OUR citizens will want some other kind of reform next spring. The kind they got last February wasn't the kind they were banking after.

STATE CAMPAIGN

THE LEADERS PLEASED WITH THE OUTLOOK.

ALL ARE ENLISTED FOR THE FIGHT

The Old Soldiers Very Active—Mages, Hastings, Reeder, Cooper and Others Respond—Republican Enthusiasm.

[Special Correspondence.]
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.

With the formal opening of both state committee headquarters in this city last week, the campaign may be fairly said to be well under way. Of course, until about Oct. 1, the party managers will devote their attention mainly to organization. It is apparent that the Republicans are far in advance of the Democrats in this preliminary work. While Chairman Kerr has but a single typewriter and a couple of assistants engaged at his South Penn square headquarters, Republican Field Marshal Watters finds plenty to do for a large corps of clerks and typewriters at the old stand, in the Continental hotel. Every mail brings in a big batch of letters from every county in the state. This correspondence for the last few days has been simply immense. It has been commented upon as significant that there should be such a widespread interest taken in the canvass so early. Many of the letters are in reply to communications sent out by Chairman Watters as soon as he took charge. He at once put himself in touch with the organization in every county in the state. The county chairmen have already discovered that whenever he wants any information he will not hesitate to ask for it, however unimportant it may seem to be. Some of them also realize the fact that if he don't get exactly what he wants in their reply he will persist until he does get it.

It was generally conceded on his election to the chairmanship that the lieutenant governor represented no faction or particular element in the party. This fact has been fully demonstrated since he took charge of the campaign. The headquarters have been visited by Republicans of prominence and of every shade of opinion. He has solicited the opinions of all as to the situation in their respective counties and sought their advice as to the conduct of the campaign. Chris Mages, General Hastings and ex-Chairman Cooper were among the first to call. The chairman had a long, private and evidently satisfactory talk with each.

Magie assured him that Allegheny county was good for one of the old time majorities. He said that war veterans and business men of Pittsburgh fully appreciated the nomination of Captain Morrison for state treasurer, and that an organization would be formed in western Pennsylvania which would bring out a larger Republican vote than has ever been polled in an off year. Since Magie was here the chairman has received letters which show that one of strongest committees ever gotten together in "e" state of Allegheny" has been organized, and the work of the campaign has begun in earnest.

General Hastings has placed himself at the service of the state committee, and will promptly respond when called upon to take the stand. He has been doing good work already. His ringing speech at the Lehigh county meeting, at Allentown, recently, struck the keynote for an uncompromising and aggressive campaign.

Ex-Governor Beaver dropped in on Chairman Watters a night or two ago, on his way to a Grand Army reunion. BEAVER WAKES ELOQUENT.

"I tell you, chairman," said the one-legged veteran, enthusiastically, as he pounded the floor with one of his crutches, "I tell you, the old boys in blue are all up in arms for this ticket of ours. I find it wherever I go. It is a soldier ticket, top and bottom, and the brave veterans of Pennsylvania are going to support it loyally. A braver or better cavalryman than General Gregg never straddled a horse. Captain Morrison, as an infantryman, has a record for patriotic service of which any man might well be proud. You would be amazed at the number of Democrats among the veterans who are going to vote for both Gregg and Morrison."

Ex-Chairman Cessna, of Bedford, who managed the state campaign when Garfield ran for president; General William Lilly, of Carbon; ex-Lieutenant Governor Davies, of Bradford; General Reeder, of Northampton; Major E. K. Martin, of Lancaster; ex-Senator Hood, of Indiana; State Committeeman McCurrell, of Dauphin; ex-Chairman Phillips, of Schuylkill; Representative Frunt, of Mercer; H. J. Culbertson, of Middle; Everett Warren, of Lackawanna, and scores of other active men from different counties have also given the chairman their opinions on the situation and advice as to the proper method on which to conduct the canvass. Thus taken into the confidence of the head of the organization. Republicans generally are showing an unusual interest in the campaign. GREGG AND MORRISON HAPPY.

Chairman Watters has had two conferences with Candidates Gregg and Morrison. They seem to be very much pleased with the outlook in the state. General Gregg and Captain Morrison have had an opportunity to judge from personal observation as to the feeling in a number of the counties. The general was delighted with the ovation tendered him at the granger's picnic at Williams' Grove. He delivered a taking speech to the farmers, and made a very favorable impression. At Grand Army reunions in the northwestern counties and at several points nearer his home, at which he came in contact with former members of his cavalry command, he was most enthusiastically received.

Captain Morrison has scarcely had a day to himself since he was nominated. He is in great demand. Invitations to Grand Army and regimental reunions are pouring in on him from every quarter. He got one last week from an old comrade, who was a member of his own company during the war, asking him to meet him at a soldiers' gathering in Ohio. What was no doubt a very happy occasion for the brave little captain was the reunion of the survivors of the famous old "Kornbluffs" recently. This is the regiment in which young Morrison enlisted after leaving his father's farm in Mercer county at the very breaking out of the rebellion. He got a great ovation from his old companions. He was met at the station by a committee and escorted in a carriage to the home of a prominent citizen, where he was royally entertained. Subsequently, at Mount Carmel, Northumberland county, he met many of the veterans of eastern Pennsylvania, and received many encouraging words and assurances of support from Democrats and Republicans alike, as he did at Coatesville, Chester county, last week.

A very gratifying incident noted at the Republican headquarters last week was the calling on Chairman Watters of both of the prominent candidates for the presidency of the State League of Republican clubs, Dalzell, of Pittsburgh, and Robinson, of Media, were there on the same day, though they did not meet. Both assured the state chairman that whatever would be the result of the Scranton convention, they and their friends would be found working loyally and earnestly in the interest of Gregg and Morrison until the polls close on election day. Robinson and Dalzell both promise to take the stump for the state ticket. Though their respective supporters waged a lively battle in the league, Robinson and Dalzell have been personally friendly since they were college mates. A promised picture of harmony in their appearance on the same platform eloquently championing the cause of the Republican party and its nominees.

Chairman Watters and Kerr get along very nicely together. They have had a couple of conferences in arranging for a uniform plan for printing the state tickets. Watters first called on Kerr and then the Democratic chairman visited the Republican field marshal, and they finally parted on very friendly terms.

POLITICAL.

Quiet, very quiet, is the political situation in this county. Clubs will be trump at Scranton this week.

Ex-Congressman Scott is dead. He was the wealthiest man in the state.

McGinnis is making a thorough good canvass and as he makes himself known secures new friends.

Next year there will be lots of good offices to go around and it won't be the sluggish who'll get there.

A. M. High, of Reading, is the first delegate elected to the next National Republican convention.

Just what the Press and Journal will do after the Scranton convention is over is being debated.

Whether it be Robinson or Dalzell the Republican ticket will receive the united support of the party.

O, yes, Robinson will be snowed under, but the figures in the Press does not look that way.

A member of the Executive Committee wanted to be elected a delegate to the League Convention, but he wasn't. Now the club does not legally exist according to his opinion. Had he been elected, he would have thought otherwise.

Shenandoah has a number of Blowhards in both political parties who never contribute a cent towards the expenses of the party but who claim all the emoluments. They also want to dictate which way the cat is to jump and will not vote their ticket if their wishes are not gratified. Out with these barnacles; they are no use to anybody.

STOLEN SALT CELLARS.

A Peculiar Mania for Stealing Among Hungarians.

Last night a Hungarian was served with oysters in Schoener's oyster saloon, on West Centre street. As he was about to retire he stole all the salt-cellars on the tables and dropped them into his pockets. Mr. Schoener detected him in the act and called in Policeman Davies, who arrested the Hun and took him to the lockup. This morning the case was settled by the Hun paying damages and costs. Mr. Schoener said this morning, "It seems the Polish and Hungarian people have a mania for stealing salt-cellars. They steal them continually and it has cost no small sum to replace them since I have been in business. I have been told that it is not the value of the cellars that tempts them to steal, but they take a great delight in having the fancy tops for the tin coffee bottles they take with them into the mines. I have determined to make some of them pay for my losses."

The Band Contest.

In reference to the recent hint of the Republicans for a contest between the Grant band, of town, and the Third Brigade, of Pottsville, it may be stated that all reports of challenges from the Grant band have emanated from outside circles and the members of the band are in no way responsible for them. The Grant band has a large circle of admirers who are enthusiastic in their estimation of the organization, and they have frequently expressed a desire for a contest between their favorite and the Pottsville's pet. Since the Republicans had taken the initiative, one of these admirers has authorized the HERALD to state that the Grant band can receive backing for from $100 to $500 for a contest with the Third Brigade band, upon the conditions, however, that the contest shall not take place in Pottsville and the money contested for shall not go to the benefit of any Pottsville institution if the Grant band wins. Of course, the Third Brigade band will be at liberty to do as it may wish with the money, should it win.

A BRILLIANT LECTURER.

Hon. J. M. Langston Visits the Coal Region.

A HERALD correspondent had the honor of making the acquaintance of Hon. J. M. Langston of Petersburg, Va., on Saturday. Mr. Langston, who is an ex-member of Congress, and ex-minister to Hayti under Hayes, Garfield, Arthur and Cleveland, was on his way to A. Island, where he lectured Saturday on "Abraham Lincoln." He is a highly educated gentleman of polished manner and genial disposition, and in conversation he is brilliant. Speaking of the ballot system in Virginia he said no Republican can be elected in that state under the present law. There must first be a revolution in the Democratic party and that can only be brought about by following ex-Senator Mahone's advice, i. e. that the Republicans abstain from nominating candidates for any office this year. Mr. Langston's recital of his experience in Hayti are of the most interesting character. In speaking of Ohio, where he was educated and where he resided for thirty years and is known by almost every public man, Mr. Langston says McKinley is making a glorious fight. Defeating every possible doubt, he says, McKinley's majority will not be less than thirty thousand. Twenty thousand, say I, ten thousand will be satisfactory. Foraker claims forty thousand, while Secretary Foster goes as high as fifty. Mr. Langston has had considerable experience in public affairs and is well known and highly esteemed by the leading Republicans of the country. He is level-headed and far-seeing and when speaking of the greatness of this country he becomes enthusiastic. As a lecturer he is a gentleman of commanding presence and excellent delivery. He has become one of the leading lights of the platform and seems to be in demand everywhere. He has not only a full command of the English language, but also speaks French fluently.
