SOMEbody is sending THE STAR a copy of a Socialist paper called Appeal to Reason. The paper is wrongly named. It should be called Appeal to Prejudice, for that is really all that it is. The paper is cleverly edited by a shrewd, designing chap in Kansas, who is just smart enough to know that every community has its share of visionaries, malcontents, idlers and dreamers that will eagerly patronize such a mind-poisoning sheet and pile up money for its scheming publisher. Of course, the smart guy who edits and publishes the Socialist sheet aforesaid, does not believe much of the cleverly written and deceptive rot that his sheet contains, but he has lots of willing dupes who do believe it, and that's all he cares for. The balance is as easy as his victims, and all the publisher needs to do is to keep up his howl, laugh up his sleeve and draw the profits. We know of a number of fellows right here in this community who have been showing remarkable zeal for the benefit of the aforesaid Socialist rot-dispenser, while at the same time they have been putting no vim and energy into their own affairs. The said paper has made fools of a number of parents in this vicinity, poisoned the minds of their children and blighted their prospects of success in life. Such people will almost always be found living from hand to mouth all their lives. The dreams of the Socialists can never be realized, because they are contrary to the laws of nature; and the man who allows himself to keep his thoughts upon the vagaries of socialism is merely wasting valuable time. Life is largely what we make it, and success is within the reach of all who possess sound minds and bodies and are willing to strive for it. The dreams of the Socialists, if they could be realized, would destroy all incentives to progress in the arts and sciences, kill laudable ambitions and return the human family in time to its original state of savagery.

Meyersdale Beer is Pure. It is a well-known fact to all brewers and those engaged in the manufacture of beer, that good water is necessary to the production of good beer. In this respect the water used by the Meyersdale Brewing Company is unsurpassed, on account of its purity and its freedom from mineral and vegetable matter. It comes from a never-failing spring, cool, clear and sparkling, filtered through the sand rock, and bright as distilled water. With this as a basis, and the choicest selection of malt and hops, this company is producing an exceptionally pure and wholesome beer. These are some of the reasons why the Meyersdale Brewing Co. maintains, and the public is justified in believing that Meyersdale Beer is Good Beer. 2-22

WOODS FOR VEHICLES AND IMPLEMENTS.

Conditions in Manufacture and Trade Brought Out by the Forest Service—Popular Fallacies.

The manufacture of vehicles and implements occupies a rather curious position among wood-working industries, as is shown by a study of vehicle and implement woods lately made by the Forest Service. It appears that in spite of the fact that the more popular woods are becoming scarce enough to make the use of substitutes in some cases imperative, the trade is largely tied down by unfounded prejudices in the minds of consumers against the use of substitutes. And these prejudices, which manufacturers would now often be glad enough to overcome, are in some degree due to their own efforts, under the stress of competition, to create and strengthen a demand for the very woods which the depletion of supplies renders it more and more difficult to obtain. For years the maker of vehicles and implements made a point of the fact that his wares were constructed only of certain kinds of wood, and the consumer has been led to believe that these kinds, and only these, are the best. Now that other kinds must be used, the consumer, who has been an apt scholar, still insists on having the old favorites.

Under these peculiar circumstances many manufacturers have chosen perhaps the only course open to them—that is, they have used substitutes without taking the consumer into their confidence. And in so doing they have been justified not only by the pressure of competition and the scarcity of supplies, but also by the excellent results which have been given by the new woods. The consumer, however, who feels that he has been tricked, when he discovers what has been done, is likely to be indignant. When he finds, for instance, that the box of his buggy or wagon, which he took to be poplar, is not poplar at all, but spruce, red fir, cypress, cottonwood, or red gum, he at once complains to the retailer. In this way he learns for the first time that a large percentage of so-called popular vehicle bodies are actually made of one or other of these unfamiliar species. In the implement trade similar conditions obtain, though not in the same degree.

To facilitate the introduction of legitimate substitutes, it therefore seems necessary to put the matter to open trial, and, by removing popular fallacies, to enable manufacturers to offer in good faith a product which will bring a reasonable profit without falling short in utility.

One of the means which the Forest Service has worked out to try the real serviceability of the new woods is a plan by which certain lumber producers and manufacturers have agreed to lend their co-operation. The producers will furnish, without cost, the woods which give the best promise of meeting trade requirements, while the manufacturers, as their share in the demonstration, will convert these woods into parts of vehicles. The vehicles will then be given out to the trade, each part clearly marked with the name of the wood from which it is made, so that it may be openly tested in practical use and compared from all points of view with its favored predecessors.

In addition to this trial, the Forest Service has arranged for a series of laboratory tests of manufactured parts of vehicles to determine the relative strength of the newer woods and their suitability for use in vehicle construction.

Keen interest in these studies has been shown by makers of vehicles and implements. A circular setting forth the scope and results of the work, together with such recommendations as the Service has to make will be published.

A Severe Test.

Don't ask a girl to marry you after dark, when she is dressed fit to kill. Call on her, and when you leave, inadvertently drop a glove on the piano. Return for it the next morning at 9 o'clock. If she comes to the door with one shoe and one slipper on, her hair done up in curl papers, dressed in an old Mother Hubbard, our advice is to take to the woods. But if she appears in a neat house dress, her hair done up, and a rose in the top of her hair, grab her quickly.—Ex.

Wholesome Remarks Addressed to Cambria County Liquor License Applicants by Judge O'Connor.

Judge O'Connor, of the Cambria County Court, recently made some very appropriate remarks to the applicants for wholesale and retail liquor licenses. In the following paragraphs the principal points of the liquor traffic are touched upon by Judge O'Connor, and applicants are warned against countenancing or permitting any of the evils the court has called their attention to.

"We are led to believe from matters occurring on the trial of some cases that the practice of receiving merchandise in exchange for intoxicants still obtains in some portions of our county. This practice is a violation of the law, and is made a penal offense by the act of assembly. In no instance will this court grant a license to one guilty of such practices, and in every instance, upon proper proof, will it revoke a license if held by such a person.

"We have heretofore spoken of the presence of loafers, idle and disreputable persons in and about licensed places, and the one who hesitates to dismiss a loafer, or who, in order to make a living out of his business, must encourage idle and disreputable persons to visit his place and remain there, is not a fit person to be entrusted with a license.

"There is also another matter to which we have heretofore called your attention, namely, the suppression of vulgar and profanity in and about your places. Where practices of this sort are permitted to go unrestrained and obtain in any degree, a house could be regarded as little less than disorderly, and a licensee who can not, or will not, suppress vulgar and profanity in and about his place, is not a fit man to hold a license.

"There is yet another matter to which we have hitherto referred, and which we desire to repeat to you, as well as to call attention of those officers of the law who have to do with the prosecution of its violations, namely, it is a criminal offense for one holding a license to sell or furnish liquor to one visibly intoxicated. "Visibly intoxicated" does not mean that a person must be hopelessly drunk, but it does mean that when one by his manner, appearance and speech indicates that he is already affected by intoxicating drink, that you may not lawfully sell or furnish him more.

"In conclusion, those who sell intoxicating liquors by retail for the year ensuing after March 15, 1906, and desire to have the same continue throughout the year, must cease to make presents, must refuse any extended credit, must not employ music, must not furnish elaborate free lunches, must not permit the presence of loafers, idle and disreputable persons, of boys and women of doubtful character in and about the premises, must not furnish liquors in exchange for merchandise of any character, must suppress vulgar and profanity, and must keep your place in a clean and sanitary condition. Wholesale and retail licensees must not employ agents to solicit trade from other than licensees, and must not deliver intoxicants to disorderly houses. This applies to all wholesalers, irrespective of class."

So much for Judge O'Connor, and that his remarks are timely and in order, no reasonable person will deny.

Found No Graft.

Squire W. H. H. Baker, president of the board of county auditors, made his final official visit to the county-seat in connection with the 1905 audit, last Saturday. The settlement, which was perhaps the largest and most complex in the history of Somerset county, was completed within a period of twenty-four days, without the assistance of a clerk. Twenty-eight days, including the service of a clerk, were required by the board of auditors, last year, to verify the county's accounts, the county auditors this year curtailing expenses then incurred exactly $81. From this it will be seen that Messrs. Baker, Steinbaugh and Miller are lightning calculators. Squire Baker states that the board found no evidence of "graft," alleged to exist in county financial affairs. He, however, intimated that some justices and assessors "farm" their offices and burden the county with considerable needless expense.—Rockwood Leader.
