

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, cures nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

S-DROPS

A PROMPT, EFFECTIVE REMEDY FOR ALL FORMS OF RHEUMATISM

Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Kidney Trouble and Kindred Diseases

GIVES QUICK RELIEF

Applied externally it affords instant relief from pain, while permanent results are being effected by taking it internally, purifying the blood, dissolving the poisonous substance and removing it from the system.

DR. S. D. BLAND

Of Brewton, Ga., writes: "I had been suffering for a number of years with lumbago and rheumatism in my arms and legs, and tried all the remedies that I could gather from medical works, and also consulted with a number of the best physicians, but found nothing that gave me the desired relief. From 'S-DROPS' I shall prescribe it in my practice for rheumatism and kindred diseases."

DR. C. L. GATES

Hancock, Minn., writes: "A little girl here had such a weak back caused by rheumatism and kidney trouble that she could not stand on her feet. The moment they put her down on the floor she would scream with pain. I treated her with 'S-DROPS' and she was cured as well and happy as can be. I prescribe 'S-DROPS' for my patients and use it in my practice."

Oregon Woman as Old as the United States.

About the time the American colonies realized the necessity of federation, while the United States constitution was as yet unwritten and the nation still unborn, there came into the world on a farm near Knoxville, Tenn., a girl baby who was destined to witness the marvelous changes that have since transformed the world, and to survive out of the old time into ours.

The child that learned to lip when Washington was President in the Eighteenth century, still lives to talk of President Roosevelt in the Twentieth century, and eyes that a hundred years ago looked lovingly upon her first-born, today smile with a fading light upon the "child of her old age," a woman now nearly 77.

This woman, now in her 121st year, is Mrs. Mary Ramsey Woods, and she lives in a modest little cottage of her own at Hillsboro, a suburb of Portland.

She was a tiny maid when the French revolution was dyeing the gutters of Paris red; she was a laughing school girl of 7 when Tennessee was admitted as a state to the Union; she was a blushing bride when the great Napoleon ceded Louisiana to the United States, and a proud young mother when Lewis and Clark tramped over a continent to "where rolls the Oregon." And she well remembers her father taking down his old gun, shouldering his blankets and going out to fight the battles of his country in the War of 1812.

Though probably the oldest woman in the world, her intellect is still keen, as is shown by the fact that a little over a year ago her testimony decided a lawsuit and settled the title to property which was deeded over 42 years ago.

Mrs. Woods was married at the age of 17, to Jacob Lemons, a prosperous farmer, and the couple lived happily together in their Tennessee home for many years. She was left a widow 75 years ago, about the time that Andrew Jackson was nearing the end of his first term as President. Four children were born to the couple, Mary J. Lemons, who died in Tennessee, four years ago, at the age of 98; Isaac Lemons, who died in Kansas City, Mo., 42 years ago; Nancy E. Bullock, who died at Hillsboro, 40 years ago, and Mrs. C. B. Reynolds, who is now living in Hillsboro, and who, though 77 years of age, is devoting her life to the care of her aged parent.

Mrs. Woods talks in a quavering voice, but very distinctly, with a marked Southern accent.

"She is blind in one eye as the result of an illness 38 years ago. Her "third sight" is now failing, though she can still see to thread a large needle. She lost her teeth 43 years ago, and since then has worn false teeth. Two years ago she cut a tooth. Her diet consists principally of vegetables. She eats three meals a day and drinks plenty of strong coffee.

Mrs. Justwed—I am sorry I ever married you!

Mr. Justwed—Don't let your conscience trouble you—it was partly my fault for offering you the temptation!

Well Repaid.

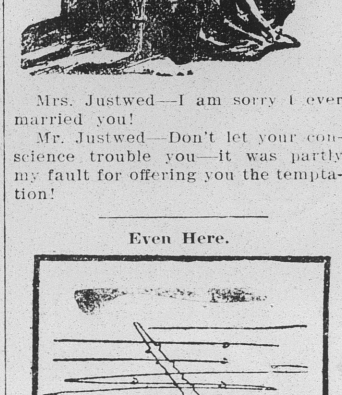

Nervous Lady (in hotel)—Porter, this bedroom is a tremendous height from the street. I do hope you take precautions against fire.

Porter—Oh, yes, mum, we take every precaution. The proprietors got the place insured for twice what it's worth.—Ally Sloper's Half-Holiday.

Mr. Bass—They say that White Pea-h's son-in-law dresses very stylishly.

Mr. Rock—Why shouldn't he? He's a tailor.

She—So you've been to London, Mr. Wix. And were you presented at court?

He—Well—er—to be quite candid, I was—but the magistrate discharged me with a caution.—Pick Me Up.

The Ambassadors.

By Hortense E. Wales.

As Jack Starling waited in the parlor of the Keane residence he had time to complain with himself, as he had done continually on his way across the continent, for consenting to intercede in a love affair. "Here I am," he meditated, "forty miles out of my way to New York—all because that vacillating partner of mine hasn't the courage and decency to face his fiancee and tell her he has ceased to care for her." An angry scowl spread over his handsome face and his gray eyes looked gloomily at the carpet.

His reflections were interrupted by the entrance of a fair-haired girl, with trim little figure and features delicately cut. "The man's a fool," thought Starling. Her appealing look of uncertainty made his task seem harder than ever.

"Is this Miss Keane?" he asked, coming a step toward her.

"Yes," she answered, cordially extending her hand. "And you, so the maid told me, are a gentleman from Alaska," she continued, as she motioned him to a seat. "What an interesting life you must have had. I suppose I've no conception of it, though I've caught little glimpses from letters."

"Why won't she help me out by asking for Sam?" was his unspoken query, but as he looked across at the bright, girlish face he could not help postponing his disagreeable errand. Led on by her questions and evident interest, he yielded to the charm of talking again to a woman of his own class and told of the adventures, the joys, and the hardships of that northern life, till at last he found himself speaking of the more intimate experiences, the longing for home and friends and the refining influence of women's company became at times almost overpowering.

"But I've talked too much about myself already, I forgot we were perfect strangers," he added apologetically.

"We're not exactly strangers," she amended. "At least I used to hear a great deal about you."

"I suppose Sam hasn't written much to her lately," reflected Starling. "The scoundrel!"

"At any rate, I've been horribly slow in coming to the point," he said, determined to wait no longer.

That she was bravely struggling for composure he could see, her tightly closed lips and the nervous way in which she clasped her slender fingers. Her distress tore his sympathetic heart and he felt that he was absolutely inhuman to augment her suffering. "My dear girl," he said impulsively, coming to her side and resting his hand on her chair. "I'm here on the most unpleasant embassy I ever undertook. My partner, as you know, planned to return from Alaska with me," he continued, looking down pityingly into the starting depths of her blue eyes, "but at the last moment he told me that he had changed his mind and wished to send a message by me."

"But who is your partner?" she asked in perplexity.

"How awkward I am!" Starling exclaimed. "I'm sorry to say my partner is Sam Lincoln."

He had often tried to decide, while on his long journey, just how the girl would bear the news. When he saw her he felt sure she would be "game"; that she would not weep hysterically nor fall fainting. He was, however, prepared for almost anything, but her next question, spoken in a tone of utter amazement: "Then you are not Mr. Lincoln?"

"Good heavens! We don't resemble each other in the least. Have you forgotten how your fiancee looks in these three years?"

As she rose and stood confronting him he saw that she was actually laughing. "I'm not his fiancee," she explained. "That's my sister Elizabeth. I'm Beatrice, and as I was abroad at the time they became engaged I've never seen the fickle gentleman."

The man groaned despite his relief at not hurting her as he had expected. "And must I go through all my agony again to tell your sister? Won't you do it for me?" His tone was almost eloquent in pleading.

She looked up with a most tantalizing smile at his distressed countenance. "Yes, I'll help you out. In fact, it won't be a very painful revelation for Elizabeth sent me down as ambassador to-day because she is very much in love with a Philadelphia lawyer."

"The devil!" he commented.

"Aren't they a nice pair," she asked scornfully. "To make us go through this tragic scene for nothing? Here, I've been pitying you so, and you're not the injured lover at all, but just—why, I don't know exactly who you are," she finished, laughing.

"Jack Starling," he replied, fumbling for his card. "And now," he added, slowly, "I'm afraid I've no excuse for staying longer, but I shall be in New York for several months, and forty miles isn't much in this part of the country, you know." He had taken her hand to say good-by, and he held it for a moment as he waited for her answer.

"Yes, you may come out and call. I shall be pleased to see you."

"Very soon?" he urged gently.

"Well—yes," she consented, drawing away her hand and dropping her eyes with a little blush before the earnestness of his gaze.

"As he opened the door he said, with seeming irrelevancy, "I think I shall not return to Alaska."

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucus instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour risings, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.
