A Wretched Custom.

Come, now, what infernal barbarity is this, leaving a clothesline out after dark! A great deal of funny comment has been made upon the custom by thoughtless people, but it is a most serious matter, and it is high time the tomfoolery was abolished. We are just as ready as anybody to see the funny side of a thing, but we have ceased to observe anything amusing in being unexpectedly saved across the neck or rasped across the face by a clothesline. It is time there was a legislative enactment to either hang clotheslines sixty feet above the earth or make leaving them out after nightfall a state prison offense. It is a most incomprehensible fact that a clothesline is always hung across the garden path.

If the yard was ten miles square and a path two feet wide crept along close to the fence, and the woman had but eight feet of line, she would manage to cover the path. Whether this is because she is perverse or cannot help it we do not know. We only know that it is so, and that it is an appalling evil. No home circle is safe where this custom prevails. It matters not how good natured a man is, it matters not how carefully he has been educated, it matters not how lofty and noble are his aspirations, the moment a clothesline catches him under the chin, especially if he has a pan of ashes in his arms, that moment he sinks with awful velocity to the level of a brute, and proceeds to act out the conditions thereof at once. In its proper place a clothesline is a valuable companion, but across a path after dark it is simply a brutalizing force.

The Hen.

The quintessence of the omnivorous is supposed to be imaged in the hog; but a hog is a Peabody among animals alongside of a hen. Hens are by nature monopolists. When the subject of victuals is mentioned they are evidently listening. Throw a handful of corn into a ten acre lot and every hen in the inclosure will get a dab at it. The last hen on the spot may not secure more than two kernels, but nothing in the hen's appearance will indicate that. It will step around with as much precision and gratitude as any in the flock, and wear the most pensive smile you ever saw. A hen will not eat everything it sees, but it will try to, and there isn't one of them on the face of this earth but that can tell you the taste of everything it has seen within the radius of a half mile of its house. It is only when a man has kicked at a hen and missed it that he begins to understand how thoroughly hollow and deceitful this world is, and it is a marvelous fact in connection with this that he will miss the hen if he does kick at it, and misses it if he don't.

Home, Sweet Home.

At a recent political caucus in Danbury one of the members was on the floor lining out a bold, aggressive policy for the campaign, when a little boy pulled him by the coat and said in quite audible tones: "Ma says that if you don't hurry home with them prunes she'll lock the door and you'll have to sleep in the street." "Gentlemen," said the orator, picking up his hat, "I'll just step around among the people to feel the public pulse, and will meet you on the gory field of battle." Then he hurried home with the prunes. J. M. BAILEY

ANTHROPOMY can be tolerated in almost any thing but hats. If the head is out of date the rest of the body is pretty sure to follow suit. Nobody but a millinaire or a genius can afford to wear ancient headgear, and even they take a good many chances when they do it. It will cost you no more to be up with the times than it will to be half a mile behind them. Everything about our $1.50 hat is handsome but the price, and $1.50 for such a hat can scarcely be called anything but a ridiculously low figure. The same can be said of our $25 neckwear. Our line of gent's furnishing goods is the lowest priced in the market.
