Some of the Men Ruined by "The Mansfield."

SHE TRIED TO ENSNARE GOULD.

But the Financier Was Too Wary, as Was Also Tweed.

Intigues and Amours of the Woman Who Had Millions at Her Feet— Fate of Two Her Victims— Her Relations With Fisk and Stokes— Her Episodes in Her Career— Her Letter to Cornelius Vanderbilt— She Was a Double.

New York, Oct. 19.—The recent marriage of "Josie" Mansfield, perhaps the most wonderful achievement of her most wonderful career, brings to light the fact that New Yorkers and the world at large have really learned comparatively little of this notorious woman. Her relations with Fisk and Stokes are all that she is remembered by and yet these were only episodes in her life.

How many, even old New Yorkers, know that the woman lived a Bohemian existence in a humble way in Fourth street? Yet she was a finer looking woman while on Fourth street than she was later in her mansion on Twenty-third street. Among her early or Fourth street lovers was one "Al" Wallace.

He was a dapper individual of medium height, with a carefully curled mustache and a pair of expressive eyes. Rather good-looking, he was a "popular" man in his day of property and enjoyed a widely miscellaneous acquaintance.

He "knew everybody" and had a "pull" in politics. Tweed used him in several transactions and he was a client of "the Slaves of the Ring." As a two-player he for years "lucked the tiger" and struck out ahead, and had a quiet way about him that rendered him a favorite with women and especially with the "bliss," who fell "head over ears" in love with him—for a while.

She dated on Wallace for some months and kept a boy in her neighborhood busy carrying messages to and fro. Wallace did not care especially for the woman at first, but she gradually fascinated him till he fell, like Fisk later, into a captivity to the alien will. But by this time she had fixed her eyes on a more powerful and more brilliant man.

Wallace had not his face. He had really turned to love the woman and he never fully recovered from her description. He lost his heart as well as his heart. He never deserted him. He became naturally at play, blinged some political jobs to him by his wife, incurred the displeasure of "the boss" and was deserted by his old troubles. He took to drink and soon became a total physical and mental wreck and finally drifted over to the "island," and one night, when Josie was with Fisk at an Academy hall, "Al" Wallace died in the poor-house.

A similar fate befell another of Josie's lovers. This was a young broker, well known down town as "Matt" Bowen, a little fellow full of dash and vim, with curly hair and a pleasing "off-hand" manner. The Mansfield took one of her "curries" for him. She was then in the height of her prosperity, the acknowledged mistress of Fisk and the friend of Stokes. And yet she was willing to "throw over" both of these men for Matt Bowen. But Bowen had sense enough to see that it would never do to antagonize openly the woman's two potential admirers, so he contented himself with being in the background, the favored third. He carried favor with Fisk and for a space all was well, but the human being is impatient and the man's suspicions were excited. He set detectives to work and soon learned that he had kept cause for his suspicions. Fisk kept his temper and bided his time, meanwhile proceeding systematically towards his revenge.

He bought out Bowen and pretended to have taken a fancy to him. The unsuspecting Bowen, flattered at the preference of the great financier, lived in a fool's paradise while. At Fisk's suggestion he had borrowed all the money he could and speculated every share of stock and invested every cent he had in the world in a certain speculation which Fisk assured him would make him and his friends' fortune. Then Fisk put on the thumbscrews. The speculation proved disastrous and Matt Bowen was ruined. He took to drink, then to the island—like his predecessor, Wallace. But even before he died in disgrace, destitution and despair, "Josie" had already forgotten him.

But one thing she never forgot—her own self-interest. The real cleverness of Jay Gould was never shown more conspicuously than in his determined resistance to the persistent allurements of Fisk's mistress. He carefully avoided her so far as he could without positively offending Fisk. Her charms were wasted upon Gould.

Once when Fisk was called away from New York to Boston on business connected with the steamboats, Mansfield took the opportunity to importune Gould to dine with her.

To her surprise and delight Gould accepted her pressing invitation. Every preparation was made for that dinner and Josie arrayed herself in the most bewitching of toilets and probably saw herself in her fond imaginations the mistress of Fisk's master.

But about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the day appointed for the dinner, a special messenger came from Jay Gould, bearing his regrets that business of the utmost importance prevented him from keeping his engagement.

From that day she detested the very name of Gould and endeavored to sow dissension between him and his colleague, Fisk.

"The Mansfield" likewise endeavored to impress herself favorably on Tweed. One bitterly cold morning Mansfield, in her seakins cap, rode in her well-appointed sleigh from Fisk's house, down Twenty-third street to Fifth avenue, and then by the avenue to the residence of the Tammany Boss, where she was received by the Boss himself.

Her errand at this time was doubly congenial. She wished, on her own account, to meet Tweed, and on Fisk's account, to sound Tweed on a matter concerning which Fisk had recently differed with Jay Gould, a difference which she herself had done her utmost to widen. But Tweed, spite of his susceptibility, had a wise head on his shoulders and, despite the woman's fascina-

Mrs. Ann Woods Took Stock in a Clairvoyant's Game, and Now Mourns an Imaginary Fortune, Besides $500 and a Gold Watch—She Had the "Deeds" in Her Possession—A Slick Swindler.

WILMINGTON, Pa., Oct. 19.—Mrs. Ann R. Woods, a respectable widow of this town, recently astonished her friends by telling them that she had come into a fortune of over $240,000 in a very unexpected and romantic manner.

She has been considered a woman of more than ordinary good sense, and when she told the story of her good luck the neighbors believed her, especially as she exhibited documents which appeared to sustain her statement.

Mrs. Woods' story was that William H. Jasper of Lewiston, Idaho, was her benefactor. Years ago, she said, before her marriage to Woods, Jasper had been her sweetheart.

When she became a widow he renewed his attentions, sent her handsome presents, came East to see her and then capped the climax by sending his attorney here with deeds and checks purporting to convey to Mrs. Woods real estate and cash to the amount of $240,000.

It has now been discovered that Mrs. Woods never got a cent of the big fortune, and never will. There is not an atom of truth in it all from start to finish. And yet, Mrs. Woods did not like the idea of being the victim of one of the sharpest confidence games that has been played in Washington County in years.

It appears that she corresponded with a clairvoyant, and who promised her a large fortune from "some one" within a specified time. She began by sending $10 to a designated place, when her correspondent promised she should receive $30 in return.

This went all right, for the correspondence resulted in bringing in return for letters sent in various directions, numerous sums of money and various pieces of jewelry. Finally a man purporting to be the attorney for William H. Jasper came to town with the checks, deeds, etc., and after leaving the papers with Mrs. Woods and receiving generous treatment at her hands, succeeded in getting $200 and a gold watch from her.

She had been so successful with the clairvoyant and had so often had money sent her and had seen the promised fortune materializing so much quicker than she expected that she was an easy victim when the demand was made upon her bank account, which by the way, was a very comfortable one.

Mrs. Woods is unable to give a very correct description of the fellow who called upon her, but she says he took the deeds back to Lewiston for record. When she deposited the checks and drafts the bank reported that they were worthless.

NEW ELECTRIC DEVICE.
Incorporation of a Company to Use One of Edison's Inventions.

THURTON, N. J., Oct. 19.—Articles of incorporation have been recorded in the office of the Secretary of State by the Edison Illuminating and Power Company with a capital of $500,000. It is understood that the capital will be increased to $1,000,000 at an early date.

The ostensible object of the new corporation is the introduction of an electric light system in the city of Newark. According to the prospectus it is proposed to erect an entirely new plant to conduct electricity underground and to furnish incandescent lights and power for small manufacturing plants. It is believed, however, that the company is formed to eventually put on the market a system of electric motion for street and other railroad cars without trolley, invented by Thomas A. Edison.

Gov. Hill Off for Atlanta.
ALBANY, Oct. 19.—Gov. Hill left this city at 2:38 p. m. yesterday for Atlanta, Ga., where he delivers an address at the unveiling of the monument to Henry W. Grady, on Wednesday of this week. McCall, Superintendent of State Prisons; Austin F. Lathrop, Gen. Ferdinand F. Earl, Gen. Henry W. Slocum, and Dr. Henry Pierce.

Shot in a Quarrel.
New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18.—Frank Butler and William Jones were shot early yesterday morning near a notorious resort in the town of Hamden, by Elmer A. Thomas, who has recently been employed as a liquor spotter. Thomas claimed that he was set upon by two of the men, and that in self-defense he shot them. Butler's wounds are of a serious nature, but Jones is only slightly wounded. Thomas is under arrest.

As she enters womanhood, every young girl needs the wisest care. Troubles beginning then may make her whole life miserable.

But the troubles that are to be feared have a positive remedy. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription builds up and strengthens the system, and regulates and promotes every proper function. It's a generous, supporting tonic, and a quieting, soothing nerve—a legitimate medicine, not a beverage, free from alcohol and injurious drugs. It corrects and cures, safely and surely, all those delicate derangements, weaknesses, and diseases peculiar to the sex.

A remedy that does cure is one that can be guaranteed. That's what the proprietors of "Favorite Prescription" think. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case for which it's recommended, they'll refund the money. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms.

Decide for yourself whether something else sold by the dealer, is likely to be "just as good" for you to buy.
