BEDFORD INQUIRER AND CHRONICLE.

lieved from the Fauquier Co., (Va.,) jail on Christmas day, where he had been deained for debt, there being nothing left in the hands of the law to pay his jail expenses. He had been in prison ten years, and had money enough to pay his debr, but preferred imprisonment to poverty. His creditor died some years ago, but put a provision in his will appropriating a sufficient amount to keep him in limbo as long as he lived .---Somehow or other, this stipulation has given out, and Gregg becomes free again .---When he left the juil door he appeared to ! be perfectly bewildered, and did not know which way to travel.
