If they don't spend more time in Salisbury when they come this way again, there will be trouble.

Parties cutting timber on the Robert Gourly farm at Fairfield discovered a bee tree. The tree was felled and in cutting it open in search of honey, they discovered a big black snake which they managed to kill. The bees and performed, and the patient is reported the snake were occupying the same tree, but no honey was found. Whether the bees had just recently taken possession of a new home, or the snake had eaten the honey, comb and all, is a question.-Western Press.

Berlin, Pa., July 20.—The Horse Owners' Association of Somerset County has been organized. The character and object of the Association will be to protect the animals from the gang of horse thieves that have been operating in this county. If a horse should be stolen, telephone messages will go to all parts of the county, and every effort imaginable will! be made to run down the thief and capture him at any Boynton-Grammar, Annie McKin- price. More than that, the Horse Owners' Association of Somerset County will become the prosecutor, when the case finally reaches trial. As it now stands, each horse owner must care for his equine the best he can, and he is himself obliged to run down the criminal and conduct the prosecution against him, if found. Very often a horse is taken from a poor man, who does not have sufficient of this world's goods to conduct the prosecution.
