The Berlin Record is authority for it that the trouble the W. K. Niver Coal Company had with some of its men, recently, at Macdonaldton, is now at an end. The Record says that the trouble was only of a trivial nature, but in order to guard against any possible depredations which might be caused through the efforts of meddlesome and unprincipled labor agitators, the company secured the services of a few deputy sheriffs.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my Book on either Dyspepsia, The Heart or The Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me to-day for sample and free Book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by Elk Lick Pharmacy. 7-1

A LESSON IN HEALTH. Healthy kidneys filter the impurities from the blood, and unless they do this good health is impossible. Foley's Kidney Cure makes sound kidneys and will positively cure all forms of kidney and bladder disease. It strengthens the whole system. Sold by all Druggists. 7-1

Engineers in the "Moonshine" Country. The corps of engineers in the employ of the new Rockwood & Bakersville Railroad Company, last week discovered three ancient "moonshine" distilleries in the mountain on the west side of Laurel Hill creek, between Trent and Farronvale. The largest of these ancient vestiges of a once flourishing industry was a low, deserted log cabin built over a small mountain brook, and the little stream was carefully covered with large flat stones all the way from the little cabin down to the water's edge of Laurel Hill creek.—Rockwood Leader.

ENTOMBED IN MINE.

Thomas and Lawrence Fallon Caught by Cave-in, and Suffer in Terrible Agony for Many Hours.

Rescued Alive by Hard Work—Death Relieves One Sufferer, Other in Critical Condition.

On Tuesday morning of this week, at about 7:30 o'clock, there occurred at the Big Vein mine, on the Jere. B. Keim farm, near Salisbury, what will probably go down into history as the most horrible mine accident that ever occurred in the Elk Lick coal region.

The victims of the accident were Thomas and Lawrence Fallon, Jr., both single men, and sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fallon, of West Salisbury, and aged 19 and 23 years respectively. These young men had been at work on a pillar, in a place where the roof was exceedingly bad, and they had not been working long on the day of the accident when it became evident that a cave-in was about to take place. Had they hurriedly abandoned the place, they would have escaped all danger, but they made an effort to bring out with them a partially loaded car, which detained them just long enough to get caught by many tons of slate and earth which came crashing down upon them.

Both of the young men would have been crushed to pulp, had it not been for the car and a few pieces of timber which in some manner partly shielded and protected them. They were entombed for about a half-hour before anything concerning the accident became known to any of their fellow workmen. W. W. Hawn, a driver who knew that the Fallons must have a car about loaded, went after it with the horse he was driving, but to his dismay discovered that the place had caved in.

Hawn at once spread the alarm, and men rushed to the rescue. It was soon discovered that the entombed men were living, for they could hear them talk, and men immediately fell to work removing the earth and slate that held them prisoners. It was not long until the men could be seen, and in due time they were gotten to them whereby they could be supplied with air and water. But to rescue them was not such an easy matter, for they were pinned fast in such a manner as make their release very difficult and very dangerous.

Lawrence was caught with one arm on top of the car, on which rested tons and tons of slate and rock, while his body was pressed down in a very uncomfortable position and held securely fast by slate and earth. His brother was crushed down on the other side of the car, into a space so small that all who have inspected it are puzzled to see how he could live in such a place. However, his head and chest were comparatively free, and that alone enabled him to live in his perilous position.

Many tons of slate and earth had to be removed before either of the men could be rescued, and sometimes when rescue seemed near at hand, more material would slide into the workings, filling the space made vacant by that which was removed. And thus the work had to be done over again. However, by about noon it was possible to rescue Lawrence, who seemed to be suffering the most, and whose moans and cries were heartrending in the extreme. But owing to the position he was in, the rescuers dared not take him out before about eight o'clock in the evening, for fear of letting a lot of slate and earth down upon his brother that would surely have been started to slide by the removal of Lawrence, thus endangering the life of his brother, and in all probability killing him.

As soon as everything was made as safe as possible for Thomas, his brother, who seemed to be suffering the most, was removed and taken to his home near the mine. This was at about 8 o'clock p. m., and two hours or more elapsed before Thomas was gotten out. As soon as Thomas was released, it was soon discovered that his condition was very serious, circulation was so badly impeded during the long and severe squeeze, that the poor man was practically dead from the hips down. All efforts to restore circulation failed, and Thomas died the following morning at about 3 o'clock. Much blood passed from his bowels, which would indicate that he was hurt badly internally, although he was exceedingly brave and concealed his awful suffering to a very great extent.

At the hour of going to press, Lawrence is still living, but his condition is very serious. His arm is swollen to several times its normal size, and circulation is not yet restored to a noticeable extent. However, the patient's temperature is reported normal, but he has been passing considerable blood, and it is feared that he may have greater internal injuries than had been anticipated. There is also great danger of blood poison from the severe injuries of the arm, but the patient has a fighting chance to recover. We trust that the hopes and prayers of his parents and friends will be fully realized.

The scene at the mines while the rescue was going on was most harrowing one, and mingled together were the lamentations of men, women and children. Doctors P. L. Swank and A. M. Lichty were both there most of the time to render any assistance in their power to the suffering men, and in the evening Rev. Father Brady was summoned to administer to their spiritual desires.

The mine at which the accident occurred is under the management of J. H. Phillips, of Meyersdale, and it is said that Mr. Phillips put great stress on having his cars gotten out of dangerous places, at all hazards, in cases of cave-in. Owing to that, it is claimed, the Fallon brothers risked their lives to a greater extent than they otherwise would have done. We cannot say that Mr. Phillips expects his employees to risk their lives to save cars, but if he does, as some allege, his expectations should be ignored. A man's life is worth more than a car, and no employer has any right to expect his employees to risk their lives in order to save his property.

The funeral of Thomas Fallon will take place Friday, at 9 a. m., at St. Michael's Catholic church, in West Salisbury, Rev. Father Brady officiating.

Much sympathy is felt for the distressed family, and kind friends and neighbors are doing all in their power to help them bear up under their great load of grief and sorrow.
