When the overdrafts were so large as to call for remonstrances from minor officers and clerks in the bank, Hipple would fill out a note for the overdraft. Segal would sign it and it would go into the bank as cash. The overdrafts were reported to the State banking department as cash on hand. All of this was established by wit-nesses at the hearing, and more start-Hing developments are yet to come. At the request of District Attorney John C.
