How Some Old People Make Themselves Ridiculous.

One of the grave mistakes of some old people is to try to appear young by assuming the garb and manner of youthfulness.

A man may be young in heart, cheery, and buoyant, but he is old in body, and this will show through whatever disguise he may assume.

Has any man ever deceived anyone into thinking him younger than he is by dyeing his hair or beard? You know, and every man ought to know, that it only makes them look more wrinkled and decayed.

Women who dye—well, you know it when they do, and you don't think any the better of them for it. An old woman with dyed black hair and girlish curls is just too old for anything.

Live comfortably and you will show your comfortableness in your face and manner, and no one will think less of you because of your years.

Free Analyses and Assays of Minerals by Government.

Among the numerous mistaken ideas that prevail regarding the functions of the Government, one of the most general is that some department in Washington is prepared to make analyses or assays of anything in the shape of a mineral which may be submitted by any citizen of the country. Naturally, the Geological Survey is credited with this function, and as a result not a day passes without the receipt of a dozen or more requests for such work. These requests are acknowledged with the statement that the Survey has neither the legal authority nor the available funds to make indiscriminate analyses or assays for private parties.

A small appropriation is made for chemical and physical researches related to the geology of the United States, but this is inadequate for the absolutely necessary chemical and physical work required by the geologists in connection with these investigations. Even if the appropriation were sufficient to provide ample facilities for making private analyses, it could not be used for this purpose, unless such analyses were directly contributory to the solution of some geologic problem. Fortunately, a large proportion of the specimens submitted can readily be determined by means of simple tests and careful visual examination. Such a determination is always made wherever possible, and the person who submits the mineral is given all the information available regarding it. In most cases this is quite as satisfactory as the result of an elaborate and expensive analysis would be. A large proportion of the specimens submitted are absolutely worthless, some have a commercial value only when occurring in large masses and convenient to transportation, while a few afford clues to new occurrences of rare and interesting minerals which are of great value in connection with the regular work of the Survey.

It is not expected or desired that the practice of sending in minerals for determination should be discontinued, but it is best that the public should not rest under a misapprehension as to what can be done with them.

The Idle Tongue.

Don't slander. Don't repeat scandal. Don't yield to the temptation to tell your neighbor or chance acquaintance a bit of idle gossip picked up at random, even though you would give salvo to your conscience by declaring that you do not believe the story. If you do not believe it, or if you have a flickering doubt as to its authenticity, keep it to yourself. And even though you have reason to believe it true, why repeat it? What is to be gained thereby? Verily, the idle tongue is one of the arch-enemies of society. It has blasted more lives, ruined more homes and brought more gray hairs in sorrow to the grave than demon rum or open villainy. It scatters its mischief in every nook and corner of society. It sows thorns where they spare not upright manhood, virtuous womanhood or even innocent childhood.

A morsel of scandal, be it ever so idle, once it is started on its journey of insidious mischief, never stops or pauses. Day and night it travels, gathering force as it moves, and ever dragging into its wake the fame of some hitherto fair name. It spares none of any station or condition in life. It leaves heartaches, destroys confidences, plants the seeds of distrust where suspicion never rested before, and leaves a trail marked by sorrow and blasted hopes.

Don't slander. Don't even gossip, for the idle gossip of today may be—probably will be—the withering, ruinous scandal of tomorrow. Guard your own tongue as you would the life of your best beloved, for there are others in plenty that wag without thought or charity to hold them in check.—Albany (Ga.) Herald.

N. G. Keim Defeated for Congressional Nomination.

Some time ago it was believed that N. George Keim would surely succeed in landing the Republican congressional nomination in the district in which he resides in West Virginia, but we regret to announce that his aspirations will not be realized. Most of the counties in his district have held their primaries, and George C. Sturgiss, Mr. Keim's opponent, has already more delegates than he will need to land the nomination. To be nominated it will require 118 votes in the convention, and it is conceded that Sturgiss will have no less than 175.

Sturgiss is backed by the wealth and influence of U. S. Senator Elkins, and it is said that his success has cost Mr. Elkins not less than $25,000 or $30,000. However, in Randolph county, the home of both Elkins and Keim, the latter secured the 19 delegates easily, in spite of the great wealth and political pull of the former. That speaks well for our old friend and schoolmate, and all Salisbury, his old home town, should feel proud of Mr. Keim's great popularity in the county where he now resides and is best known. Keim would have been an easy winner in his district, only for Elkins and his millions back of Sturgiss. It is a case where wealth won and true merit was defeated.

It All Depends.

On Mount Tom, in Massachusetts, there is a traction system operating two cars on a cable. As one car goes up, the other comes down. The grade is an extraordinarily steep one, a fact that frequently calls forth anxious inquiries relative to the safety of the system from nervous tourists.

One afternoon a lady from Boston seated herself in the rear of the car that was about to make its ascent of the mountain, and it was at once observed that she was extremely anxious as to the outcome of her temerity.

"Is this car perfectly safe?" she asked of the conductor.

"It is considered to be, madam," was the reply.

"Have there never been any accidents?"

"None to speak of, madam—that is, no serious ones."

The lady sighed uneasily. "I was wondering," observed she, "what would become of me if the cable should break when we were just reaching the top of the mountain."

"That would depend upon how you had spent your past life, madam," quietly replied the conductor.

Points for Fishermen.

You cannot legally spear or gig a fish of any kind.

Or use artificial bait or more than three hooks at a time.

Or use a cast or throw net.

Or draw off the water from a dam to catch fish.

Or use explosives or poisons or lime for the purpose of killing fish.

Or obstruct the migration of fish.

Or use pound nets, except in Lake Erie.

Or use more than one rod, hook or line at a time.

Or shoot fish with a gun, bow and arrow, or by any other means.

Or snare or loop fish.

Or use a stir net.

Or use more than one tip-up at a time.

Or shingle a stream or use any other method whereby migrating fish are prevented from following the regular course of the stream.

The department of fisheries has ruled that three hooks fastened together after the manner of those attached to a trolling line, shall be considered one hook. This ruling is not based upon a court decision.

Fourth of July Statistics.

The Chicago "Tribune," as usual, comes forward with Fourth of July statistics. The list of casualties shows 38 deaths and about 2,800 injured. The death toll is smaller than last year, when 42 was the number. But of course this does not include the many victims to be reported later, when blood poison and tetanus do their deadly work. The home of the Liberty Bell, Philadelphia, leads all other cities with 711 dead and injured patriots, while New York had only two killed and 65 hurt. Toledo holds the center of the stage as an example of sanity, with only two injured, one being in a runaway. The "stray bullet" and the toy pistol were the chief offenders all over the country. Thus the Nation pays the penalty in blood for its annual celebration, but there is no need to despair. Most people have already learned moderation, and those who never voluntarily learn will be compelled by the law when city governments are fully aroused to their duty.

Japanese Civilization.

As illustrating his claim that the Japanese are a more civilized people than the Americans, a gentleman at a recent Boston dinner table cited Professor Morse's statement that if, in a Japanese city, one picked up a stone to throw at a dog, the dog does not run, because he has never had a stone thrown at him and does not know what the action means. Manifestly, if such a state of universal gentleness and kindness prevails in Japan that not even a stone is thrown at a dog by a boy, there must be a very high and thorough civilization permeating all classes of the population. This argument may not be accepted as complete by the sociologists, who would doubtless maintain that it requires something else than gentleness and humanity to make civilization. But certainly the fact is to be taken as an excellent item of evidence in making out a case of high civilization for the Japanese. And it is a significant fact that it was reserved for our own European-American civilization to introduce the completest refinement of cruelty to animals.—Listener, in Boston Transcript.
