Life Prisoner Pardoned.

Governor Warfield, of Maryland, has pardoned Jeremiah Barkholder, after having served nine years of a life sentence in the penitentiary, where he was sent by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in 1897, upon conviction on a charge of felonious assault. His victim was his niece. Among the petitions for executive clemency was a letter from the victim, who has since married, and who takes the blame for the act largely upon herself.

LOOK A LITTLE AHEAD.

It is always well to have a box of salve in the house. Sunburn, cuts, bruises, piles and boils yield to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Should keep a box on hand at all times to provide for emergencies. For years the standard, but followed by many imitators. Be sure you get the genuine DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Sold by E. H. Miller. 8-1

Let the Kicker Get Out.

There is no reasonable excuse for any man to live in a town if he doesn't like it. If you have no word of commendation to say for your own town, its institutions or people, emigrate. You won't stop the town clock by going away. The church bells will have the same musical ring, the little dogs will play just as well, and the pure air, bright sunshine and sparkling water will have the same health-giving properties. Speak a good word for your neighbors, if you can; if you cannot, don't everlastingly enlarge on their faults. If you have become thoroughly disgruntled, move away; go somewhere where things will suit you.—Ex.

Crude Thoughts As They Fall From the Editorial Pen.—Pleasant Evening Reveries.

We have seen signs that indicate that gambling in various forms is getting a foothold in the community. Notice the effect of this crime upon domestic happiness. It has sent its ruthless plowshare through hundreds of families, until the wife sat in rags, and the daughters were disgraced, and the sons grew up to the same infamous practices, or took a short cut to destruction across the murderer's scaffold. Home has lost all charms for the gambler. How tame are the children's caresses and a wife's devotion to the gambler! How drearily the fire burns on the domestic hearth! There must be louder laughter, and something to win and something to lose, an excitement to drive the heart faster and fill the blood and fire the imagination. No home, however bright, can keep back the gambler. The sweet call of love bounds back from his iron soul, and all the endearments are consumed in the flame of his passion.

The home that possesses a cheerful wife and mother is not only a veritable haven of rest, but the safe harbor whose beacon light will guide her bread-winners safely past all rocks and shoals with unflinching certainty. The woman whose cheerful spirit can take that brave attitude toward life that enables her to bear courageously the inevitable burdens of her life's environment; that strengthens her determination not to fret or worry those who, for her sake, are fighting the hard battles in the world, has reached that altitude that proclaims her price above rubies; and her influence and example are not felt only within the limits of the four walls she has made the unsailable bulwark of state and society, a happy home, but reach to those she knows not of.

Good resolutions need more winding up than an eight-day clock.

The best way to keep the boys at home is to make it an object for them not to go out to seek amusements, for these they will have. Every farm home ought to be made a very heaven on earth to its inmates. Not alone the farm home, either, but all the houses in the land. Learn each child's nature, and then work some home charm to keep him in your circle.

Childish rage unchecked, will, after a while, become a hurricane. Childish petulance will grow up into misanthropy. Childish rebellion will develop into the lawlessness of riot and sedition. If you would ruin the child, dance to his every caprice and stuff him with confectionery. Before you are aware of it, that boy of six years will go down the street, a cigar in his mouth, and ready on any corner with his comrades to compare pugilistic attainments. The parent who allows the child to grow up without ever having learned the great duty of obedience and submission has prepared a cup of burning gall for his own lips, and appalling destruction for his descendant.

Every father and mother who reads this paper and have a child in the home have enough on hand. A throne, a crown, a scepter, a kingdom under charge. Be careful how you strike him across the head, jarring the brain. What you say to him will be centennial and millennial, and a hundred years and a thousand years will not stop the echo and re-echo. Do not say, "It is only a child." Rather say, "It is only an immortal." It is only a masterpiece of Jehovah. It is only a being that shall outlive sun and moon and stars and ages quadrilennial. God has infinite resources, and He can give presents of great value, but when He wants to give the richest possible gift to a household, He looks around all the worlds and all the universe, and then He gives a child. Yea, in all ages God has honored childhood.

What absurd little things people quarrel about! What trivial matters cause ill-feeling in families! The mut-ton being roasted too little or the beef too much; an opinion about the temperature of the house, the style of curtain that ought to be bought for the front windows; the definition of a word, its pronunciation are things that might be argued pleasantly about, but surely are not topics worth a quarrel when peace and good will are of so much importance in the home. A little ill-feeling is like a seed that may grow into a large tree which will shadow the whole house. Many men and women must look back with regret on the hasty word or the cold reproach which was the entering wedge that split the household in two, and yet how few make a point of uttering the soft word that turneth away wrath.

Your wise mother is not given to worrying over trifles. She does not expect perfection in a day. And she has put from her, as far as the east is from the west, the ghastly possibility of setting vanity up in the room of love. So she does not begin with exhaustive attention to the multitude of etiquette, knowing that way lies the danger of making her boys prigs and her girls self-conscious society misses before they are in their teens. She lays down as the laws of her household the broad principles of respect for elders, reverence for women, kindness for all; and she permeates the home atmosphere with the finest conceptions of the deference and sympathy due from soul to soul. Her children very early delight to place a chair for grandmother and to save father steps. They learn to be proud of that restraint which enables them to keep self in the background, and to defer to brother and sister. It never enters their heads that servants are less worthy of respect than other people. They are as unabashed in the presence of wealth and power as they are tender toward suffering and poverty. When she teaches them from time to time her code of manners—and she is careful to perfect it according to her best judgment—she teaches it for home use, and it becomes fixed by becoming natural.

MAKING A HOME.

It seems a pity that the young woman who is about to establish a home and has the money to spend for its garnishing can not be persuaded from laying it out all at once. She robs herself of so much future enjoyment. The spick and span sets of furniture which are carelessly ordered from an upholsterer, and carried home and stood around her parlor by his men, will never afford her half the satisfaction she can get in a room in which today she buys a chair, and next week, seeing there must be a table to accompany the chair, she starts on a fresh shopping excursion, and finds a table which is exactly what she is looking for; and in another month, discovering the need of a bookcase or screen, she has again the delight of the hunt, and the gratification of obtaining the prettiest screen and bookcase in the city.

Such a room is a growth, a gathering together of household treasures, little by little, and piece by piece. Each article, bought only when the need arises or when something is happily found to just meet the need, will have a family history which makes it an entertaining as well as a valuable possession. Each couch and footstool is an achievement; each rug and curtain represents a triumph. Such a home built up gradually, with careful planning in each part, with thought and loving consideration in all its details, acquires a meaning far deeper than could be purchased by the longest purse from the most fashionable cabinet maker.

AN OVERWORKED STOMACH.

Try a little KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA after your meals. See the effect it will produce on your general feeling by digesting your food and helping your stomach to get itself into shape. Many stomachs are overworked to the point where they refuse to go farther. Kodol digests your food and gives your stomach the rest it needs, while its reconstructive properties get the stomach back into working order. Kodol relieves flatulence, sour stomach, palpitation of the heart, belching, etc. Sold by E. H. Miller. 8-1
