The Race Question in Cuba.

In the Hace Question in Cuba.

In fact, it may almost be said that in Cuba there is no race question. There is no sharp, forever fixed line of division between the white and the man of negro blood. A great and growing mass of intermediates, men of mixed blood that grade up from almost black to almost white, fill up that great vawning impassfill up that great, yawning, impass-able gulf which in America forever able gulf which in America forever separates the black man from the white. It is sure, besides, that the great bulk of the Cuban people view with satisfaction, not discouragement, the progressing absorption of the negro in the Cuban population and the whole country looks forward to the day when the black man shall have disappeared. Another century unmolested and Cubans would make themselves a completely homomake themselves a completely homo-geneous people of mixedblood. Will the canal Americanize Cuba and change her thought? The Cuban change her thought? The Cuban black man fears it. For this reason he stretches forth no hand of wel-come to America in Cuba at any time.-Army and Navy Life.

Did you ever notice how shyly the young pullet will go about looking for a secret place where she may stealthily deposit her precious eggs?

How very particular she is about it!

If there is an insufficient number of nests, or if they are unclean, or too much exposed she is likely, after some delay, to lay the egg on the floor and among the other hens, which may

The Care of Collies.

Here are a few words on the general care of a collie dog given by a writer in Recreation:

In all favorable weather wash the dog once a month and in summer once each week. Feed him twice daily of cooked food. Do not keep him too fat. Good muscular condition and a smart alert collie are not the result of too much feed. Once a week give him a teaspoonful of powdered sulphur in a pan with some milk. It keeps his blood in fine condition. Use a medicated animal soap when washing him.
Disinfect the kennel with crude carbolic acid once a month. In fall and winter, when washing is out of the question, owing to the unfavorable weather, dust him through all his dense coat with a tobacco dust powder. It is a fine method of keeping his skin clean and insects off after contact with other dogs. Have him clipped in summer, if convenient, and let him go on the vacation with you. He will love the water, and it will be a sin to leave him home.

"Once owner of a collie, always an owner," is an old but true saying. No circumstances will prevent the keeping of a collie after they have once won you. We know the truth of this in a dozen instances. They are the pride of every one who possesses them and will always be first in the heart of a strong man or woman who is fond Long Chicken Runs.

The following from the Farm Press ontains some very sound advice.

I never yet saw a chicken yard too ong, but I have seen a great many hat were too small. I never knew chickens to get sick and make trouble when they had plenty of room and plenty of green stuff. It costs some thing to fence a long run, but it pays
A yard twenty feet wide and two hundred yards long may be plowed and cultivated with horses. If a succession of green stuff is grown, starting in the spring and reseeding at different times during the summer, a yard like this will grow enough to almost feed thirty or forty laying hens. Such things as peas and oats may be planted very early in the spring and by having runs may be closed and different grains and vegetables may be planted in season.

A great deal of picking may be had from corn. They may eat off the young stalks and they may let some of them grow up, but in any case the chickens get the benefit. Rape is another good crop to grow. It may be planted almost any time between spring and early fall. Radishes, beets buckwheat, in fact, almost anything that grows on the farm, will come in all right in the chicken yard.

You may plant in rows and cultivate occasionally, you may sow broadcast. You may leave the chickens in the yard or turn them out until the stuff gets fairly started, according to circumstances. It makes but little dif-ference how you manage, so long as you fit enough ground and plant enough to keep the poultry busy.

I prefer a poultry yard in an orchard, preferably of small fruit trees such as plums, cherries, apricots, prunes and pears. The partial shade from the trees is beneficial to poultry. In this way you don't feel the expense of giv-ing a whole lot of ground to a poul-You can just run wire poul try yard. netting down the rows between trees and partition off a yard as wide or as narrow as you want it. The width makes but little difference; length is what you want so you can the horses in to do the work.

I have seen little yards that were supposed to be dug over frequently The digging gets done about once; no body has time after that for any such backaching job. The only way to hav a chicken yard cultivated is to do i by horsepower. You can't work cross ways in a narrow lot; you can't have a chicken yard very wide but you can have it the whole length of the or chard and it will pay to do it.

Accompanying these developments, however, has come an accentuation of the more confident feeling in general trade lines and in a few industries, further reinstatement of orders cancelled in a panicky way some time ago, a renewal of buying for quick shipment from jobbers, and, where the more seasonable weather has permitted, as in the northeast and south, some stimulation of the demand at retail for winter apparel and for holiday specialties. At best, however, trade, as a whole, is still very quiet and industrial activity is below the normal for this season of the year.

The Wild Turkey In Ohio.

The wild turkeys were once abundant in Ohio. They were residents in the large sense, but ranged freely and somewhat irregularly through a and somewhat irregularly through a considerable section in search of food. Stupid and unwary at first, they soon learned the ways of the white man, and became, years before their now practical extinction, the most cunning and vigilant of all wild birds. Indeed, to track a turkey in the woods, to learn his haunts, to come most him manyares or come. to come upon him unawares, or even care within rifle shot of him, were high accomplishments of woodcraft, to which only the elect might attain.
