The plans of the insurgents are not yet fully understood, but it is said they will lose no time in attacking the towns of Yugarson, Santa Victoria and Porto Alegre, which remain true to the Dictator. Their object seems to be to gain possession of these places before the arrival of the gunboats, monitors and transports which Fonseca has sent to Rio Grands do Sul to quell the insurrection.

Rio Grande do Sul is the stronghold of the adherents of Gaspar Silveira Mar-tins, former President of that State, who was exiled at the time of the dethronement of Dom Pedro, and who was afterward permitted to return to Brazil to "his beloved son Thomas."

Monaghan had a son by his first wife, who was generally known as William, and who went West a great many years ago, where he settled in business. Mon-aghan, after the death of his first wife, lived with a woman of the name of Ann Murphy, by whom he had a son who was christened Thomas.

When the will was submitted for pro-bate the Western son came East and entered a claim, alleging that he had been christened Thomas, but had subsequent-christened Thomas, but had subsequent-ly changed his name to William. He declared that it was the testator's ob-ject to make him his heir. Suit was accordingly brought before Surrogate Ransom.

The robbery was one of the most claver of recent years. The train had been out of the Junction

The train had been ent of the Junction (twenty-three miles south of this place) about half a mile, when the freman, Edward Averill, who was putting some coal into the furnace, was startled to hear a noise behind him. He turned around and found two heavily masked men clambering over the engine tender.

Both levelled their double barrelled muskets at the fireman and engineer,

"Bill" McKay, with the injunction:
"Don't move at inch till we tell you to or we will blow the tops of your heads

Engineer McKay was directed to run the train to within a point about one mile from Western Union Junction. Here the engineer was commanded to step.

The door of the express car, which was the car immediately to the rear of the tender, is made of thick, stout wood and
