quarreling, fighting parents to grow up to be? It can scarcely be hoped that many of the children of such parents can grow up to be anything else than criminals. Married people who can-not live together in peace and decency are not fit to live together and rear families, and they should be divorced and permitted to seek more congenial control of the paper every week and then criticise its contents. Well, he may howl till the cows come home, and we condend to advertise anyhow—only odds and ends."

"Odds and ends" yes, and that is families, and they should be divorced and permitted to seek more congenial companionship. Divorce has been the only redemption and salvation of many a good, pure woman whose husband turned out to be a cruel drunken brute. Why should any woman be compelled to remain the wife of a drunken, criminal wretch and continue to hear him we can hoe our row along side of him. children? The evil in many marriages is far greater than the so-called divorce evil. Clergymen and marriages and marriages is far greater than the so-called divorce evil. Clergymen and magistrates should be more careful in exercising their legal rights in performing mar-riage ceremonies. They have a legal right to marry any and every couple who are their own masters, but they perform many marriage ceremonie hat they have no moral right to perform. They have no moral right to legalize unions of man and woman is legalize unions of man and woman in cases where they know positively that such marriages will be a curse not only to the couples themselves, but to society in general and to unborn generations as well. How often do clergy men join men and women togethe with the full knowledge that the be-trothed are neither fit morally, men-

The Meyersdale Commercial last week spoke of the Philadelphia Press as "the acknowledged leader of true Republicanism in the state." Only a few years ago the Commercial was continually denouncing the Press as a "half-breed" sheet, and its editor, the brilliant Charles Emory Smith, as a "mugwump," "party-wrecker," etc. Our old friend Lou changes his political views every time the moon changes.

The Russian-Japanese war has furnished a new argument in favor of temperance. The Russians drink heavily and almost universally, besides indulging in other forms of immorality. This, of course, leads to de-

A Howl from Dr. Lichty. Dr. A. M. Lichty felt very sore when he read the following item in last week's STAR:

week's STAR:

A reliable man from Greenville township stated in the postoffice, some days ago, that the supposed victim of smallpox that was recently sent to that township from this borough had about fully recovered, that the eruption had all disappeared and left neither scales nor scabs. He got the information direct from the victim's father, he said, and that ought to be good authority. One can readily imagine about how much smallpox there was about the case, and it is more than probable the whole thing was another cry of "wolf" when there was no "wolf."

He didn't only feel sore when he

He didn't only feel sore when he read the item, but he made a laughing stock and a fool of himself when he jumped onto the editor in a very petu-lent and excited manner about it in Miller's drug store.

He declared that we had no right to other fool assertions too numerous to mention. He had much to say concerning the great wisdom of physicians and the folly of those who refuse to believe in all their guess work, but rather prefer to do a little thinking and observing on their own account The doctor should not be so hysterical and ultra excitable, for we did not say that the woman referred to did not have smallpox. We expressed some doubt about it, saying one could readily imagine about how much smallpox the woman had. Some, no doubt, imagine that the woman had smallpox, but a great many more imagine that she hadn't, and we imagine as the majority of the people do who have been inquiring into the matter. We don't care who coincides with our opinion, and we don't care who does not, for unlike the doctor, we do not believe in throttling free speech and free thought. That day has gone by, and a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still. Those who always read THE STAR at other people's expense are always the ones to read it the closest and criticise it the most, but we are glad that they read it, anyway. The editor of THE STAR has paid Dr. Lichty a good many dollars for his professional services, yet it always seemed to grind him whenever we patronized other doctors who spent two dollars with us to his one, and, as a matter of course, his weighty (?) name had to come off our list and his professional card pulled out of our paper shortly after it became apparent to him that we would not give him our exclusive patronage in his line.

One of the oddest churches in this country is found in the redwood forests of California. It is near San Jose, and is maintained by a mining settlement, the minister working as a miner during the week. It is built in one of the hollow trees and accommodates a congregation of twenty-five, with space for a recess chancel, which contains a small organ.

Those in our household who are well, and those who are convalescing, are almost worn out caring for the sick, and sickness, trouble and expense have made desolate our home ever since early in April. Of necessity our business must suffer along with the family until the dark clouds of sickness are dispelled by the sunshine of health. Of Interest to Every Retail Merchant.

You retail advertisers sitting down under your awnings these hot days!
What are you doing to stimulate trade? What efforts are you making to get just a little bit ahead of the fellow across the street? May be you are just sitting supinely, growling on ac-count of the so-called summer decline and hoping for an early fall and revival of trade. I could never quite understand this "summer dullness." There are just as many people in the world in the sum-mer as in the fall and winter. There is just as much money in one season as in another. There are just as many wants to be catered to in one season as wants to be catered to in one season as in another. Of course, I want to make allowance for a certain stagnation in trade due to a stocking up by your customers during the spring and fall months. May be, however, you are what is known as a "spring and fall huyer" only Buyer along certain buyer," only. Buying along certain fixed lines laid down by tradition and forgetting the hundred and one novel-ties and extras with which you could sustain your volume of business dur-ing the so-called dull months.

If you are complaining of the dullness this summer, set it down to two causes.

First—you have nothing to sell rel-evant to the season.

Second—you are not advertising.

The doctor is reported to have remarked to one of our friends, the other day, that we have lots of ability, but make too many mistakes. Able men never deny mistakes, but egotists always do. We all make too many mistakes, but we can't all bury them in the graveyards as the doctors usualty. year 'round. It is better to have some summer sloth in business by judicious advertising of judiciously purchased commodities.—The Ad-Writer.
