WEATHER PROPHECY.

Not Made by Hicks, but More Accurate.

While we are not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, yet is it becoming a popular fad to give weather forecasts, so here is our prediction for next month:

During the first half there will be some brisk winds from the north, but every day the sun will rise, and often there'll be gloomy skies; some days, however, may be fair, with southern winds and mellow air. These things will happen, sure, we know, because they always happen so.

The good month's moon will get full, and office-seekers work their "pull." Some lucky one will land the prize, while other men, esteemed as wise, will fail in all they undertake, and find they made a sad mistake, for charlatans to fortune ride, while modest worth is thrust aside. These things will happen, sure, we know, because they've always happened so.

In this good month of 1906, the boys and girls will have their fun. They'll go to parties, dance and spark; they'll kiss each other in the dark; they'll marry and begin their life, like happy, hopeful man and wife, and sometimes they will own a kid, just like their dads and mummies did. These things will happen, sure, we know, because they've always happened so.—Ex.

SORE OR SOAR.

Some years ago two students at a large institution received exactly the same mark for their first essays. The mark was the lowest given in the class of sixty.

One student said, "I'm sore; I expected better than that."
 "Well," said the other, with a laugh, "I'll soar; for I'll do better than that the next time."

The one student left before the term was half through. The other remained, and at the end of the term ranked among the first ten of his class.

Disappointment has always the one effect or the other. It makes one either sore or soar.

The right spirit will determine to soar. Any defeat to-day will make him more determined to win to-morrow.

And as to either defeat or disappointment, the less one refers to them the better. It is no use to seek to explain them. The one thing to do is to accept the lesson, wherever the fault may lie, and to be guided by it for the future.

It does no good to feel sore at men or circumstances. The wise course is to soar, and so forget one is sore.

Not "I'm sore," but "I'll soar," is a good motto to hang in the innermost room of your heart.—Selected.

Regarding Family Jars.

A group of Sabatha women recently put it to a vote and decided that the easiest man to put up with, after all, is the man with the quick temper.

He flies up, says a few bad words, knocks a few things around, slams the door and is over it. One woman says her husband grows excessively polite when she has displeased him. When he is ostentatious in picking up her handkerchief, getting her a chair and opening the door for her, she knows there is trouble ahead. A second woman says she trembles when her husband looks grieved. When a sad expression appeared around his mouth she immediately began to look back over the past few hours to find out what she had done. A third said her lord and master became patient. He waited humbly for her to finish her harangue, acquiesced patiently in all she said, and put up with her caustic remarks as with vagaries of a little child.

The consensus of opinion was that a few smashed dishes is the most satisfactory way out of the family jar. The atmosphere becomes cooled immediately after an explosion, and there is always a nice, refreshing making-up when the smoke of battle clears away.—Sabatha (Kan.) Herald

To Republicans:

We are anxious to have every Republican in close touch, and working in harmony with the Republican National Congressional Committee in favor of the election of a Republican Congress.

The Congressional campaign must be based on the administrative and legislative record of the party, and that being so, Theodore Roosevelt's personality must be a central figure and his achievements a central thought in the campaign.

We desire to maintain the work of this campaign with popular subscriptions of One Dollar each from Republicans. To each subscriber we will send the Republican National Campaign Text Book, and all documents issued by the Committee.

Help us achieve a great victory.

TWENTY YEAR BATTLE.

"I was a loser in a twenty year battle with chronic piles and malignant sores, until I tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve; which turned the tide, by curing both, till not a trace remains," writes A. M. Bruce, of Farmville, Va. Best for old Ulcers, Cuts, Burns and Wounds. 25c. at E. H. Miller's, druggist.

The Mad Who Digs.

The New Castle News tells of an effort in that county to effect a Semi-Demmy fusion on Congress in opposition to Congressman Acheson, but reports that the proposition has been abandoned because the Lincolnites feared it might militate against the Emery vote.

And well they may. After all, the Emery Republicans are not Democrats. They won't stand for too much tinkering with their Republicanism. They believe the Republican party with all its faults as they see them is better than the Democratic party, which has ceased to stand for anything that is tangible and veers about like a windmill with every passing popular breeze.

If the Semi-Demmy mixture is made too rank, the Lincoln men will vote the Republican ticket straight.

Congressman Acheson does well to stick to his district and not wander off after the flowers of ambition that grow in larger political fields. In his own potato patch he can't be beaten. When the bosses help him not, he gets out and digs.—Connellsville Courier.

Too Brave.

"The bravery of young men," said Rear Admiral Buhler at Atlantic City, "is a fact that I shall never cease to marvel over. Did you ever hear of a hope too forlorn, a risk too overwhelming, for the young men of the armies and navies of the world to undertake?"

"If only the young men's wisdom equaled their bravery! But that is impossible. Sometimes I think boys have so much bravery that there is no room in them for anything else."

"I used to know a boy who was brave enough; but reckless, careless, extravagant. He accumulated a great quantity of debts."

"His father gave him a talking to one day."

"Suppose," he said, "that I should be taken away suddenly; what would become of you?"

"I'd stay here," the boy answered, smiling. "The question is, what would become of you?"

How to Cut Glass.

Glass can be cut without a diamond, and the way is very simple.

Dip a piece of common string in alcohol, and squeeze it reasonably dry. Then, tie the string tightly around the glass on the line of cutting.

Touch a match to the string and let it burn off. The heat of the burning string will weaken the glass in this particular place.

While it is hot, plunge the glass under water, letting the arm go under well to the elbow, so there will be no vibration when the glass is struck.

With the free hand, strike the glass outside the line of cutting, giving a quick, sharp stroke with any long, flat instrument, such as a stick of wood or a long-bladed knife, and the cut will be as clean and straight as if made by a regular glass cutter. Large bottles can thus be readily utilized for jelly glasses.

KNOW HIM?

I know a nice young fellow—one whom everybody knows—Of whom I've never heard he doesn't settle what he owes; He's always where the crowd is—you can meet him anywhere—Good fellowship's his motto, and he wears a jolly air. But somehow, when a check's to pay—of course, it's not a crime—He reaches for his coin, but never gets it out in time.

You meet him at the bar, sometimes, when no one notes or thinks Which one it was that ordered up that second round of drinks! The barkeep waits suggestively, and polishes the bar, All start to pay at once—of course, you know how such things are, This man says, loudly, "That's on me!" His efforts are sublime To reach his money—but he never gets it out in time!

The waiter's check at dinner lies unnoticed till he sees The other fellow take it—then his grief you can't appease! Ride with him on the street car, and abstractedly he stares About when the conductor comes along to take the fares. The other fellow pays—and then he wildly waves his dime— But I wonder why it is he never gets it out in time.

RAMIE FIBER FOR FLAX.

Cheap Substitution May Replace Genuine Article.

About twenty years ago ramie fiber was experimented with by manufacturers in Scotland as a substitute for flax in the weaving of damask table cloths and napkins with unsatisfactory results. But their attention has recently been brought to the subject by a Glasgow firm, who believes it has solved the problem of overcoming the objections to ramie as a substitute for other fibers. Their ideas relative to the proper method of treating ramie so as to overcome the objections heretofore raised against it as a fiber for weaving purposes are here quoted:

"The 'hairy' appearance of spun and woven ramie goods is due either to all of the following points or to one or the other of them—If a ramie fiber is degummed more than flax the fiber is more 'cottonized'; consequently the woven goods made therefrom possess a 'touch' almost like cotton. The hairy appearance of the ramie yarn or woven goods is a proof that the fiber has not been properly combed—that is to say, the fiber has not been drawn and combed into equal lengths, and by spinning not all the lengths of the fiber has been caught in the torsion of the yarn."

"In order to spin ramie like flax it ought to contain as much gum as flax when ready for being hackled. This can be done. Further, the spinning machinery ought to be made suitable for the length of the fiber, and care should be taken to spin fiber combed to equal lengths. Assuming this were done properly with a fiber not made brittle by the misuse of chemicals, the results undoubtedly would be a regular yarn with a firm touch like flax. The woven goods made thereof would not show a 'hairy' appearance more than flax does."

"Ramie has no doubt a great future, but a regular supply of this fiber prepared in the state of flax for hackling must, in the first instance, be created and sold on the market at a price between jute and flax. It is to-day possible to accomplish these two points owing to the fact that the fiber can now be extracted by machinery properly and in quantity."

Story of a Photographer.

The following story of a young lady living in the country who came to London to be photographed is vouched for by a well known London photographer. After some days the lady, Miss B., was informed the photograph was not a success, and another sitting was suggested.

This she agreed to, but again she was informed that the photograph was a failure. There was a third sitting. In two days time she received an urgent letter from the photographer, asking her to come up to his studio and to bring a friend with her. Miss B. went, accompanied by her mother, and was shown the amazing results of the three sittings.

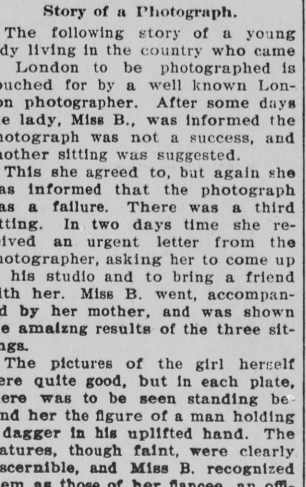

The pictures of the girl herself were quite good, but in each plate, there was to be seen standing behind her the figure of a man holding a dagger in his uplifted hand. The features, though faint, were clearly discernible, and Miss B. recognized them as those of her fiancé, an officer in the Indian army. The effect of this experience was so great that after a few days she wrote out to India, breaking off the engagement.

Postal Officials Numerous.

According to the returns just issued by the International Union, Germany has more postal officials than any other country in the world, the total number amounting to 263,517. It must, however, be taken into consideration that in Germany the telegraph and telephone employees are included in the total, while in other countries they to a certain extent put in a separate list. The United States comes second with a total of 251,518. Great Britain occupies the third place with 192,454. All the remaining countries have each fewer than 100,000. The smallest of all postal administrations is that of the Turkey Islands, which consists of one solitary official.—Exchange.

Fits the Lunch! Fits the Pocket!

THE IDEAL FOLDING LUNCH BOX

represents the end of possibility in a Lunch Box, for the reason that it possesses every desirable feature that a Lunch Box can possess, and has more than one valuable advantage that no other lunch box ever had. It is strong and durable, and will give years of continued service. It is convenient to carry both in and out of use. It is attractive in appearance, and because of its being used for more purposes than one, is a great relief to sensitive people who dislike the idea of being seen with a dinner basket.

The Ideal Lunch Box is so low in price anyone can afford to buy it. Can be folded up in a moment to fit pocket, with no more inconvenience than an ordinary pocketbook.
