Rabbits are said to be plentiful out in the country.

Rough on Pottsville.

The Trustees of the Miners' Hospital have just issued a book of the rules and regulations of that institution. The Trustees should, one would think, have given Haslam printers a chance to do the work. They did not even ask estimates but gave it to a Pottsville printing concern. If it was something that couldn't be made equally as well in town then it would be a different matter. Perhaps they were right, however, for nothing quite as bad has been produced in this town in years.—Harrison Sentinel.

TIM HOPKINS' APPEALS.

He Alleges that Mrs. Seales' signature was procured by fraud.

SALMON, Mass., Nov. 3.—Timothy Hopkins and Mary K. Hopkins have filed an appeal from the decision following the will of Mary E. S. Seales. The reasons given are:

First—Because the document was not duly attested.

Second—Because at the time of the execution of said document, said Mary E. S. Seales had not sufficient testamentary capacity.

Third—Because the signature of said Mary E. Seales to said document was procured by undue influence and fraud of said Edward F. Seales and others.

MORE CONVICTS RELEASED.

Oliver Springs Taken and the Stockades Burned—The Authorities Helpless.

KNOXVILLE, Nov. 3.—At 12:45 o'clock yesterday morning the guard of the convict stockade at the Big Mountain mine, five miles north of Oliver Springs, heard a knocking and threatening voices at a door at the southeastern end of the fortification. At 1 o'clock 165 murderers, thieves and highwaymen were flying over the mountains, guided by the great blazing fire of the wooden fort. Thus the miners fulfilled their threat of five months ago.

The last convict has left the Walden's Ridge mining region. The stockades are dismantled or burned, and more than 450 desperados roam the mountains and valleys of Northeastern Tennessee. Through the acts of these miners violating the law when the law refused to aid them, the government and the people of Tennessee find themselves faced by a complicated and perilous situation. Gov. Buchanan has confessed that he does not know what to do, and for once men of all parties are in sympathy.

The situation in this. An armed and organized body of men has marched unopposed through a considerable part of the State, has demanded and received the surrender of the State's property, has released the State's prisoners—convicts of the worst stripe—yet it is impossible to pursue or face this small army of revolutionists, because this army melts away as completely as if it never existed when it has struck a blow, and then reassembles silently, ready to strike the next blow.

It is fully armed and organized, perhaps the best equipped corps of sharpshooters ever got together; yet the names and homes and identity of the leaders and privates are unknown. The whole incident is unique, even in the history of labor agitations. It was set on foot by workmen for the lives of themselves, the living of their families, and this phase of the affair makes the other side of a question which at first seems to illustrate only their recklessness in freeing criminals.

The Governor's offer of rewards is well enough, people beyond this district are saying, but the Governor will never get any results from that, and it does seem impossible that any arrests will be made in that way. It is thought that the Governor has hired detectives from New York and Chicago to come down and ferret out the leaders of the mob, but if they are arrested no one will now doubt that the mountaineers will take revenge.
