THE SUREST ROAD TO WEALTH IS THROUGH LIBERAL ADVERTISING

The Philadelphia Evening Star commenting on the reforms proposed by the Republicans who signed the Quay petition says: The Star commends these reform movements, and tendencies towards change as indicative of a better day, so far as they antagonize a wretched system. But let the war ever be against the system, nothing will be gained by Republican movements becoming kindergartens for budding Democrats. There is no real reform in a Republican mutiny which places such a man as Secretary Harity in a position where every Republican, however earnest and faithful in his service to the public, is sent to the guillotine. Governor Pattison, honest as he is, and who knew everything about the finances of Philadelphia, never knew that Bardeley had captured the state money until Mayor Stuart informed him. And yet Pattison had had three months' start of Stuart in his executive opportunities for finding out. The reason is obvious. The Governor, a reformer at the polls, an able Democratic politician in office, industriously manufacturing Presidential booms. Any premature interference with political finances in Philadelphia would have pressed heavily upon his friends, his business associates, perhaps his own bank. Wherein do we find the definite public gain from the creation of Pattison? And yet Pattison, of all the Democratic ducks ever hatched under a Republican hen, was the most promising. What an opportunity he had! What might he not have done for the state! What a royal endowment in the universal confidence of the people! But this representative, typical Governor, now that we have him in fruition—what is he? A Democratic aspirant for the Presidency; the veto power, patronage, executive influence and authority all concentrated upon the attainment of a supreme personal ambition. This outcome of one famous political boom for reform should make us chary in nourishing another."

The theory that the water which has invaded the Colorado desert comes from the Colorado River is losing supporters. It is the opinion of Superintendent Dubrow of the Salt Lake Works that the water comes from the Great Salt Lake in Utah, and this opinion is backed by the fact that the water came after the Colorado had ceased to rise, and also that the water is salt and contains salt water fish.

DARING ROBBERS.

PAUL SUMMA ROBBED BY DESPERATE MEN.

THEY BLEW A SAFE DOOR OFF

And Then Fired Seven Shots at Mr. Summa Who Attempted to Interfere With Them—A Daring Crime Enacted.

A daring burglary was perpetrated by desperate men in Paul Summa's house on South Main street at an early hour this morning.

At about two o'clock this morning Mr. Summa retired to his sleeping apartments after securing all the doors of his bar-room and dwelling apartments. About an hour later Mr. and Mrs. Summa were aroused from their slumber by the report of a smothered explosion, followed by the sound of a heavy weight falling upon the floor of one of the apartments below.

Mr. Summa sprang from his bed and opened the door between his bed-room and the hallway with the intention of descending to the floor below to ascertain the cause of the disturbance, but as he stepped from the room a voice at the bottom of the stairway warned him, "Don't you come down here, you ———, or I'll blow your ——— head off!"

Summa hurried back into his bed-room and at the same moment the party at the foot of the stairway commenced firing.

Seven revolver shots were fired in rapid succession. Six ploughed their way into the wall at the side of the stairway on which Mr. Summa's bed-room is located, tearing the paper and plastering. Another shot lodged in the ceiling of the stairway, just above where Mr. Summa stood when he was warned to retreat.

The desperate method of the burglars paralyzed Mr. Summa for the time and Mrs. Summa went into hysterics. But after the firing ceased boarders in the house descended the stairway to the dining-room on the first floor. The room was filled with powder smoke and dust. The burglars had disappeared.

When the smoke cleared away the large safe which was in the room was found standing about three feet from the wall against which it stood when Mr. Summa retired to his sleeping apartment. The door of the safe had been blown off and was lying on the floor and against the opposite wall. Papers and pieces of gold and silver that had been in the safe were strewn about the floor. And under the safe was found a bag and pocketbook containing $900 in paper, gold and silver, but $200 in cash and $967 worth of watches and other jewelry were missing.

An examination of the premises showed that the burglars had entered through a window of the kitchen at the rear of the dining-room. The window sash was removed after a part of the outer casing had been torn off. The burglars then drilled a hole through the top of the safe, poured in and ignited the powder and blew the door clean from its fastenings. It was a bungling job, such as would no doubt make professional safe burglars smile. A piece of tallow candle about an inch and a half long and a miner's hatchet and the bullets in the stairway were the only things the desperate men left behind.

The finding of the $900 is easily explained. When the safe was blown open the heavy charge scattered all the contents of the safe. The heavy bag and pocketbook dropped to the floor and the safe, by force of the concussion, shot forward and covered them, so that they escaped the notice of the burglars.

It is supposed that while the fallow stood at the bottom of the stairway threatening Summa and firing shots his companions were engaged in gathering the plunder and making their escape.

It is believed that three or more men were implicated in the daring business. One of Summa's boarders says he saw two running away from the house.

Whatever the number may have been, the indications are that the burglars were town parties, that they were well acquainted with the premises and kept a close watch upon Mr. Summa's movements.

Mr. Summa says that he could not recognize the features of the man who stood at the bottom of the stairway, as the light below was very dim; and he did not recognize the voice. He has no suspicion as to who the parties were.

On the night of Sunday, June 28th, an attempt was made to get into the house by forcing open the kitchen door, but the burglars were frightened off.

Mrs. Summa is prostrated by the shock she received.

MR. QUAY'S DENIAL.

The Pennsylvania Senator Replies to Several Charges.

PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—The Inquirer to-day publishes an interview with Senator Quay, in the course of which he characterizes the address recently issued by the Independents as false so far as it relates to him, and denies the truth of all the charges made in that document.

Regarding the charge that he interfered with the passage of the Ballot Reform and Sectional School bills, he says that on the contrary he favored those bills and had been interfering in legislation he should have supported them.

The attempt to connect him in any way with the Bardeley affair he regards as ridiculous. Bardeley, he says, was not nominated by the politicians, but was thrust forward as a representative of the business men.

In speaking of the coming campaign, he gives it as his opinion that the Democrats will attempt to nationalize the State election, and that they will try to drag the Bardeley business into politics and make an issue of it.

Quay Calls a Conference.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Senator Quay is at Brigantine Beach. He has summoned a number of his lieutenants in this city to meet him there the latter part of this week. They will leave here to-day.

MANY PEOPLE HOMELESS.

Great Distress at Baton Rouge on Account of the Cyclone.

BATON ROUGE, La., July 8.—The rain that came with the cyclone is still pouring down. There is in the whole country no gloomier city to-day than is Baton Rouge.

A pathway 200 yards wide, diagonally across the town, is littered with the wrecks of houses, etc., that were blown down. Many people are homeless, but are being cared for by the more fortunate neighbors.

John Foley, of St. Landry, died at an early hour, making the 11th victim. He had been horribly mangled. Two more of the injured convicts will probably die before sundown, and four others are in a critical condition. Dewitt, a convict, who is an ex-army surgeon, is doing noble work, not having left the wounded since the accident. The best of order prevails among the convicts.

The President's Crabbing Trip.

CAMP MAY, N. J., July 8.—The President and Mrs. Harrison and their guests went to Sewell's Point by train, where they embarked on the yacht Clover and started on a sailing and crabbing expedition. Both the President and Attorney-General Miller were very successful in catching crabs, and a basketful was secured and sent to the cottage for dinner. The President proved to be a good sailor.

Tragic Scene at a Funeral.

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN, Pa., July 8.—A tragic scene was witnessed in the Spring Garden Cemetery, near this borough. Thomas Spindler of Chicago was attending the funeral of his cousin, Mrs. Emma S. Maledors, whose remains were brought from Philadelphia, and while standing at the grave he suddenly threw up his arms and fell over. He was caught by his brother and assisted to a carriage, but died before he could be taken to his home. He was 27 years of age and unmarried.

Water Still Rising in the Desert Lake.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—The latest reports received from Salton Lake state that the water has risen two inches but that the salt works are still running and the measurements yesterday show only 23 inches in the deepest part. Nothing has been heard of the men sent out from Ogilby and great uneasiness is felt for their safety. A party will start tomorrow in search of them.

Cheese baked in their shells, with bread crumbs on top, are a tasty thing.

THE LISTENER.

DRIFTINGS CAUGHT BY THOSE WITH OPEN EARS.

WHAT PEOPLE THINK AND SAY.

The Listener's Notes of Current Comment Interestingly Collected—Readable and Pithy Paragraphs.

Suppose you own a home and lot in Shenandoah valued at $1,000, but which you can't sell without making some improvements, which, if made, would insure the sale of the property at $2,000 spot cash; wouldn't you be a stupid goose not to invest the $500 to make your property saleable, besides giving you a clear profit of $500 over and above your asking price? Of course you would, and you would feel like hiring some kind friend to kick you if you were foolish enough not to see the point and take advantage of it!

Well, this is just your position, to-day, Mr. Property-holder! You can't sell your property at any price you esteem fair, and besides the market is becoming steadily worse instead of better, but by investing a few hundred dollars in manufacturing enterprises, in connection with, say, one hundred of your neighbors, you could sell every foot of your property, at fifty per cent. more than present valuations, and in addition thereto you would have several hundred dollars worth of valuable stock in manufacturing enterprises which would earn you all the way from 10 to 20 per cent. per annum. Can't you see this? Every one who has investigated the matter will concede that our deductions are correct and in proof will point to every wide-awake and prosperous town in the Union.

Now, suppose you own business property on Main or Jardin, Chestnut or Market, streets, your interests could be more generously served than if your real estate were located in the residence portion of the town, by an influx of new manufacturing establishments or the enlargement of home enterprises now in existence; in fact, the property you own to-day in the business portion of the town could be made three or four times more valuable than at present if the borough of Shenandoah were growing as it might, and would if you and your fellow citizens were far-sighted and energetically planting your money in solid manufacturing enterprises. You could invest to-day in a shoe factory to advantage; the experiment was tried at Jamestown, N. Y., years ago and proved a pronounced financial success.

There is no better location in the Union for a factory of this sort than right here in Shenandoah, and the establishment of such an industry, on an enlarged plan, would be sure to attract other kindred industries, and thus the town could begin to grow and would continue on in the same direction so long as there was organization and effort behind the movement. You can't eat your gingerbread and keep it, neither can you reap without first having sown. To raise a crop you must invest in seed, and to increase the value of your real estate you will have to invest in something that will grow and create a demand for what you have to rent or sell. It is the law of supply and demand; some may manage to harvest a crop on the strength of their neighbor's seed, but that sort of policy never yet scored a success and never will.

One set of men will not tax themselves to enrich their neighbors, and hence comes the suggestion of the HERALD that the property owners of Shenandoah form an organization pledged to contribute, say, fifty thousand dollars for investment in manufacturing enterprises, to be assessed at the rate of say 10 per cent. every three months. Such an arrangement would not burden any one, on the contrary it would put a new face on business affairs in the town; would galvanize the real estate market into active, energetic life; would give employment to every idle hand in Shenandoah; would make every farmer in the section happy with pressing demands for his products and would, in fact, so completely revolutionize this whole section for

You better that the oldest inhabitants would feel to recognize in it the just-making-a-living belt of the present day and generation.

A Sad Story.

About a year ago Isaac English moved his family from this town to Harrisburg. He had accumulated a little money during his residence here, both Mr. and Mrs. English having worked hard and having, by economy, laid away a little for a rainy day. They also owned some property in Girardville and with the proceeds of its sale and their savings they commenced the erection of a nice house in Harrisburg. Last week the building, which was not quite finished, was totally destroyed by fire and with it went all the hard-earned savings. Mr. and Mrs. English were heart-broken by the loss. They were highly respected while residents of this town and they have the sympathy of all their old neighbors and friends.
