TO LAND OWNERS:—We have printed and keep in stock a supply of trespass notices containing extracts from the far-reaching trespass law passed at the 1905 session of the Pennsylvania Legislature. The notices are printed on good cardboard with blank line for signature, and they will last for years in all kinds of weather. Every land owner should buy some of them, as the law requires land owners to post their lands if they want the protection of the latest and best trespass law ever passed. Send all orders to THE STAR, Elk Lick, Pa.

On one of the swellest streets of Johnstown this can be found: A father and mother and the father's brother, all of whom are perhaps as hard drinkers and as vile blackguards as the town holds. They drink and swear and hurl foul language at all hours of day and night, and often the neighbors are wakened up out of a sound sleep and compelled to listen to them. But the father and mother have five children who are as mannerly and well behaved as any children on the street, and not an improper word was ever heard to issue from the mouth of one of them. Now, you psychologists who believe in heredity, and you other ones who say it's all in environment, how do you explain it?—Johnstown Tribune.

NEARLY every traveling man doing business in Kansas says prohibition is a miserable failure. They judge, as we are all inclined to do, from what they see, personally. Yet, they are doubtless wrong in their conclusions. The Greensburg Republican probably voices the sentiment of a large majority of the editors of the state in accepting the following from the Kansas City Journal as a fair statement of the case: Prohibition has worked well in more than half of the counties in the state. Rural districts observe it quite religiously. While it is not a complete success, so far as absolutely preventing the sale of liquor is concerned, temperance people say it is the most practical way to handle the question; that it promotes temperance to a greater degree than the license system. They point to the fact that Kansas has only 3,000 drunkards, whereas its quota would be 15,000 according to statistics of other states. No state has fewer paupers. Twenty-five counties maintain no poor houses at all, and eight of the other eighty had no inmates for over two years. Business failures in Kansas are less than one-third of 1 per cent. In a number of cities the law is a dead letter, but there has never been during the twenty-four years of its existence a serious effort made to secure its repeal. It has not been a political question in Kansas for a number of years.—Esbon Times.

BENT HER DOUBLE.
"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at E. H. Miller's drug store; price 50c. 8-1

Think and Observe.
Some smart latter-day teachers don't seem to be able to talk anything about school work, except that the new ways are far superior to the old. They can talk and talk about that, and when done they have said nothing. The modern school ought to be superior, and so ought the teachers, as the facilities grow better, but the schools never improve under teachers whose stock in trade is to make fun of old teachers. Brains are required to make teachers, now as in old days. Compare this or that school with its pupils of 20 or 25 years ago, and then judge. Think a little, now, before you decide.—Cumberland Courier.

Yes, think and observe a little, and you will not need to do much of either, in this locality, at least, to convince yourself that the little red school house, with its old-time teacher of a generation or two ago turned out girl better and more intelligent citizens than our schools are turning out now. It is easy in these days for boys and girls to complete (?) the high school course and graduate, but how they can graduate and know so little has often astounded us. The boys and girls who went through the same old arithmetic, grammar, history, geography and other books, winter after winter, a generation or two ago, when there was no course of study, were as far ahead of the average modern-day high school graduate, so far as practical and useful education is concerned, as electric light is ahead of the tallow-dip. There is something extremely rotten in our public schools today, and he who has not noticed it has been going along with his eyes closed.

TRAINED FORESTERS IN GREAT DEMAND.

The Supply Not Large Enough and Good Positions Await the Right Men.

The demand for foresters is increasing rapidly both for State work and with private owners. Many States now have forest commissions, and several of them have State foresters. A trained forester at $2,400 a year and two assistant foresters at $1,200 each are wanted by California. Wisconsin wants an assistant forester at $1,500, Indiana a forester to take charge of its State reserve, and Washington offers $1,800 a year for a trained forester. In many other States the advisability of creating the office of State forester has been under discussion this year, and it is only a matter of a few years when such an official will be considered a regular part of an efficient State government.

The demand for foresters by private timber owners is growing at a still more rapid rate. During the last twelve months 7 of the Bureau of Forestry force have left to take up work with such owners, and 4 have accepted public positions—two with Massachusetts, one with Connecticut, and the fourth with Ontario, Canada. A number of other requests from private owners can not be met because men are not available. The year before there were less than half as many applications for trained men. But the demand for trained specialists in this line has only begun.

Large lumber companies, great wood manufacturing concerns, owners of extensive forests, railroad companies, and others are taking a hitherto unknown practical interest in conservative forestry. They must have expert men to control their holdings. The result is that forestry is very rapidly taking its place as a recognized profession. A number of forest schools are training young men for this work, but the demand has outrun the supply.

SPECIAL SALES.

When a successful merchant in an Indiana town of 12,000 was asked if he thought special sales good practice, he said: "Indeed I do. I have one all the time. My store is the 'vaudeville' house of our town—continuous performance. I can run two specials a day for a week and the people will never go back on me. Why? Because I always deliver the goods and there is no one else in this town or any nearby city who can discount my goods in quality or price."

This merchant has the situation about right. People love to shop at the live store, the popular store where there is always something doing. Farmers, as a rule, work hard for their money and they like to see a dollar cover a foot square if possible. The proper inducements—something new and necessary—never fails to bring a good response on Saturday from the rural district. If the skeptical merchant would try offering some special inducements for Saturday trade he will be quickly convinced.

During the past two years there have come into prominence a large number of so-called "special sales promoters." Many excellent and successful business men—a few unscrupulous sharks. Quite a number of the large wholesale dry goods firms have a special sales department in connection with their collection department, and it's a very successful and wise plan. A merchant falls behind, practically fails, his failure affects a number of concerns—were the big house to jump in and close him up, have a receiver appointed, etc., many minor claims would come up, and possibly the merchant would go into bankruptcy. Quietly the big house sends down their special sales promoter and he puts on a big special sale, and in the majority of instances it is a big success. The house gets its money, the merchant a new start, and instead of a bankrupt stock of goods, a ruined man and lost trade, they have a better friend than ever, a more careful buyer in the future and a believer in advertising—altogether the ideal customer.—The Ad-Writer.

W. T. Buchanan at Head of Another Great Enterprise.

Mr. W. T. Buchanan, late of Salisbury, but who now resides at Newport, Tenn., where he presides over a gigantic extract factory, is now at the head of another great extract plant to be erected at Stokesville, Va. His many Salisbury friends rejoice at his great success, and the following, clipped from the Harrisonburg Daily News, will be read with interest:

"Work has been commenced on the foundations of a tannic extract plant to be erected at Stokesville by the Imperial Extract Company, a corporation recently organized by a number of gentlemen who are the chief stockholders in the well known concern of England, Walton & Co., of Philadelphia. Completed, the plant will cost approximately $65,000. It will be known as the Imperial Extract Works.

The new plant will occupy sixteen acres of ground in East Stokesville and will consist of six large frame buildings and a boiler house. The latter will be of brick, 200,000 of which will be required for its construction. The frame buildings will contain something more than 200,000 feet of lumber. The plant will be erected under the personal supervision of W. T. Buchanan, general manager of England, Walton & Co's great extract plant at Newport, Tenn., and one of the greatest experts in his line in this country. It will have a capacity of fifty barrels a day and will give employment to almost, if not quite one hundred men.

The product of the works will be manufactured from materials supplied by the native forests, and will be the best grade of tanning fluid known. Although the buildings will be very large, requiring immense labor in the construction, it is anticipated that the plant will be complete and in operation by January 1, 1906.

Mr. Buchanan will be general manager of this plant, as well as of that in Tennessee. The officers of the Imperial Extract Company are, President, Thomas Y. England; Vice President, Charles S. Walton; Secretary and Treasurer, Charles S. Warren, all of Philadelphia."

A Distressing Shooting Accident.

Tuesday afternoon Percy Imhoff accidentally shot and killed his cousin—Paul Imhoff. In the morning the lads had gone into the Mercantile Department Store to purchase some articles, and in the absence of the clerk from the hardware department, they purchased a 32-calibre revolver from the gun case. The shooting occurred at the home of William Imhoff, about half-past one o'clock. No one was in the house at the time of the accident, but the two boys, Mrs. Imhoff being absent from home, visiting in Hyndman, and Mr. Imhoff was at work in a distant hay field. Neighbors who entered the house, aroused by the report of the gun, and the subsequent cries of pain, found the wounded boy expiring on the floor, and the other lad in a great state of fear and trepidation, crying, "Now they will hang me!" He disappeared shortly afterwards, and was last seen on the road close to Sand Patch. He had evidently gone to join his mother in Hyndman.

While the particulars of the tragedy are not fully known, it is hardly likely that the act was deliberate. There is some fault in the working of the gun, and it is probable that the shooting was purely accidental. The dead child was a son of Alice Imhoff, and was aged about 8 years. Interment took place Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.—Berlin Gleaner.

THE DIAMOND CURE.

The latest news from Paris, is, that they have discovered a diamond cure for consumption. If you fear consumption or pneumonia, it will, however, be best for you to take that great remedy mentioned by W. T. McGee, of Vanleer, Tenn. "I had a cough, for fourteen years. Nothing helped me, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which gave instant relief, and effected a permanent cure." Unequaled quick cure, for Throat and Lung Troubles. At E. H. Miller's drug store; price 50c. and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free. 8-1
