

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Brights or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggists recommend and sell.

WITHOUT MERCY.

By Lucy Cope.

Way up on the Jungfrau, pearly in an early morning mist, they two were climbing, well ahead of the rest of the party. He had studied her face in the rosy light of the dawn; he looked deep into her eyes through the wondrous twilight of the Alps; he had laughed with her when a sudden shower sent the big drops rolling down her cheeks and converted her flying hair into moist curls; and always the face, the eyes, were beautiful to him beyond expression.

"They had reached a platform of ice on which they could stand securely and gaze down on the frozen grandeur beneath. He said suddenly: "Eleanor, I wonder—if you will let me tell you what has been in my heart for so long—that I love you, dear—if you knew how much!—and want you to be my wife."

With a long gaze he enveloped her form as she turned her head from him. There was a pause. He moved until he could see her, could see the fixed, thoughtful look in her eyes and determined line of her mouth.

"Tell me, Eleanor, if you love me."

"No," she said at last. "I fear I do not. Shall we go on?" She walked resolutely ahead while he followed, keeping carefully in the rear to hide from her his stricken face.

Perhaps she was careless, still too thoughtful to note the path; and he in the first pain of the hurt she had given him fell in the constant watchfulness he had exercised over her during all their mountain climbing. For suddenly she slipped over a ledge, clutching as she went at a sharply cleft rock. What she held to heavens knows, but her fall was stayed, momentarily.

Seeing her hang thus, with face pitifully upturned to his, the man's heart gave a sudden leap and he knelt at the edge of the cliff.

"Keep a firm grip, dear," he said, with great quietness. "I can save you." As he spoke he was unknitting the rope from his waist. "See, I will tie it around this rock of ice," chipping a cleft in the rock as he had seen the guide do. Then as the rope dangled beside her:

"Now, can you grab it?"

"Geoffrey, Geoffrey," she cried, with drawn lips, "I do love you—I do—oh, save me."

With illumined face he leaned still farther over.

"If you are afraid to trust it I will weigh it with my own body."

It was the work of a moment to fasten the loose end about his waist and to let himself over the edge, smiling encouragement into her eyes as he hung beside her in the void.

"Rest one hand on my shoulder—now, your foot here—now pull hard on the rope—careful, darling. Thank God, you are safe!"

"Just hand me my stock and I shall soon—"

But as she realized her deliverance, with a gasp of relief ending in a shriek she turned and sped away.

"Eleanor," he called faintly, as the last echo of her slipping flight reached his ear. He looked grimly at the rope by which he hung. How long would they hold, the knots he had tied so hurriedly with her imploring, agonized face to urge him on. He felt them slipping and closed his eyes with a shudder.

Two weeks later, Eleanor, whose nerves had regained their tone, received from her mother a letter on which the various postmarks showed how it had followed her from place to place.

"The young Earl of Hercomb, newly succeeded to the title, is travelling in Switzerland. He is your fate! Play your cards well, dear—he is worth the effort. His estates are vast and adjoin the Duke of Somerset's. I have given him a letter of introduction to your aunt, which he will probably present at Cannes some time around the 26th. And, my dear, he wants to meet you—I have stimulated his interest. Good-by, my little countess."

At Cannes, in the ballroom of the hotel, the girl's heart beat high when she saw her aunt approaching on the arm of a tall young Englishman. His head was spirited, his eyes blue and keen. She welcomed her fate.

Her brilliant beauty was well set off by art and perfect taste. "Sure conquest sparkled in her eyes."

"At last," he said.

And even then she became aware of another commanding form which towered above the earl by an inch or two. They stood shoulder to shoulder, and at the words of introduction on the earl's lips, "My brother," the other bowed low, regarding his full height to look her squarely in the eyes.

It was Geoffrey, who, as she last saw him, had hung doomed over the measureless abyss, of whose mangled, frozen corpse she had more than once had horrid vision.

Into Eleanor's face came an old, old look, the look of Becky Sharp, when in her mad successful career the moment arrived which forced from her lips the surrender—"I'm done for."

Alpine Statistics.

The Swiss-Alpine Club has just issued statistics of accidents which took place in the Alps last year. One hundred and seventy-two climbers perished, but considering that the tourists numbered 150,000 the death roll is regarded as low.

SHORT CUT TO PITTSBURG.

Pennsylvania Railroad Reported to be Planning Improvement.

A news dispatch sent out from Hagerstown, Maryland, says: It is reported here that the Pennsylvania railroad which some time ago became virtually the owner of the Cumberland Valley railroad, which extends from Winchester, Virginia, to Harrisburg, proposes a new short cut to Pittsburg, utilizing the Cumberland Valley railroad from Harrisburg to Newville, where this road turns to the south and follows the old South Penn route west. It is the general belief here that within the next twelve months the Cumberland Valley will be made a division of the Pennsylvania. The sale of the large Barker farm, at Newville, is said to have furnished a site for large car shops projected by the Pennsylvania Railroad.
