OLD HEROES IN LINE

Forty Thousand Boys in Blue Parading To-Day.

AN IMMENSE CROWD IN DETROIT.

The Silver Ensignment Worthy to be Called a Perfect Success.

Forty Little Girls Feat the Grizzled Veterans with Flowers—Ora Company Carry the Old Springfield Markets They Used in the War—The Colored Line a Puzzling Question This Year.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 4.—The veterans are here and we are theirs in a sentiment that is echoed throughout this city.

The principal streets are not only blazing with the national colors in every conceivable design and degree of profusion on either side, but immense flags and shields almost obscure the slight in gazing up the centre, owing to "cross-stringing."

Not only are business places universally decorated, but private residences on the main streets are literally hid from view under the mass of flags and bunting.

There are four handsome triumphal arches spanning important streets, which are models of taste and elegance. One, spanning Fort street, near Griswold, is surmounted by an elaborate Florida display of tropical plants, and during the parade today 44 beautiful girls filled it and pelted the vets with roses.

The Great Parade. The parade opened this morning with 40,000 men in line—all old veterans, not a single military company turning out.

Every street within three blocks of the line of march was closed by the proclamation of the mayor, and intrusion was further guarded against by the roping off of the section and the stationing of a strong armed guard at each street intersection.

One company, that from Union City, Mich., appeared in heavy marching array, with the old Springfield muskets and the same accoutrements as they wore when they marched out of Detroit in the stormy days when men were needed and Michigan did its duty.

Music Everywhere. With its streets full of marching men, with every house quivering a veteran, with the strains of music floating on every breath of the wind and with the sound of the drum and the shrill note of the fife in the air, Detroit is experiencing a time the like of which it has never seen before and will never see again.

Thanks for the perfect arrangements there is room for all with plenty to eat and nothing lacking to make the silver ensignment worthy of the name of perfect success.

The "Color" Question. Everybody is so busy here that the question of drawing the color line in the G. A. R. is practically receiving no attention.

Not only are the new-papers occupied with other matters that the subject is dwarfed, but until the posts all get in and settled and the parade is over, they have little thought for the matter that the fight is a losing issue.

The Southern men seem nearly all believe that the negro has got to go into a department by himself, but to what extent they are organized cannot at present be determined.

This will be in the nature of a surprise for that gentleman, who has had no intimation that he has been considered as a possible candidate for gubernatorial honors.
