THE BUREAU DRAWER

BELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS OF THE DANBURY NEWS MAN.

What's the Use of Telling a Man About Anything, Especially When His Wife Doesn't Know Anything About 117-Mr. Bolcomb's Experience.

Copyrighted by Lee & Snepard, Boston, and pulsished by special arrangement with them.) The man who will invent a bureau drawer which will move out and in without a hitch will not only secure a fortune, but will attain to an eminence in history not second to the greatest warriors. There is nothing, perhaps salways excepting a stovepipe, that will which will not shut. It is a deceptive article. It will start off all right, then it pances at one end while the other awings in as far as it can. It is the customer of the construction so examperate a man as a bureau drawer How the Theory Was Tested by a Young drawer by so doing, he will confer a favor by sending his sources office. We have seen men do this several times, and then run from the other side of the room and jump with both feet against the obstinate end. This dobsn't appear to answer the purpose any better but it is very satisfying. Mrs. Holcomb was trying to shut a bureau drawer Saturday morning, but it was an abortive effort. Finally she burst into tears. Then Mr Holcomb told her to stand aside and see him do it.

'You see," observed Mr Holcomb with quiet dignity, "that the drawer is all awry. That's what makes it stick. Now anybody but a woman would see at once that to move a drawer standing in that position would be impossible. now bring out this other end even with the other, so; then I take hold of both knobs and with an equal pressure from each mand the drawer moves easily in.

The dreadful thing moved readily forward for a distance of nearly two inches. then it stopped abruptly.

"Ah!" observed Mrs. Holcomb, begin-uing to look happy again.

Mr. Holcomb very properly made no response to this ungenerous expression; but he gently worked each and of the drawer to and fro, but without success.

Then he pulled the drawer all the way out, adjusted it properly and started it carefully back. It moved as if it was on oiled wheels. Mr. Holcomb smiled. Then it stopped. Mr. Holcomb looked solemn. "Perhaps you ain't got the ends ad-justed," suggested the unhappy Mrs.

Mr. Holcomb made no reply. Were it not for an increased flush in his face, it might have been doubted if be heard the remark at all. He pushed harder at the drawer than was apparent to her, but it didn't move. He tried to bring it back again, but it would not come.

"Are you sure you have got everything out of here you want?" he finally asked. with a desperate effort to appear com-

'Oh! that's what you are stopping for, is it? But you needn't, I have got what i wanted, you can shut it right up." Then she smiled a very wicked smile

He grew redder in the face, and set his teeth firmly together, and put all his strength to the obdurate drawer, while a hard look gleamed in his eye. But it did not move. He pushed harder.

'Ooh, ooh!" he grouned.

"I'm afraid you haven't got the ends aljusted," she mallulously suggested. A scowl settled on his face, while ha

"I'd like to know what in thunder you've been doing to this drawer, Jane Holcomb?" he jerked out.

'I know better," he asserted. "Well, know what you please, for all care," she sympathizingly retorted. The cords swelled up on his neck and the corners of his mouth grew white.

'I'll sout that drawer or I'll know the eason of it!" he shouted: and he jumped up and gave it a passionnite kick.

'Oh, my!' she'exclaimed. He dropped on his knees again and grabbed hold of the knobs and awayed and pashed at them with all his might. But it didn't move.

So he put it to the test after dis robing himself on Saturday night. He bent over and pounded away at himself, and all the time made a noise with his mouth, like the hiss of escaping steam. This noise attracted the attention of one of the boarders, and he told the landlady that there must be a fire in that room because he could hear it six, and could hear an alfired snapping and popping going on in there.

The landlady didn't pance to argue. She caught up a pail and plunged for the place at once. The boarder followed with a gigantic clothes brush. Both of them precipitated themselves into the room together. The advent was so sudden that the boarder who was warming himself had no chance to dodge. And there was too much momentum to the landlady and the other boarder to permit them to recover themselves in time So there was a collision. The landlady saw it coming and instinctively held the pail in front of her. But the disciple of Hall didn't see it, as his back was to the door and his head nearly to the floor, and before he could took up on hearing the door fly open the visitors were on him, and the contents of the pail over him, and the three, with pail and clothes brush, came down is a crash together. How the landlady extricated herself and got out of that room as quick as she did will always remain a mystery to the two men who stood there and giared at each other for some fifteen

You can always tell a boy whose mother cuts bis hair. Not because the edges of it look as if it had been chewed off by an absentminded horse, but you tell it by the way he stops on the street and wriggles his shoulders. When a fond mother has to cut her boy's hair, she is careful to guard against any aunovance and muss by laying a sheet on the curpet. It has never yet occurred to her to sit over a bare floor and put the sheet around his neck. Then she draws the front hair over his eyes, and leaves it there while she cuts that which is at the back. The hair which lies over his eyes appears to be surcharged with electric needles, and that which is silently dropping down under his shirtband appears to be on fire. She has un consciously continued to push his head forward until his nose presses his breast, and is too busily engaged to notice the snuffling sound that is becoming alarm ingly frequent.

A PECULIAR STOVEPIPE

für. Cobleigh Did It All by Himself and There Wasn's a Hitch in the Proceedings, but It Came Near Being Fatal.

(Convenient by Lee & Shepard, Boston, and published by elected arrangement with them.)
The Cobleighs put up the sitting room stove Thursday. Mr. Cobleigh had been dreading the thing for a month. He wanted to hire a regularly built stove erector to do the job, but work has been source at his shop and he felt that he scarce at his shop and he felt that he could not afford to hire.
