What News Gatherers Take a Moment to Tell About.

No dust now.
October is going.
Sweet cider plenty.
Mufflers will soon appear.
A few roses are yet blooming.
Long winter nights are coming.
New buildings are still being projected.

Our dry goods stores are doing a large trade just now.
There are nearly 40,000 stitches in the masculine shirt.

If the women of to-day powdered their hair it would be easier to bang.

Carpenters and contractors are pushing building to roof before bad weather sets in.

The cars of the Shamokin electric railway are now heated by electricity.

Anthony Petrosavage has skipped away from Shamokin with his boarding master's wife and $100.

Chief Burgess Rees, of Shamokin, was almost run down by a Reading freight train Thursday morning while trying to step from one track to another, in order to avoid a passenger train.

The Keystone colliery near Ashland which has been idle for the past two weeks owing to the closing of part of the hoisting slope will be ready to resume operations again on Monday if the work of repair continues to progress as rapidly as at the present time. The fall was a very serious one and it has required considerable hard work to get the slope in order again.

Photographing Her Ma.
He is a young photographer, just starting in business and love. The other afternoon his girl's mother called for a sitting. He desired to make a most favorable impression upon that portion of her mind which could appreciate photography, and so he became a trifle nervous in the work. But he got his fixed finally, with her eyes fixed glassily on a certain object, as is the custom; then he drew the cloth, took out his watch and counted off thirty seconds, restored the cloth and drew out the case. "Gracious!" he unintentionally ejaculated, "I forgot to put in the plate." The old lady had to sit again, and she prepared for the ordeal, but with confidence in the operator considerably abated. He was more nervous now than before, and it was some few minutes before he had arranged to suit the focus. Then the cloth was again removed, the watch again pulled out. He counted off the thirty seconds, removed the cloth and drew out the case. "Great heavens!" he groaned in a frightened voice, "I forgot to pull out the slide!" The prospective mother-in-law sprang to her feet, snatched up her hat and shawl, and pausing long enough to inquire if he was drunk, shot out of the door, leaving the pallid faced artist grasping a chair for support.

Managing a Bull.
A Brookfield man writes for the best way to manage a bull. If our Brookfield friend has got a bull on his premises, and the bull is well, he doesn't want to manage it. All he has got to do is to get a few things hastily together, mortgage his place and steer straight for the west. He might as well try to ward off a streak of lightning with a fifty cent paint brush as to manage a bull.

Truth in a Nutshell.
It has been satisfactorily demonstrated that when a man steps on a bar of soap which has been left on the top step it will start down stairs with him, and, though having much the best start, will yet be overtaken and passed by him before it gets half way down. This sounds almost like an eastern allegory; but every married man knows it is true. J. M. BAILEY.

ANTIQUE can be tolerated in almost any thing but hats. If the head is out of date the rest of the body is pretty sure to follow suit. Nobody but a millionaire or a genius can afford to wear ancient headgear, and even they take a good many chances when they do it. It will cost you no more to be up with the times than it will to be half a mile behind them. Everything about our $1.50 hat is hand some but the price, and $1.50 for such a hat can scarcely be called anything but a ridiculously low figure. The same can be said of our 25c neckwear. Our line of gent's furnishing goods is the lowest priced in the market.
