Thirty-five lives were crushed out in a headend collision of two passenger trains near Adobe, Col., on the Denyer & Rio Grande railroad, and nearly a score of the victims were incinerated, several beyond identification, by a fire that destroyed the wrecked coaches. Over 20 were injured, but all will probably recover.

Many of the dead were homeseekers bound for the northwest. The three crushed locomotives set fire to the splintered coaches and it was hours before all the bodies were recovered, the flames being so hot that rescuers could not approach the debris until the fuel burned out.

It was a wild, stormy night in the mountain canons when the two heavy trains met. Blinding snow darkened the rocky gorges and speed was no high. Suddenly headlights flashed out, and it was realized by the engineers that something was wrong. According to Fireman J. H. Smith of the westbound train. Engineer Walter Coslett applied the emergency brake, but the slippery rails, allowed the momentum of the heavy trains.

Flames Ran Through Debris.
Hardly had the noise of the wreck ceased when a sheet of "fire "run through the shattered cars of both trains.
