

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain in congestion, pain in blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effects are charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure. If it's painful periods, it's blood pressure. If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood pressure—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Brush your finger, and doesn't it get red, and all, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain always. It's simply Common Sense. We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

DR. S. D. BLAND
Of Brewton, Ga., writes: "I had been a sufferer for a number of years with Lumbago and Rheumatism in my arms and legs, and tried all the remedies that I could gather from medical works, and also consulted with a number of the best physicians, but found nothing that gave the relief I obtained from 'DROPS.' I shall prescribe it in my practice for rheumatism and kindred diseases."

DR. C. L. GATES
Hancock, Minn., writes: "A little girl here had such a weak back caused by Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble that she could not stand on her feet. AT END POINT LIGHT.

Caleb Long, keeper of End Point Light, and Burton Chandler, the new inspector, sat smoking their pipes while the brown mare frolicked near by.

"That critter seems as ef she'd got a soul—a heap sight better one than some folks I've known," Caleb said. "She knows the minute I put out that light. I hear her whinny, and by the time my foot's on the walk she's dancin' a horrippe."

"I notice she's a dancer. Who taught her?" the inspector asked.

"Now, you've got me! I'll be hanged if I know, and here's another trick of hers: 'Brownie, untie the gentleman's shoestrings.'"

Mr. Chandler wrinkled his brows in thought. "How long have you had Brownie?"

"Yes, I know, but," continued Chandler, "who sold you the horse?"

"Oh, I didn't make no trade for her," Caleb answered, shrewdly.

"I see you're afraid I've got my eye on her; mind you, I don't want to buy her!"

"I bet you couldn't!" Caleb answered. "Well, I'll tell you all I know about that animal. Brownie didn't come with her fam'bly tree about her neck—she drifted in with the tide. There'd been a stiff nor'easter blowin' for two days, but the mornin' I found her, or she me—which was it?—was as pretty a day as you ever saw. I took my glass, and was makin' observations, when about half a mile out I saw something! We waterdogs are ready for any cargo that drifts our way, but by Godfrey! I didn't expect such a craft. The cutest little popy ye ever set eyes on—and that's her. There must have been a wreck, for the next day some spars floated in, and one piece of timber had a D and a e—like as if 'twas the beginning and end of a word."

"A D' and an 'e,'" Chandler repeated. "Well, about the horse! You see I am a bit curious, for I only know of one that has a trick of unlacing shoes, and the odd part of this story is that I'll bet dollars to doughnuts that pony belonged to a friend of mine, a Miss Dressler."

"She's in Paris now, but four years ago was wrecked off this coast and everyone lost but herself and two of the crew, who died later. She was sixteen, then—her father was taking her to France to join her mother. I know this story by heart."

"A big cyclone struck the Daphne."

"Daphne! That's her," Captain Chandler exclaimed. "D and e!"

He was sent by the government to Paris. I was at a training school in the city, and both hailing from Yankeeland we naturally were good friends. She has often told me of her pet pony, who used to perform so many tricks. She has never ceased mourning for her."

"By George! It looks like it's her property. I don't want to keep anything that ain't mine. Hadn't you better send her some word?" Caleb asked. "Or, hain't you the address?"

"Yes, I'll cable just these words, 'Pony found here,' then date it, and we'll wait orders."

Caleb Long rubbed his eyes to see if it were no "make believe yarn," as he called it, and when a day later the inspector passed him a paper with the words, "Mother and I coming," Chandler said: "It looks, cap'n, as if you and I are to entertain some ladies; I'll go to my next station, and be back in a fortnight, and we'll have Brownie ready to welcome her mistress."

The captain puckered his lips as for a long whistle, and said: "I calculate you'll have to be on the reception committee with me. I'll send over for Aunt Mary, and she'll do the pretty. Lord, the light don't usually stand in need of women folks, but this is to be your party, and Brownie's, and it must be done accordin' to the compass."

It seemed very straight steering when a fortnight later the inspector arrived with two women, the younger as trig a bark as ever touched western shore, with cheeks as pink as a wild rose and hair that curled in the salt breeze. Caleb felt as if the wind was taken out of his sails when she sprang to his side. "May I call Frolic by my special whistle?" Caleb gave a gruff "Ay, ay." A shrill call like the sea-gull's broke the silence, and lo, the occupant of the Point stable rushed down to the water's edge, dancing like a veritable sprite.

"A straight case! She's yours all right," Caleb Long's voice sounded strangely muffled.

Burton Chandler said later in the day: "You've been a tip-top master of ceremonies to-day." Then, after a pause, he asked abruptly: "Is there a parson near?"

"H'm, I reck'n we can get hold of one! Go'n to be spilled?" Caleb asked. "I thought es much—didn't need no spy-glass to tell me who's goin' to have the knot tied, neither. We'll get the Rev. Mr. Twombly over before ye can say Jack Robinson!"

"That evening after the marriage certificate had been signed, Marie stole to Caleb's side and said: "I am sure if I took your Brownie away she would swim back to the light. It's always a good idea, you know, to stick to the point, and—"

Just then the inspector drew near, and giving his bride a resounding kiss, said: "We all see the point of your remark, and you can't say that I didn't keep to mine all right! You may have your turn, captain!"

Caleb took the rosy face in his hands and said: "A sailor's smack, hearty. Fair winds and a happy voyage to ye both!"

War on Catalogue Houses.

War has been declared on the great catalogue houses of Chicago and other cities by the 500,000 retail merchants of the west. The mammoth institutions, employing thousands of workers, doing their business entirely through the medium of their bulky catalogues, spending no money in the communities whence they derive annually millions of dollars of patronage, are forcing increasing numbers of home merchants to the wall, and, so their opponents say, are "making commercial graveyards of once prosperous towns." The Home Trade League of America, which has existed for several months in Chicago, largely as a publicity bureau, is shortly to incorporate and institute a more systematic and aggressive campaign against the catalogue houses through a board of 21 managers, with a vice president and an advisory committee of 10 members from each state. The backbone of the league is formed of commercial associations, national, state and local in character, in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan, Kansas and Minnesota.

The Eastern states should lose no time in falling into line and joining their brothers of the west in their war upon the catalogue houses. Besides associating themselves with an organization that has for its object the overthrow of such business institutions, they should profit by the lessons taught by these same catalogue houses as to the manner of securing trade. Advertising is the only agent used by those houses, and if the merchants of the country districts and smaller towns would use more printers' ink in describing their wares and giving prices, they would find that the battle would be of short duration. Give the buyer to understand that local dealers can meet catalogue house prices with a superior article, and the battle is won, says an exchange.

Getty is a banker, and was an applicant for Berkeley's place as commissioner. He is also chairman of the Lawrence county Republican committee. The examiners are paid a salary of $10 a day and are allowed their expenses.—Somerset Democrat.

The Black Bass Law.

Misinterpretation of the law in regard to the catching of black bass may cause trouble for careless fishermen. A section of the law provides that it is illegal to catch black bass under nine inches in length in any waters mentioned in the 1st section of this act. The first section of the act, however, refers only to lakes and bays, and the nine-inch limit applies to those waters only. The minimum size for other streams is the same as last year—seven inches. One section of the new law that it will be well for fishermen to keep in mind is section Eleven, which reads as follows: It shall be unlawful for any person to catch or kill more than ten black or yellow bass in one day. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall, on conviction, be subject to a fine of ten dollars for each fish so captured and killed over and above the amount therein named, or, in default of payment, be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of one day for each dollar of fine unpaid.
