EDITOR GROF, of the Somerset Democrat, in publishing an account of a shooting accident at Ellerslie, Md., says: "The ball struck the child in the left right side." Little Aleck, as the editor of the Democrat is commonly called, is so badly twisted since trying to ride two political nags at once that he can't tell a straight intelligible story about anything.

OUR present vaccination law was not passed at the instance or request of the brainy, reputable portion of the physicians of this commonwealth, but it was brought about by a rascally set of doctors who went into politics and had themselves elected to the Legislature for purely selfish reasons, with graft for their profession as their chief aim. The law should be promptly repealed at the next session of the Legislature, and the only way to have it repealed is to vote for candidates pledged to work for its repeal. A. W. Knepper and J. W. Endsley have so pledged themselves, while their opponents, Harvey Hay and F. P. Saylor, have not. The duty of the anti-vaccinationist voter is plain.

THERE is an idea prevalent among country people that the present movement for good roads is mainly furthered by automobile owners, who are scheming to have the farmers pay for speedways for their machines. The mistake involved in this idea the "dern fool" of the city who runs an automobile out into the country in such a way as to render travel by other legitimate methods unsafe is to blame. The trouble on the highway between horse and automobile is not because of the machine, but because of the man who operates it. It is the manner in which the machine is handled, and not the machine, that makes the automobile an obstacle to good roads and causes drastic and really unfair legislation against those who use the machine properly and considerately.—American Farmer.

SOME of the school teachers who are enforcing the vaccination of pupils throughout this state, say they are doing so because they fear they will be fined or sent to jail if they refuse to comply with the vaccination law. They are not in the least danger of being fined or jailed, old Doc Dixon, the State Health Commissioner, to the contrary notwithstanding. The old bluffer has threatened teachers more than once who have the good principle and courage to ignore the outrageous law, but the old public nuisance has got him out of his fat office. Herod's law to put male children to death wasn't any more hideous than Pennsylvania's present vaccination law, and neither of them ever were worthy to be obeyed. Teachers who fear being jailed if they refuse to comply with a child-murder law for the benefit of the doctors, ought to be in jail. They would do the human race more good there than in the school rooms.

A List of Prominent Anti-Vaccinationists.—How Do They Compare for Brains With the Vaccination Fanatics You Know of?

Herbert Spencer, the eminent philosopher; Prof. A. R. Wallace, the great English scientist; W. E. Gladstone, late Premier of England; Dr. George Gregory, fifty years director of the smallpox hospital, London, England; Sir James Paget, Surgeon Extraordinary to Her Majesty; Dr. W. J. Collins, twenty-five years public vaccinator of Forth, England; Dr. John Epps, twenty-five years director of the Jennerian Institute, London; Dr. Stowell, M. R. C. S., thirty years vaccine practitioner; Dr. Thomas Skinner, F. R. C. S., Liverpool; Dr. J. McKenzie, F. R. C. S., Scotland; Alexander Von Humboldt, Daniel Webster; Wendell Phillips; Prof. F. W. Newman, Oxford University; Bernard A. Macfadden, Editor Physical Culture, which has 500,000 readers monthly; and all the other Health Journals with one exception, and many others too numerous to mention.

Some Wholesome Dont's.

Don't snub a boy because he wears shabby clothes. When Edison, the inventor of the telephone, first entered Boston he wore a pair of yellow linen breeches in the depth of winter. Don't snub a boy because of the ignorance of his parents. Shakespeare, the world's poet, was the son of a man who was unable to write his own name. Don't snub a boy because his home is plain and unpretentious. Abraham Lincoln's early home was a log cabin. Don't snub a boy because he possesses a humble trade. The author of "Pilgrim's Progress" was a tinker. Don't snub a boy because of his physical disability. Milton was blind. Don't snub a boy because of dullness in his lessons. Hogarth, the celebrated painter and engraver, was a stupid boy at his books. Don't snub a boy because he stutters. Demosthenes, the great orator of Greece, overcame a harsh and stammering voice. Don't snub anyone. Not alone because some day he may far outstrip you in the race of life, but because it is neither kind nor right nor Christian.—Ex.

Lonely Spot.

According to a news dispatch, a Jamaica man was "stabbed in a lonely spot." In the case of most men this would be where the conscience is supposed to be located.—Washington Post.

VACCINATION CONDEMNED.

Read What Some of the World's Most Scientific Men Have Said About It.

E. M. Crookshank, M. D. M. R. C. S., Professor of Pathology and Bacteriology in King's College, London, England.—"I maintain there is no scientific support for vaccination, and the practice is destined to fall into desuetude. We have no known test by which we could possibly distinguish between a lymph which was harmless, and one which might be harmful to the extent of communicating syphilis."

Chas. Creighton, M. D., M. A., Author of Article on Vaccination in Encyclopedia Britannica, IX Edition.—"The Anti-Vaccinationists have knocked the bottom out of a grotesque superstition."

S. M. Munn, Waterbury, Conn.—"If medical men were made responsible for ill effects, no physician would ever vaccinate."

Dr. A. Vogt, Prof. of Hygiene and Sanitary Statistics, Berne, Switzerland.—"After collecting the particulars of 400,000 cases of smallpox, I am compelled to admit that my belief in vaccination is absolutely destroyed."

[EDITOR'S NOTE]. The people of Switzerland arose in their might and crushed out the serpent of "Vaccination," and they have less smallpox in that country now than when they indulged in vaccination.

Alexander M. Ross, A. M., M. D., F. R. S., Physician in Montreal, Canada.—"I know that 1,100 children under 12 years of age were vaccinated into smallpox and died from it during the epidemic of 1885, in Montreal. One thing is certain, thousands of children are killed annually by vaccination, or its after results, and these victims of medical ignorance and cupidity are the only persons, it can be asserted with truth, that vaccination protected from smallpox."

[EDITOR'S NOTE]. When vaccination kills, as it frequently does, it protects the victim from smallpox by removing him from the earth. The doctors alone are responsible for the great smallpox scourge in Montreal in 1885. The wholesale blood-poisoning of the people was solely responsible for the wholesale spread of the disease. But the doctors and the undertakers made a big harvest of money out of it.

Harvest Wilder, M. D., Editor New York Medical Tribune, and Professor Physiology, United States Medical College, New York.—"A vaccinated people will always be a sickly people, short-lived and degenerate. Consumption follows in the footsteps of vaccination as certainly and unequivocally as effect follows cause."

[EDITOR'S NOTE].—Do you think it possible that the eminent medical men named in this article know less than the small-fry country physicians who here and there bob up and howl themselves hoarse for vaccination, for no other reason than that it puts a few paltry, crime-stained dollars into their pockets? Your common sense ought to teach you better. The following quotations, one from John Stuart Mill, the other from Dryden, are admirably applicable to the small-fry vaccination doctors and their dupes:

"He who knows only his own side of the case, knows little of that."

"Not only crowds, but Sanhedrims may be infected with the public lunacy."

Vaccination must go, and the only way to wipe out that gigantic curse and scourge is to vote for law-makers who stand pledged to repeal compulsory vaccination laws. This can't be done by voting for men like Harvey Hay for the Legislature, unless he declares himself for the repeal of the obnoxious law which all liberty-loving, mainly Pennsylvania, men ought to seek to bring about. Ask Mr. Hay where he stands on this question before giving him your vote. Any candidate who will not declare himself in the public prints as being in favor of the repeal of the compulsory vaccination law, is not worthy of your vote, no matter what ticket he is running. Candidates Knepper and Endsley, on the Republican ticket, have so declared themselves in nearly all the newspapers of the county. Harvey Hay and Franklin P. Saylor have not so declared themselves, and it is not likely that Mr. Hay will, as he is a brother-in-law of Dr. A. M. Lichty, one of the most narrow-minded vaccinationists (for revenue only) in the county. Besides, Harvey is holding a soft job as registrar of vital statistics under old Doc Dixon, State Health Commissioner, who is a great vaccination fanatic for the pecuniary benefit of the medical trust, the meanest, most oppressive and criminal trust in existence. Dixon is a public nuisance, and the minions under him know it, but it is not to their financial interest to squeal.

Miller Renominated for State Senator.

Last Friday night the Republican conferees of the Somerset-Bedford-Fulton Senatorial district met at Hyndman to nominate a candidate for State Senator. The candidates were Norman E. Berkey, of Somerset, Dr. W. C. Miller, of Bedford, and Peter Morton, of Fulton. Miller was nominated on the first ballot, the three conferees of Fulton county voting with the Bedford conferees for him.

Consequence of a Rash Act.

"Our wife" wrote the editor of the Spiketown Blizard, "is sick from overwork. While she was snooping around our sanctum yesterday morning she found the office towel, and insisted on taking it home and washing it. Such a thing never happened before, and with the help of the Lord it shall never happen again!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Church on Emery.

At the Erie conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which closed its annual meeting this week at Meadville, the following was adopted as an amendment to the report on temperance:

Resolved, That we denounce any party or man who places brewery, church and school in the same category.

In a letter to Editor Likins, of Uniontown, some weeks ago, Lewis Emery, Democratic nominee for Governor, wrote:

However, had I been at home I would not have withheld my donation from that brewery, no more than I would from the churches, schools and hospitals. I should have been derelict if I had not come forward and done my part.

The Erie conference represents one of the largest church memberships in Northwestern Pennsylvania, embracing an influential portion of the population. It will be noticed that the conference was careful to avoid partisanship and refrained from mention of Mr. Emery, preferring to confine his record to an expression upon the general proposition in a dignified way, but the meaning is plain.

In this connection it is proper to direct attention to Mr. Emery's recent diversion at Erie and Clarion, where he urged women to take an interest in politics. In the line of his plan to appeal to every possible element of discontent with existing conditions, he has put himself on record in favor of woman suffrage, and he wants the women of the state to help him out. If there are any women who feel disposed to join in his campaign it is to be hoped that they will not overlook his assertion that the brewery is on an equal plane with the church, the school and the hospital. Outside the home the foremost fields of endeavor, to which women devote unselfish labors and for which they make many sacrifices, are the churches, schools and hospitals. Women are the very life-blood of the church, and without them our hospitals would soon close down. What do they think of the theory of Mr. Emery that they should devote the same high service and the same heroic energy to the brewery?—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

Cleanliness and Vaccination.

To the Editor of The North American.

The letter on "Vaccination and Cancer," from Dr. M. R. Leverton, in today's North American, recalls the assertion made by Humboldt nearly fifty years ago that "The practice of vaccination is dangerous to the race, by causing degeneration."

It is remarkable that this grotesque and even murderous superstition should continue to survive despite the progressive intelligence of a growing age. As stated in article on "What is Pure Lymph?" in the March number of the Westminster Review, "If the general public knew more about vaccination, and the wholesale trafficking in disease which is being carried on for the avowed purpose of protecting the public health, they would soon sweep the whole thing away, and place reliance on the only true 'preventive medicine'—clean living."

The last considerable outbreak of smallpox in Pennsylvania originated in close proximity to a vaccine farm, where it is the practice to inoculate heifers hired in the neighborhood. How delightful it is to drink a cup of milk obtained from a cow which has been duly immunized, and to dine on varietal veal, after spending an afternoon in poring over the pages of "The Jangle."

At one of the smallpox factories the virus is scraped off the corpses of calves, so that the sensitivities of the members of the humane societies may not be wounded. So many people are more solicitous respecting cruelty to animals than cruelty to children.

PORTER F. COPE.
