THE HICKS ALMANAC FOR 1906.

The Rev. Irl R. Hicks Almanac will not be published for 1906, but his Monthly Journal, WORD AND WORKS, has been changed into a large and costly Magazine, and it will contain his storm and weather forecasts and other astronomical features complete. The NOVEMBER number, now ready, contains the forecasts from January to June, 1906. The JANUARY number, ready December 20th, will contain the forecasts from July to December, 1906. The price of this splendid Magazine is ONE DOLLAR A YEAR. See it and you will have it. The November and January numbers containing the Rev. Irl R. Hicks forecasts for the whole year, and more complete than ever, can be had by sending at once 25 cents to WORD AND WORKS PUBLISHING COMPANY, 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

If you prefer, you can save postage and money order fees by leaving your money at THE STAR office for the Word and Works Magazine. THE STAR will promptly fill all orders for the same at the publisher's prices. We also club with the Word and Works Magazine, and you can get both it and THE STAR together for $1.95, for one year.

Home Circle Department.

A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers (As They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide).

It is a sad thing to begin life with low conceptions of it. It may not be possible for a young man to measure life; but it is possible to say, "I am resolved to put life to its noblest and best use."

There is no such thing as man's rights and woman's rights separate and distinct from each other. Woman's rights are simply human rights. The sexes belong to each other; what benefits one helps the other; what elevates either up-lifts both. Man is the outdoor and woman the indoor partner in the firm of humanity.

THE FAMILY.

The first requisite for a beautiful family life is perfect confidence and understanding between the husband and wife, based upon a profound respect and deep devotion. The second requisite is children—not a child, but many. Those who have only one child are thankful that they are not childless, and those who have more than one child are thankful for they know that brothers and sisters can do many good things for each other that seem beyond the reach of fathers and mothers. They give the salutary companionship of equals, the frank rebuke, the vigorous tussle for supremacy that strengthens the mental and moral. Brothers and sisters protect, stimulate and educate each other.

One who has thought deeply on the subject of the child in the home, writes: "If obedience responds to authority, confidence responds to kindness. To obtain obedience, awaken confidence—all education lies in this. Let our children obey us, but let them never fear to open their hearts to us. Above all things, let us give them no cause to doubt us or lose confidence in us."

"There is one sure refuge on earth, where we ever find open arms and untiring ears, where our joys and sorrows alike have their echo, a refuge we never seek in vain nor leave unconsolated—the heart of a mother or a father. Let us maintain its reputation and be for our children a gracious sanctuary, a high and tranquil retreat. It is so good to have a shelter for our heads, to know where to go to tell the tale of what is weighing on our hearts."

GOOD ADVICE.

The following was written by a grandmother who highly appreciates our Home Circle Department. Her advice is certainly good, and we gladly give it space.—(Ed.)

As I am verging on the land of dotage and am much of a child myself, the children will excuse me if I "air" a few of my opinions.

All children, from the tiny prattler to the blooming maiden and happy, frolicsome young man, have a tender place in my heart. I have a great many friends among them. They are to me what the sun is to the flower, and what the flower is to the bee; and without them life would be as blank as a snow-capped mountain. I would love to take each one of you by the hand, and tell you how much I love you; but my pen will record the feeling of my heart.

Dear children, I hope you all realize what a treasure you have in the mother love that cares for you so tenderly. So many miss the deep, speechless love on which their lives have been nourished and hunger and thirst for it.

Father is tender in his solitude, but there is no love like mother's. If angels walk the earth and keep special eyes on little children, they must be sad when so many little ones call in vain for mamma.

If you want to be happy, forget yourselves and think of some one else; and, if possible, do something for some one else. Read to an old lady; send a bunch of flowers to a sick friend; dry the tears of a lonely child; say a kind word to a poor, discouraged washerwoman; speak with a voice which

THE KILN DRYING OF WOOD.

The Forest Service Studies the Subject for the Purpose of Finding and Encouraging the Methods Which Give the Best Results.

Drying is an essential part of the preparation of wood for manufacture. For a long time the only drying process used or known was air drying, or the exposure of wood to the gradual drying influence of the open air. Kiln-drying, which is an artificial method, originated in the effort to improve or shorten the process. By subjecting the wood to a high temperature, or to a draught of heated air, in a confined space or kiln, time is saved and a certain degree of control over the drying conditions is secured.

There are two points in the manufacture of lumber at either of which it may be kiln-dried. With softwoods, for instance, it is a common practice to kiln-dry the lumber at the sawmill before it is shipped. This practice, however, is ill adapted for hardwoods, in which it would produce such checking and warping as would greatly reduce the value of the product. In practice, therefore, hardwoods are more or less thoroughly air dried before being placed in the kiln, where the residue of moisture may be reduced to between 3 and 4 per cent, which is much lower than is possible by air drying only. Yet another practice obtains in the case of a few woods which give up their moisture very slowly. With these woods, of which cypress is an example, the kiln is resorted to both at the sawmill and at the factory where they are remanufactured.

Kiln-drying is so important a process that a need is keenly felt for fuller information regarding it, based upon scientific study of the behavior of various kinds of woods at different temperatures and under different mechanical drying devices. In the effort to develop it to the highest efficiency, a variety of methods have been employed, but as yet these methods have not been carefully compared with a view to ascertaining which of them is best adapted to each special requirement of species or of manufacture. The Forest Service has begun a study of the dry-kilns throughout the country, first, to acquaint itself with the methods now in vogue, and second, to map out such improvements of the kiln-drying process as may render it in the highest degree satisfactory and profitable.

Mr. Frederick Dunlap, of the Office of Forest Products, in the Forest Service, who was assigned to this study, has during the past weeks inspected kiln-drying methods in the States of Indiana and Wisconsin, and in the city of Chicago. He found manufacturers disposed to aid the study by all means in their power.

In Indiana, a hardwood region, the prevailing method of kiln-drying is based upon the use of steam pipes, which supply the dry heat required in the kiln, and the lumber is placed over them. The radiated heat from the pipes dries the lumber. In Wisconsin softwoods are more widely manufactured, and blower kilns are more generally used. In this air is pumped by means of a circular fan through a steam coil and so heated, and then passes on to the chamber in which the lumber is piled. After passing through this chamber, the air is sometimes returned to be reheated, and sometimes allowed to escape.

In connection with the further study of kiln-drying processes, attention will be given to the value of the preparatory steaming of wood before the kiln-drying is begun. For this purpose work is planned in cooperation with firms which are interested in experiments to determine the value of steam treatment.

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF SALISBURY.

Something that Ought to Interest Salisbury People Who Have Located Elsewhere.

THE STAR has for sale a limited number of very fine pictures of Salisbury, size 22x32 inches, printed on extra heavy, smooth paper, from a very fine engraving. The sketching was done by T. M. Fowler, of Morrisville, Pa., who is an expert in his line and has been following his business in many different states of the Union.

The picture is very clear and distinct, showing all the streets plainly marked, and those familiar with the town can plainly recognize every building in it. The pictures have sold like "hot cakes" here, and a limited number have been placed with THE STAR to supply those at a distance, who may desire them.

Every former citizen of Salisbury ought to have one of these fine engravings, as they show the progress the old town has been making, which has been very great in recent years. But we cannot supply them all, and those who apply first will get them. The picture includes West Salisbury, the surrounding landscape and some of the farm houses in the immediate vicinity, also a large number of the principal buildings printed around the margin of the engraving, from special drawings.

Price, $1.50 per copy, plus 7 cents to pay postage. Address THE STAR, Elk Lick, Pa. 11-16

Will Be Grasping Wherever He Goes.

We knew him as "Old Twelve Per Cent"—the more he made the less he spent—the more he got the more he lent—he's dead—we don't know where he went—but if his soul to heaven was sent—he'll own the harps and charge 'em rent.—Lanark (Ill.) Gazette.

Or if perchance he went to hell, the place into which satan fell, there'll soon from hell arise this bawl: "Old Twelve Per Cent owns this place all!" Then he will try to cut a swell, and rent the place or try to sell.

That All Depends.

A young man died over at Oregon, last week, and the only thing he left was a silver watch. It won't take long to wind up his estate.—Lanark (Ill.) Gazette.

That all depends, brother, on whether the watch is a Waterbury or not.
