Crude Thoughts As They Fall From the Editorial Pen.—Pleasant Evening Reveries.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The white moon peeps thro' my window blind

As I'm sitting alone tonight, Thinking of days I've left behind

In the years that have taken flight. My heart is full of a nameless thrill

That my life has been so sweet, And I fain would hurry to Zion's hill

And bow at the Giver's feet.

"The year just going has brought me boon

As rich as the years gone by; The skies were clear as the harvest moon

When the golden crops were dry; The grain was garnered abundantly then,

For the wintry days ahead, And I thank the Giver of goods to men

For supplies of daily bread.

"No fell disease with ghastly shrouds

Has come in grim disguise; No war has spread its baleful clouds

Ahward my azure skies; But the dove of peace—the white-winged dove—

Has built in my own roof-tree, And the breezes have floated the banner of love

O'er all my land and sea.

"So now I sing as best I can My glad Thanksgiving song,

To Him who holds me by the hand, And leads me safe along;

I am not worthy His smallest gift, But He giveth large and free,

And so a song of praise I lift, For His goodness unto me.

THANKSGIVING.

Time on its rapid swing has again brought our national Thanksgiving Day, and the present month will close its career in thanksgiving and praise.

The most unfortunate of us can find much to be thankful for if we make an honest endeavor. While in Russia, men, women and innocent children are brutally murdered upon the streets and in their own homes, we are at peace with each other and the world, and can worship God according to the dictates of our own conscience, with none to molest us or make us afraid.

Our lot has been cast in one of the best communities on the globe, among a big-hearted, generous people, among school and church advantages. Let us all show our gratitude for the bounties of Providence, which have never failed, and which grow richer as time passes on.

The year just gone has been one which stirs the profoundest depths of patriotism. It has been a year of wonderful growth, unexampled prosperity, content and happiness. It has been a year in which farms have been fruitful, business profitable, and in which labor in all forms has been employed and generously rewarded. It is difficult to conceive conditions more gratifying than those which surround the citizens of this community.

OPPORTUNITIES.

Many do with opportunities as children do at the seashore—they fill their little hands with sand, then let the grains fall through, one by one, till they are all gone. There are four things that never come back—the spoken word, the sped arrow, the past life and the neglected opportunity. How carefully we should speak! How eagerly we should seize every opportunity that comes to us! Are we sitting still, thinking there is nothing to do, and thinking that someone else can do more than we can? Perhaps they can, but that isn't right. "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Heaven gives us enough when it gives us opportunities. Great opportunities are generally the result of the wise improvement of small ones. If we think our opportunities are not good enough, we had better improve them. Remember, we are responsible for talents, for time, and for opportunities.

As a general rule those who claim to have no opportunities, despise small ones, and those who despise small opportunities never get large ones. Strive to make everyone you come in contact with feel better for having known you, and if there are any shadows in your life, you will find them fleeing away as the darkness disappears at dawn.

There is for everyone a field to cultivate and a harvest to reap. If we have worldly means, consecrate them to proper use. If we have eloquence, use it on the side of right. But if we have neither of them, we have at any rate a smile with which we can encourage the disheartened.

We are to be awarded not according to the greatness of our work, but according to the industry with which we employ the talents we really possess. We congratulate all those who are toiling for the outcasts and the wandering. Their work will soon be over, but the influence they are setting in motion will never stop. On the last great day, would we rather be able to say, "I added house to house, land to land, I owned half the city, whatever I wanted I got," or on that day to have Christ look us in the face and say, "I was hungry and ye fed Me; I was naked and ye clothed Me; I was sick and in prison and ye visited Me, inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these My brethren, ye did it unto Me?"

There should be no more self-satisfying labor than that which is done in the home, and which makes it the dearest place in the world to father, mother, and children. Children may be early taught to perform their share of the work that must be done for mutual comfort and the good of the home, and this training is the best preparation they can have to fit them to take their place in the world in after years. They learn sympathy, forbearance, unselfishness and self-sacrifice, as they live and work and play together, all qualities which will contribute largely to their future happiness and success in life. For when they go forth into the great outer world, they will find it but a large community, where each must make some sacrifice and render some service for the common good, which they have learned to do in the little community within the home.

THE HOME LIGHT.

The light of home's a wondrous light,

So tender is its shining.

So soft it follows through the night,

Our weary road outlining.

Though lonely and for years we roam

Far from the ones who love us,

Yet ever shines the light of home.

Like God's grace spread above us.

The light of home's a wondrous light,

Though life it follows seeming,

Yet when with age the hair is white,

Clear in the front 'tis gleaming.

It shines from where our loved ones are;

Oh, this is Love's divining!

And through the gates of heaven ajar

At last we see it shining.

THE TABLE IN THE HOUSE IS THE TEST OF CHARACTER.

If there is a disagreeable one in the family, the disagreeableness shows itself at the table. There the children show whether they are selfish or sacrificing, polite or impolite. Table manners reflect the condition of the home.

The greatest blessing that ever came to this nation is that of an elevated literature. The printing press is the mightiest agency on earth for good and for evil. Standing as we do, chin deep in fictitious literature, it is a most favorable sign among our readers that this department is so highly appreciated by a majority of them. The good influence of a moral newspaper in our midst will live long after the editor has passed to his reward.

HOME LIFE.

The home should be made the happiest place on earth. The example of home life should be pure and ennobling. It is in the home that the heart is molded and character formed for eternity. Take a low, miserable home and watch the results which follow. Children reared in such homes are easily led into vice and crime. The worst criminals in our land have been made so by bad home examples.

Take a refined and pure home, surrounded with pleasant associates and good examples, with the ordinary comforts of life, and you will seldom see the children of such a home going astray.

Refined literature, sweet music, happy associates should be the environment of every home of our land. Poverty need not be a bar to such a home if the influences and examples are only pure and good. How faithfully then should every home strive to make that place of abode the richest in virtue and the dearest of all places on earth.

PLEASANT MEMORIES.

About the only thing that we can take with us on that journey that lies ahead of each one, is our memories. And, as in so many other things in life, the thing that is of such great importance to us is the thing that is entirely beyond our control.

We may plan to have a delightful summer, but disease and trouble may pile up about us, until the world is black with misery. We may plan to visit a friend, with the brightest hopes and anticipations, and we may meet treatment that sends us home grieved and heart-sore, with memories that will always be bitterness to us.

But there is one thing we can do. We can resolve to give to others all the pleasant memories that it lies in our power to give.

A bunch of flowers sent to a sick friend, a bit of poetry clipped from a weekly paper; a gift of a few flower seeds; a pleasant word; a little bit of cheer here and there; all these may have the pleasant memory that last forever.

But let the words be real; no pert or sham compliment can ever touch the heart. It is the real that we feel and that counts. But to give pleasant memories to others, we must be true and good at heart. We cannot be selfish, or vain, or deceitful without its reaching the surface and showing there, no matter how much we try to conceal it. As a ship leaves a wake of white foam behind it, so we all leave a wake as we pass along, but each is tinged and colored by the heart within.
