The "Courier's" Recrudescence.

In a carping, disingenuous "broadside" the esteemed Connellsville Courier of last Tuesday makes a pitiable attempt to dissect a Leader editorial of two weeks ago on the subject of vaccination.

The Leader article was written in good faith. The Leader believes the children of the State should be educated by the State, because throughout the civilized world public education has come to be recognized as one of the highest duties of government. The State has assumed to educate its young, irrespective of race, color or nationality. It has done more. It has made attendance in its schools, by all the children of school age, compulsory, because compulsory attendance makes the schools efficient.

In an evil hour a fanatic propaganda of "vaccination" prevails upon the Legislature to enact a law making the ordeal of "successful vaccination" an indispensable condition for every pupil's admission into the schools. Parents who are not cruel enough, nor cowardly enough, to inflict upon their children a barbarous "treatment" which they would resist upon themselves, take the issue into the courts. The courts uphold the "vaccination law," but the absolute right of every citizen to protect his own person can not be over-riden even by the courts. Neither can a legislature pass laws to compel the pupils' attendance and enact another law excluding them. One or the other of these laws had to go. In this case the compulsory-attendance law had to yield, because it is the older of the two. The result is a travesty upon legislation. It travesties the compulsory law. It travesties the State's public school system. It travesties liberty. It travesties common sense.

The Courier's attempt to make the Leader's article appear self-contradictory would be ludicrous, if journalism were not a serious profession. Its mutilation and shameless garbling of the editorial cannot be adequately characterized within the bounds of polite discussion. No newspaper can descend to wilful misrepresentation without losing the public respect for its utterances that is indispensable to its reputation. We resent the Courier's bare-faced garbling of the editorial, of course; but above and beyond all our virtuous resentment we pity the Twentieth Century journalist who resorts to such methods, and the Courier has our unfeigned compassion.

The arguments which the Courier adduces for the perpetuation of the vaccination outrage are so puerile that it is impossible to believe that the Courier editor, usually so lucid and "perceiving," can have given them serious thought. The rule of "the greatest good to the greatest number" applied to "vaccination" is preposterous in the light of what has transpired all over Pennsylvania within the past year. The public schools of Pennsylvania are too sacred a trust to be made the vehicle for the imposition of the impossible hobby of the "vaccination" cranks and fanatics. The "vaccination law" must go.—Rockwood Leader.

Lightning Would Rather Strike Oak Than Any Other Tree.

Very curious facts about the preference of lightning for certain kinds of trees have been collected by the bureau of forestry at Washington. It has long been noted that oaks are far more frequently damaged by lightning than beeches.

As a partial explanation it has been suggested that the smoother leaves and bark of the beech, by producing a uniform wetting of the surface in a storm, may cause lightning to reach the ground from such a tree with less damage than in the case of an oak.

But the statistics gathered by the bureau of forestry indicate that the beech is comparatively exempt from lightning strokes. Between 1900 and 1905, within a certain district, 58 oaks, about 20 firs and three or four pines were struck by lightning, but not a single beech was struck, although the beech was actually the most abundant tree in the district, outnumbering the oaks almost seven to one.
