Don't let anyone tell you what coffee to buy. Connoisseurs and expert coffee judges differ in their tastes. The point is to get a coffee that suits your taste. GILLIES' COFFEES—"the finest obtainable," are blended to suit different tastes—all tastes. There are four distinct flavors, characteristic of coffees from different parts of the world, consequently four different prices. These different prices mean that some coffees cost more to import than others. If your choice is the lowest or the highest priced—you may be sure that you have the very best of its kind. GILLIES' 35 cent coffee is mellow, aromatic and very delicately flavored, while GILLIES' 30c coffee is rich, full-bodied and delicious—the 25c or 20c blend each has a distinctive flavor which may please you.

JOE DEFRANCESCO, the Italian in the Somerset jail now awaiting execution for the murder of a fellow countryman at Coal Run, last summer, is said to have recently become violently insane. Sheriff Begley has taken steps to have the murderer taken to a lunatic asylum instead of to the scaffold. As the prisoner's insanity came upon him since his trial and conviction, we can see no reason why the gallows should be thus cheated by a timid sheriff who evidently wants to get out of a job that should have been done and forgotten long ere this.

THE B. & O. railroad management, aroused by the number of disastrous wrecks on that road, has been quietly investigating the drinking habits of their trainmen, ascertaining when and where they obtain liquor. As a result, a number of men holding responsible positions in the running of trains have been discharged. No railroad company can afford to entrust the running of trains to men who acquire the drink habit. The responsibility of such a trust requires the best of a man's powers of body and mind. Is there any aspect under the sun in which the drink habit is not unprofitable to the drinker?—Uniontown News Standard.

A SELLER of liquor should not only be careful not to sell to his customers when they are under the influence of liquor, but he should also be careful to keep sober himself, especially when he cannot "take a little on" without getting insulting, mean and boorish towards his customers who keep themselves within the bounds of decency and sobriety. It is remarkable how short off and crusty some hotel men become every time they imbibe a little too much of their own goods, and it is amusing to note how boorish they become on such occasions. They are altogether different at such times as to what they are when they want men to sign license petitions attesting to their good moral character and the other customary lies that go with the average license application. We could name a few hotels in this county that could be set dry without any loss to their respective communities, while at the same time the proprietors thereof would be given a chance to sober up and learn how to be a little less boorish and insolent. It spoils some people very badly to have license for too long a period, and people are not slow to take notice of it, and make efforts to bring about a much needed change.

AN INSIDIOUS DANGER.
 One of the worst features of kidney trouble is that it is an insidious disease and before the victim realizes his danger he may have a fatal malady. THAW JURY DISAGREED.
 The jurors in the case of Harry K. Thaw, the Pittsburg millionaire who murdered Stanford White, announced last Friday morning that they were unable to agree, after being locked up 47 hours, and Judge Fitzgerald has discharged them. Seven of the jurors voted for a verdict of murder in the first degree, and five for "not guilty," by reason of insanity.
 Thaw has been returned to jail, where he will likely have to remain about five or six months before arrangements can be made for a new trial.

Scalp Bounty Restored.
 The Kiess bounty bill, which is of much interest to the country people in general, was signed by Governor Stuart, last week, and is now in force. It provides a bounty for the killing of the following animals: For each wildcat, $4; for each fox, $2; for each weasel or mink, $1. Any person now killing any of the above animals in order to secure the reward, must go before a magistrate, or justice of the peace, and produce the body of the animal, or the pelt of the same, and swear that he killed the same, and where. The ears are to be cut off and burned, and a certificate will be given by the justice to the person killing the animal.
 This must be presented to the county commissioners, who will pay the reward. The county will be paid by the state for all money paid as rewards.

BITTEN BY A SPIDER.
 Through blood poisoning caused by a spider bite, John Washington, of Bosqueville, Tex., would have lost his leg, which became a mass of running sores, had he not been persuaded to try Bucklen's Arnica Salve. TO OUR READERS.

Beginning on April 11th, we started to revise our entire subscription list, and all subscribers found to be a year or more in arrears, and most of those owing for almost a year's subscription, have or will receive statements of their accounts to date. It will take several weeks for us to go over the entire list, as we can work at it only at intervals when our time is not otherwise occupied.

The individual accounts are not large, yet many of them are too large for any person to be owing for newspaper subscription, some of them being upwards of $14.00. It is no credit to any subscriber to allow his subscription to run for years without paying something on it occasionally. Each account represents just that much hard labor and expense on our part, and collectively the accounts foot up to quite a large sum of money—more than a thousand dollars.

We therefore expect all those in arrears to square up as speedily as possible, and remember that the statements sent out are not intended as a reflection on the character of anyone, but as a hint that we need our money.

We have confided in the honesty and integrity of all of our subscribers, and anyone who will prove himself unworthy of confidence or credit is a disgrace to himself, a disgrace to the community in which he lives, and a disgrace to the human family.

Such people seldom prosper, and like Cain, the first murderer, God seems to have put a mark on them, which, though unknown to themselves, is nevertheless visible to the world at large, and most people size them up for just what they really are, and they invariably suffer and remain in squalor and poverty, because of the unfavorable rating their own bad records and markings bring upon them.

We hardly think we have a subscriber on our entire list who is unable to pay at least a portion of what he owes for the paper, and all we ask of each and every delinquent is to pay such portion as he is able to pay now, and the balance as soon as he becomes able.

THE PRICE OF HEALTH.

"The price of health in a malarious district is just 25 cents; the cost of a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills," writes Ella Slayton, of Noland, Ark. New Life Pills cleanse gently and impart new life and vigor to the system. 25c. Satisfaction guaranteed by E. H. Miller, druggist. 5-1

A Record that We May Well Feel Proud of.

Yesterday morning THE STAR was called upon by a representative of the great Bradstreet Mercantile Agency. The representative informed us that upon reliable information received he found that we were entitled to a much higher financial rating than has heretofore been accorded us by that agency, and we were then asked whether we wanted the rating changed.

We replied by asking him what rating was accorded us for honesty, integrity, prompt payment of obligations, etc., and the representative answered that our rating in those respects was as good as that accorded to any business firm in the country, adding that such a rating was more to be desired than a high financial rating in many cases. Then we told him to just leave our rating as it was.

We feel very proud of our rating with the mercantile agencies; and the wholesale and retail firms we deal with, and we know that a good rating for honesty and prompt payments is a very valuable business asset for any firm to possess. More than once we have found such a rating worth dollars and cents to us, and the business man or individual who does not have such a rating is always at a disadvantage. "Honesty is the best policy," and that quality backed with energy and good judgment, almost invariably brings success.

We are pleased to say that THE STAR is a highly successful business institution, yet there are people who sometimes feel it their duty to tell us that we don't know how to run our business, simply because we sometimes print truths which they do not relish. We take notice, however, that the people who are the most ready to give advice, are the ones most in need of it.

THE MILLS OF THE GODLESS.

A Sensible Editorial on the Thaw and White Affair.

From the Every Where Magazine. New York City, and to a considerable extent the whole world, has been deeply interested by the trial of one Harry K. Thaw, for the killing of one Stanford White. Both of these men were famous and infamous.

The man killed was a noted architect and his work was praised all over the world. Any stranger that entered New York, the city toward which all people gravitate, could not help seeing some of the effects of this man's genius. He was known as a good business man just and even generous in his dealings. So far as his outward character was concerned, he seemed of benefit to his city, and a credit to the nation.

He was the son of an author whose books no doubt graced his library in gorgeous bindings: Richard Grant White, an able and well-known commentator on Shakespeare. To be the son of an able man is sometimes a disadvantage; but it is a great help, in case ability on the part of one generation is added to that of another.

Thus we find the murdered man to be at one time in the enjoyment of enough blessings to make any reasonable person happy—as happiness goes, in this world.

The man who killed White—Harry K. Thaw—had no gifts of genius or talent; but he was the inheriting possessor of large quantities of money. It may be said that it is no credit to any one that he inherits wealth; but the same thing might be said concerning ability, a good disposition, or a sound physical constitution. The fact simply is, that Thaw had so much money by inheritance, or maternal love, that his income went a long way beyond his necessities, and gave him the means for indulging in any wild dissipation he chose. He soon became famous on two continents for his reckless and spectacular expenditure of cash.

Thaw also had a father of ability; a man who had been able to bring together vast amounts of money, through his own acumen and industry, and through taking advantage of the circumstances around him. He was to a considerable extent a benefactor of the human race. He did not advertise his munificence very far, but his old neighbors in Pittsburg say that he kept an office open every working day in the year, for the relieving of distress. He met his wife, Harry K. Thaw's mother, from the circumstance of her impulsively throwing a rich finger-ring into a collection-basket when he was an usher, and his impulse to pursue and detect so charitable a communicant.

Still, these two fathers, White Senior and Thaw Senior, possessed other and less desirable qualities, which they may have bequeathed, unconsciously, to their sons. Richard Grant White was not without his feminine adventures, and the same thing is reported of the elder Thaw. At any rate, the two sons seem to have both owed their downfall to utter disregard of the sexual deceptions of life.

Underneath Stanford White's talents seems to have lurked an utter disregard for the honor of woman. The same must be said of Harry Thaw; and it is not strange that they should have acquired a murderous hate for each other, on account of a frail creature whom both desired. Neither is it curious that one of them, "maddened" (perhaps insanely, perhaps not) at the other, should shoot him.

It has been a disgusting and pitiable drama—the trial that dragged its slimy length along. The tongues of people have dripped with it; the columns of the dailies have been smeared with it. It was thus carried into many a family circle, and children just old enough to read learned its miserable details. Coming from or going to school, those that had a cent could buy it, and with it a lot of other revolting matter. The damage this terrible case has done to the community can be felt, but not estimated.

What is the recompense for all this? Nothing, except that perhaps the community may learn that a good time for commencing to make a good citizen is as many generations back as possible; that even rich children should not be given too free a use of money; that bad literature, even though it be in daily papers, should be kept out of the family and the streets; and that lawlessness, even with the most exalted personages, must some time have its inevitable and gruesome reward.
