The Democracy's greatest regret is caused by the fact that the Ohio Republicans always do their scrapping between elections.

A CHICAGO man has gotten even with a music teacher, next door, by keeping ten cats. They are now having a regular cat and piano time of it.

The only colored member of the Georgia legislature has resigned. The fact is, a colored Georgian can have more fun growing watermelons than making laws.

The country's crop of oats is going to be the shortest of the lot, but the number of young men sowing the wild variety, is not likely to decrease on that account.

The Detroit Free Press wants to know what has become of the President's movement for an eight-hour day for wives. It is probably on the shelf, right alongside the movement for the simplification of our spelling.

A DES MOINES man, in order to procure money for his sick wife, pawned two gold teeth and his wooden leg, and the Harrisburg, Va., News thinks marriage is no failure under such circumstances. Still, when a man is driven to such extremes he can hardly regard it as a howling success.

The farmer bends the knee to none, and is less disturbed by the world-wide reign of graft and greed than any of his fellows. His hair may be bushy, his skin bronzed, but his eyes are clear, his digestion is like that of a three-year-old mule, his conscience is like the ether above his head, and his bank account as fat as his favorite shoat. May he live long and prosper, this son of the soil, who is the balance wheel of the universe, exclaims an exchange, but it is more than can be truthfully said of some farmers. For instance, the one who puts all his largest apples, potatoes and berries on top when marketing them, the one who works tallow into his lard, converts stale packed butter into rolls and sells it for fresh butter, and who resorts to all the petty, thievish tricks all too common among farmers. Great is the honorable farmer and his honorable occupation, but not all farmers are honest; not all are decent; not all are possessors of a clear conscience; not all of them are rich, and not all of them ought to be. Like all other classes, the farming class is made up of good, bad and indifferent people, and we do not believe in class worship, no matter of what calling, profession, art or avocation. True, we could not get along without the farmer, but wouldn't the farmer have a hades of a time getting along without the mechanic, the laborer and the numerous other fellows he needs so badly in his business? Many farmers all over this great land of ours are nearly out of business on account of scarcity of farm labor, and when it comes to singing the praises of the farmer, that underestimated and lowly individual who is usually underpaid and known as the farm hand, is, as a rule, forgotten. Many a wealthy farmer owes his prosperity and his fame to a good-natured, faithful, strong farm hand working for the meager wages of $15.00 to $20.00 per month, from sunrise until after dark.

Lovely Woman.
After man came woman, and she has been after him ever since. She has good faults, such as false complexion, etc., but she is a great deal better than her neighbor, and she knows it. She has been known to hold up a man—her weapon being a smile, until he has spent all his spare change for ice cream, candy, etc., then say, depart from me, I never knew you. She will accept all of a man's eight-dollar suppers, bouquets and devotions, and then run off and marry some other fellow, but for this we would forgive her a great deal. Eve was a woman, but we don't think she was a model wife. She couldn't go to church and come home and gossip about somebody's new spring bonnet or walking hat—this blessed privilege was denied her. After all, a woman is handy to have about the place to swear at when you happen to cut yourself with the razor and don't feel like blaming yourself, says an exchange.

THE CONVICT—HIS FAMILY—LAW.

It is urged that convicts must not be kept idle, that they must earn their living, that the people should not be taxed to feed and clothe an army of criminals, and so forth, and so forth.

Let us see how this works. The state arrests a young fellow, who, let us say, in a drunken quarrel has stabbed a companion. He is hurried away to prison. He is brought into court, tried and convicted. He is sent to prison for five years or for ten years, or for life. All the while a young wife and a half-dozen little children are left without their natural protector and support. They huddle in a corner of the court room. They hear the lawyers' yawp. They listen to the verdict. The case is closed. The young father is bundled off in one direction in chains. The young family is turned off in another in tears. The state takes the time, the earnings of the one to itself, leaving the other to starve. The mother dies of despair. The boys grow up thieves. The girls grow up harlots. The law is vindicated. The taxpayer is protected. The criminal classes are replenished. Is it not damnable? Does not the society which tolerates such monstrosities deserve all the evils it entails upon itself? The state has no right to take that man's labor from his wife and children and give them no equivalent. It should punish the guilty, not the innocent. Every dollar that is diverted in this way from the natural needs of the helpless to the uses of the public, is base blood money that should and does carry with it the curse of God.

THE FOREIGNERS.

Foreigners who come to this country pay no tax as long as they are not naturalized, but they are allowed in the meanwhile to enjoy our privileges the same as American citizens. Some of them are not satisfied with riding in the wagon, but they want to grab the lines and do the driving. The money they earn in crowding out American laborers they straightway send home to their native country, where a thousand dollars makes a rich man, while we pay the expenses when they are injured, take care of the inebriates, those who become insane, and spend millions of dollars annually in court trials and punishing the vicious whose unlawful deeds land them into the clutches of the law. There is an injustice done us somewhere, and the man who solves the riddle and is instrumental in correcting the wrong will be deserving of a seat among the immortal.—Ex.

WHEN HAZING BECOMES CRIME.

The Connellsville Courier voices this paper's sentiments exactly in the following editorial on the subject of hazing.

"The brutal sport of hazing is being frowned down in most American colleges, and with good reason. The perhaps fatal injury of a Bellevue boy at the Ohio State University is an example of the reason.

"It may be urged that his schoolmates did not intend him any bodily harm, but the circumstances would seem to disprove this assumption. The abduction and imprisonment in a barn would not in themselves indicate any purpose other than playful prankishness, but the brutal and murderous beating administered reveals a ruffianly character not in keeping with civilized and enlightened American sentiment, mindful of the rights of others and imbued with the spirit of common humanity.

"It rather breathes the devilishness of savagery, or the wanton cruelty of pitiless ferocity. There was nothing gallant about it. It was an act of cowardice, not of bravery; it was a Bowersy stunt, not a college joke; it was murderous, not merry; it was crime, not class combat.

"And as crime it should be punished. Even college lads, with their magnificent ideas of their own magnificent attainments and the shining excellence of their unique and exclusive adornment, are not, and should not be, immune to the law from whose coils even the gigantic octopuses of finance cannot escape."

AT ROCKWOOD.

Star Man Gets Acquainted with Editor Bach—Also Falls in with Colonel Ed. Werner—Stunts Performed with the Court House Anaconda.

Last Saturday evening we had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Prof. E. E. Bach, editor of the Somerset County Leader, published at Rockwood. We walked into his den at about 9.30 p. m., taking him by complete surprise, while he and the business manager, P. E. Weimer, were busy counting over about a bushel of money, all of which we suppose was taken in that day.

As soon as the two men looked up and saw an intruder standing before them at that hour of the night, they naturally took us for a robber, and at once Editor Bach grabbed all the money, which was only editorlike, and Weimer grabbed the office towel and was about to break it over our cranium.

Just as the blow from the rigid and dangerous weapon was about to descend, we disclosed our identity, stating that we, too, were engaged in the newspaper business, and consequently had more money of our own than we knew what to do with, and had no desire to rob a wealthy fellow editor. Then an introduction and a general hand-shaking followed, and we found both gentlemen very affable and agreeable.

After "cussing" and discussing various subjects for a time, we went out with the editor to hunt up "Urie" Werner, the ex-editor, who is still in the employ of the Leader, and whose valuable services as solicitor and printer cannot well be dispensed with, especially since Mr. Bach has recently hired two all-fired good looking girls to be drilled into the noble art of typesetting. "Urie" is just the fellow to have around when ladies are to be kept smiling, which is essential to lady compositors.

After visiting all the saloons and failing to find "Urie," we finally located him in a restaurant, where, true to his natural instincts, we found him gently crowding all manner of good things into his face. With his usual hospitality and generosity, he invited us to join him, but we had already filled up on eatables, etc., at Editor Bach's expense, hence had to decline the invitation. Later the three of us repaired to the front porch of Hotel Hentz, where yarns were exchanged until bed time.

The next morning THE STAR man went to Somerset and returned to Rockwood again on Monday morning, having the good fortune to fall in with our old friend Colonel Edward H. Werner, en route. Of course, after reaching Rockwood, the colonel went with us to the Leader office, and a few minutes later both of us went up street in company with Editor Bach. The colonel conducted us to a private room in which his court house anaconda is kept, and in a few minutes all were performing stunts with it. The anaconda, so the colonel informed us, was imported from the King's Gate, at Dublin, Ireland, and is said to be the only kind of serpent that good old Saint Patrick did not drive out of the Emerald Isle.

The court house anaconda is an agreeable kind of "varmint" if you know how to handle it. It is brown in color and looks very "stout," but is not regarded as dangerous. However, not being used to handling it, it got obstreperous for THE STAR man and blew froth all over him. Then Colonel Edward had to show us how to handle the darned anaconda. We didn't get bit by it, but no doubt would have if we had fooled with it long enough.

We quit in time, however, and will say in conclusion that if a fellow can't have a good time with the gentlemen mentioned, he can't have it with anybody.
